Historical Sketch

The United States Geological Survey is a scientific agency of the United States Government in the Department of the Interior that researches biology, geography, geology, and hydrology. The USGS began a topographic mapping program in 1884 in which they began printing topographic quadrangle maps until 1992, and then printed revision maps until 2006. They began publishing a new set of topographic maps as pdf documents in 2009 known as “US Topo,” and then in 2011 they began the digitization of over 178,000 historical US topographic print maps. Information about the US Topo and Historical Topographic Maps, as well as information on how to access free digital versions of these maps can be found on the USGS website at, <https://nationalmap.gov/historical/>.

The majority of the maps in this collection are from the 1:24,000 scale or 7.5-minute map series. These are the best known USGS topographic maps and were primarily published between 1947 and 1992. This collection also contains some maps in the 1:50,000 scale or 15-minute map series and some county maps in the 1:100,000 scale. The maps in this collection show elevation, hydrography, geographic place names, and various other features.

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains 510 maps. 388 of these maps were laminated sometime before being donated to the Missouri Valley department. The non-laminated maps were foldered, while the laminated maps were not. All maps from this collection were numbered individually on the back-right side corner. The maps are located in a map cabinet and are arranged by laminated maps and foldered maps and thereunder alphabetically.

Series 1: Unfoldered and Laminated Maps, 1945-2004

This series consists of USGS maps that were laminated sometime prior to donation to the library. They have been numbered and left loose in map drawers.

Series 2: Foldered Maps, 1945-2004

This series consists of USGS maps that were not laminated. They have been numbered and foldered and are located in a map drawer.
