

Advertising Card Collection

Missouri Valley Special Collections has over 2,000 nineteenth-century advertising cards, many from Kansas City companies. Also included are 11 scrapbooks containing, in addition to advertising cards, calling cards, greeting cards, and other ephemera.

Descriptive Summary

Creator: Unknown
Title: Advertising card collection
Dates: circa 1860-1905
Size: 11 boxes
Location: SC3

Administrative Information

Restriction on access: Unrestricted access.

Additional physical form available: Approximately 650 cards and one complete scrapbook have been digitized.

Acquisition information: Three of the original nine scrapbooks were a gift from N. Clyde Degginger, a long-time resident of Kansas City. It is also possible some of cards came from Mrs. Sam Ray. All were once part of the music and art department of the Library. In 2007 two additional scrapbooks were donated by Rollin Boyd.

Citation note: Advertising card collection (SC3), Missouri Valley Special Collections, Kansas City Pubic Library, Kansas City, Missouri.

Collection Description

Historical note

Trade cards, one of the more picturesque collections in the Missouri Valley Room, provide not only a rich resource for researching the history of printing, advertising, medicine, fashions, late 19th century culture, etc., but also Kansas City companies. The cards reached their height of popularity in the 1880s and 1890s.

In the early 1800s, lithography was introduced. Although the printing process of engraving continued, the technology of lithography caused the ubiquitous trade card to develop rapidly. Later in the century with the innovation of chromolithography, Louis Prang, who had developed the "idea of mass-producing small cards that could be adapted to the needs of individual advertisers at very low cost," began producing brilliantly colored cards. These were quickly embraced by businesses to advertise their products or services.

From the serious to the humorous, the scenic to portraits of well-known figures, the advertising cards charm and captivate. Many times the picture on the front has no relation to the product being advertised. The cards became not only popular with advertisers, but the general American public who began collecting and pasting them in scrapbooks. In fact, many were printed in sets that were to be bought and placed in hardcover albums produced specifically for that purpose.

Technological changes in printing propelled their popularity, and it was technological changes in printing—the mass production of magazines—that caused their demise. But the American public still collects them. Their charming and endearing quality accompanied by still-brilliant colors appeals to collectors.

Scope and content note

The Missouri Valley Special Collections of Kansas City Public Library has over 2,000 individual advertising cards as well as 11 scrapbooks. The collection had been minimally processed in 1990. In 2005 processing was completed and an application for a grant to digitize the Kansas City cards was submitted. Cards from Kansas City were separated and categorized and arranged according to type of business or product being advertised. The other cards were divided by state, either Kansas or Missouri, and then the remaining into general categories. Company addresses were transcribed according to their appearance on the card. If the address was not on the card, city directories were consulted. Those addresses were placed in brackets followed by the year of the city directory, i.e. (1897 CD). The additional information provided beneath the address applies to the publishing of the card, i.e. company or number.
