Behind the Scenes

It is now intermission between the acts of a play in the Central High School Auditorium. The orchestra begins to play, and the audience anxiously waits for the next act. But behind the scenes it is different. The minute the curtain drops, the stage crew flies into action. Scenery and stage furniture vanish and in their stead stands new scenery and new furniture. All this the stage crew accomplishes within the sixty seconds or so that the curtain is down.

Thirty-five plays in forty weeks! This signifies to most people approximately thirty-five hours of genuine pleasure. But to the stage crew it represents thirty-five times thirty-five hours of hard work, setting up and tearing down scenery, keeping the lighting system in order and seeing that things in general run smoothly behind the scenes. Quite a large job for so small a crew, you say; but they do the work thoroughly, with little or no appreciation from the greater part of the benefited people.

The stage crew will most appreciate the new curtain that the senior class presents to the school. How many times have they taken the blame for ruining a marvelous climax with a "stalled" curtain? The new curtain relieves the work of the stage crew even as much as it relieves the eyes of the audience.

Boys' Debate

The experience of 1917 has been repeated. Again much to our sorrow Central has been made to realize "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip."

For the first time Central had debate classes, as a result of which debate enthusiasm was aroused early in the year. The victories won by the boys' teams may be directly traced to the thorough training received in these classes and to the proficient coaching of Mr. Gutekunst, assisted by Miss Boehmer, the girls' coach.

The question debated was: "Resolved, That the Federal Government should establish a permanent policy of price control of the so-called necessities of life—constitutionality waived."

Our affirmative team debated against Manual at Westport. They based their case on the theory that there was need of some regulation, and that their proposed plan would be practicable. Richard Hubbard, the first speaker, pictured for the audience the unsettled condition of the business world. Clinton Paddock set forth the proposed plan of control and proved that such a plan was beneficial. Milford Zimmerman, in a convincing speech, proved moreover that such a plan was practicable. Manual, assuming that government control was unnecessary, was unable to convince the judges. The decision was 3 to 2 for Central.

The negative team, debating at Northeast against Westport, assumed that proper functioning of the law of supply and demand was sufficient. The first speaker, Warren Hoagland, showed logically that price control would be an unwarranted experiment, Randall Creel, after convincing the audience that the plan would be unsafe, pleaded with them to avoid the resulting evil conditions of such a policy. Hall DeWeese conclusively proved that any plan of price control would be absolutely impracticable in actual operation. Although Westport presented good argument, Central destroyed their contentions and secured a 3 to 2 decision. The careful and effective work of the two alternates, Isadore Kaufman and Paul McGinnis, played no small part in gaining these victories for Central.

In the very midst of Central's celebration came the news that Northeast also had won both debates. The following Monday the two schools debated off the tie; that is, they attempted to, but at the close of the evening Central had won three debates, with a total score of 10, while Northeast had won three debates with a total score of 9. At the next meeting of the Board of Education, a toss-up placed the cup at Northeast.

The end of the debating season had not arrived, however. The Chamber of Commerce invited a Central team, comprising Creel, Zimmerman, DeWeese and Hubbard, to meet a Northeast team in a no-decision debate, for instructive purposes. Here the Central team made an especially fine showing. They felt partly compensated for fate's trick in refusing them the cup for Central.

The Girls' Debate

America, the beacon light of the world today, is confronted with many vital and absorbing subjects. Great questions are continually coming forth for the people of the United States to solve. Political, social, and economic problems are arising almost daily. Probably one of the most important of these now before the land that is called "The Melting-Pot" is immigration. In the girls' debates this year, which were held on Thursday, March 21, the question discussed was one of national importance, namely: Resolved, That the Federal Government should prohibit further Japanese immigration into the United States.

Central's affirmative team, consisting of Elizabeth Endres, Alesba Munro, Edith Tarbet, and Pauline Brannock, the alternate, met the Manual negative at Westport. Manual's principal contention was based on the virtues of the Japanese. Central's first speaker, Betty Endres, was particularly effective and forceful in proving that the Japanese present not only an Americanization problem, but primarily a problem of race incompatibility. Edith Tarbet followed with the point that these problems are of national importance; and, incidentally, displayed her thorough knowledge of the question at hand. Alesba Munro concluded the affirmative's contentions by proving in a persuasive and convincing manner that absolute prohibition of further Japanese immigration is the only plan whereby these problems could be solved. The same order of speakers was followed in rebuttal. The interest of the audience was held throughout the entire debate; and when the decision was placed with the judges, one might justly have called it a draw. But fate favored Manual by giving the negative a four-to-one victory.

At Northeast, Central's negative debate team, consisting of Louise Carr, Helen Fling, Helen Huling, and Flora Sweet, the alternate, contested with Westport's affirmative. Before the debate started, the Northeast orchestra, by several splendid pieces, prolonged the agony through which the debaters were passing. Helen Huling, Central's first speaker, opened the discussion of the negative side of the question in a masterly fashion by establishing the point that exclusion is dangerous. Helen Fling followed, proving in a very convincing manner the prohibition of immigration to be unnecessary. The case was ably summed up by Louise Carr, who showed that such exclusion is unwarranted. The order in rebuttal was reversed, Central's case being concluded by Helen Huling.

The debate was intensely interesting throughout, and it was an extremely close contest. The deciding votes cast by the judges came as follows: Affirmative, negative, affirmative, affirmative, affirmative. It was afterward said that several of the votes were cast upon an exceedingly narrow margin of points.

Surely the school cannot praise too highly the work done by Miss Boehmer, the coach. The untiring efforts of Miss Boehmer, ably assisted by Mr. Gutekunst, furnished the girls an excellent training.

Although Central did lose, there is no reason in this wide world for thinking that we cannot win next year. Let's show the other high schools next year, girls, what Central can do!

“Strongheart”

Another annual play passed into the history of Central High School last November. It is now only a fond and pleasant memory; nevertheless, it will be long before those who watched it will forget the fascination of the comedy drama, “Strongheart,” directed by Miss Epton. The play was the most pretentious production ever attempted in Central. It required a very large cast and elaborate staging. For the first time it was necessary to give three successive performances. Much credit is due Miss Epton for her skillful direction of such a production.

The plot of the play centers around the activities of Soangataha, the son of an Indian chief, who has won the hearts of the students at Columbia University. He is affectionately called Strongheart by his classmates, and he displays his manly character by sacrificing his glory and risking his reputation for the honor of the football team. When he falls in love with the sister of his best friend, Frank Nelson, his classmates turn against him and tell him that he is not one of them; that he must stand apart because he is an Indian. In a very dramatic climax he sacrifices his love for his people, the Indians.

In order to produce the play three nights, Miss Epton chose four students for the two leading parts, Strongheart and Dorothy Nelson. On the first night Van Fleming and Sarah Gilday played the leads, while on the second night Bill Brown and Marjory Dooley carried away the honors. The acting of all four was so good that it was extremely hard to select an all-star pair to play the following evening. After much deliberation, however, Bill Brown and Sarah Gilday were chosen.

Supporting the leads was a picked cast, in which there were several important roles. Bunk Simpson, as Billy, caused the audience plenty of laughter, while Harry Ferguson, as Dick, portrayed the pathos in his character to perfection. Kenneth Dubach, as Frank, captain of the football team, characterized his part with ability on a par with Bunk and Harry. As the ingenue, Maude Smith caused many a fluttering of masculine hearts and accomplished her mission in sweeping Billy off his feet. Needless to say, her work was enthusiastically accepted. Cecil Kenworthy enabled us to see a typical college villain in a most interesting manner. Central can well be proud of the cast, from the leads on down, as each did his bit in contributing to the crowning success of this year's play.

Review of Football

That 1920 Football Team—who will ever forget it or fail to be thrilled when he thinks about it? Such a powerful, hard-hitting aggregation it was that stamps it as one of the best elevens ever turned out in a Kansas City high school. When Coach Louis Menze, or just "Coach" as he is more generally known, sent out his call for men early in September, he was indeed fortunate in having such a large squad from which to pick a team. Some fifty men turned out, including nine letter men from last year's team and several promising players from out-of-town schools, and our last year's freshman team. This wealth of material, along with a coach that knew the game through and through, proved to be the combination for Central's Championship Football team.

The first game on the schedule was with Manual, who had beaten our last year's team 6 to 0. The fellows avenged this defeat by trouncing the Manualites 23 to 7 in a game featured by many brilliant plays. Manual's only score came early in the first quarter as a result of a Central fumble, and it looked bad for the Blue and White. But the Central machine began to work, and when the game was over a drop-kick by Fowler had been registered and the ball had crossed the line for three touchdowns.

Our next opponent was Northeast. Both teams had beaten Liberty by practically the same score, so an interesting battle was foreseen, with Northeast having the edge. But the whole team was working well, the individual stars being hard to pick; and Northeast fell before the Central attack, 7 to 35.

Westport was the next victim. Central continued her winning streak by defeating the husky Westporters in a game which virtually copped the championship for the Blue and White. Although out-played in straight football, Central out-passed her opponent and thereby gained a 14 to 7 victory.

Again we met the enemy and they were ours. Central for the second time defeated the Manual warriors by the decisive score of 35 to 0. The light, scrappy Manual team put up a hard fight, but could not withstand the onslaught of the Central backs who pierced the line almost at will, five touchdowns being made.

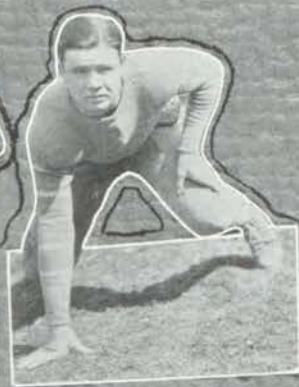

The fifth game found the unconquered Central eleven and the much vanquished Northeast battling to a scoreless tie, on a field deluged with mud and water. It was water, water everywhere, raining the entire game, turning the field into a sea of mud.

The final game proved to be the best of the season, for Central clearly showed that she was the best team in the league by downing the Westport eleven, 17 to 7. The Blue and White gained a place kick by reason of a fair catch and two touchdowns, in the final quarter.

In addition to an undefeated first team, Central possessed a second team that tied for the "scrub" championship. Second team letters were awarded to the following: Captain Cornish, Townsend, Heidelberger, Kenworthy, Bacchus, Ragland, Gangwer, Cantrall, Porter, Rhoades, Sparks, Shelton, Thornsberry Adams and Abernethy.

Review of Basket Ball

"Fate," it seems, had decreed that Central was not to win a basketball game this year; so again we stand humbly looking on while the Northeast five proudly continues its march. But let it not be said that the Central players gave up without a fight. From the moment practice began until the last whistle blew, each player was out fighting and giving the best that he had for his school.

It was no pleasant task that fell to Coach Menze of rounding out an efficient basketball team from green material. But the squad was soon picked and to Eaton "Tin" Adams fell the task of leading the Central five. Other members of the squad were: Savage, Simpson, Fowler and Hook, forwards; Bacchus, center; Wilson, Blackmore, guards; besides Cantrall, Patton, Burton and Richards, from the Freshman team. On December 16 the team went to Liberty and succeeded in downing the High School there, 46 to 14, Bacchus and Wilson playing the stellar roles. The following week the boys toured to Warrensburg, where they met defeat at the hands of the Training School there. Then came the interscholastic games, and from then on the Central five seemed to be jinxed.

The six games were all lost, but the fighting spirit was not dampened in any way by defeat. The last game proved to be the most interesting, for the Blue and White quintet almost upset the dope and gave Westport a real battle. A few minutes before the final whistle, Westport was leading 23 to 22, but another goal gave the Blue and Gold a 3-point lead which they held until the end of the game—a dramatic ending for such a disheartening season. Those who won the "C" were Captain Adams, Simpson, Savage, Bacchus, Wilson and Fowler.

The second team games proved to be better for Central than the first team, for the "scrub" championship was captured with four games won and one lost. Second team letters were awarded to Halpin, Hook, Blackmore, Cantrall, Patton, Burton and Richards. Frank Savage, forward on this year's team, has been elected to captain the Blue and White quintet for next year, and with three letter men back in addition to second team players and a corking good freshman team, the outlook for next year is exceedingly bright.

Review of Track

Central can indeed feel proud of her 1921 Track Team. The season started exceptionally well, for at the annual K. C. A. C. indoor meet at Convention Hall, Central carried away the honors with 21 points scored to her nearest opponent's 14. Studies proved to be the downfall of Reggy Gunter, our captain, as they do to many an athlete, and Gail Thornsberry, star sprint man, was elected to lead the 1921 Track Team. The return to Central of Ray Hutcherson, after a year's absence, was a great bolster to the team, and with the addition of several fellows from out-of-town schools and the freshman squad of last year Coach Menze had a formidable track team to enter in the K. C. A. C. meet.

In the 50-yard dash Hutcherson won first place and Levy fourth, starting the meet off properly with six points for the Blue and White. Not to be content with winning one race, Hutcherson came back and placed third in the 440, but inasmuch as the first two men were from a Kansas High School, his third counted 5 points in the high school tally. Moulder of Manual ran a great race in the 880, winning it with little difficulty; Keys and Liter taking third and fifth place respectively. The C. & D. relay team, composed of Quinn, Weinburg, Culp and Crouch, placed second, and the big A. & B. team with Levy, Thornsberry, Piehler and Hicks, was also nosed out by the Westport quartet. The final standing was Central 21, Manual 14, Westport 12, and Northeast 4.

By reason of her winning the high school trophy in the K. C. A. C. meet, Central was "doped" to win the annual M. U.-K. U. But upsets occurred and the Blue and White gave way to Westport by a ten-point margin.

The only event which Central won was the A. & B. relay. The team was the same with the exception of Baltis, and the fellows carried away the race by a substantial margin. The C. & D. relay team, with Quinn and Weinberg unable to run, again took second place for three points. In the 50-yard dash Hutcherson and Levy placed second and fourth, while Keys earned two points for Central by finishing third in the half-mile, Moulder of Manual breaking the high school record.

In the time between the M. U.-K. U. and the Quadrangular, efforts were made to get every boy out for track. An inter-society meet was held to discover if possible any new material. The annual Inter-class meet resulted in the Juniors carrying off the honors.

At this date the invitation meet at Columbia is not far off and the Quad can be seen in the distance. Details of the latter cannot be determined at this writing, but all predictions are that Central, with her score of fast track men, will win the Quadrangular for the second time.

Review of Tennis

Although tennis is somewhat of a minor sport at Central, and perhaps does not receive the credit it rightly deserves, nevertheless the fellows who make the team are always out to win for the Blue and White. Quite a number entered the school tournament, which finally narrowed down to Baum and Dubach in the singles and Dubach and Morris vs. Hausmann and Baum in the doubles. Dubach won the singles and the Morris and Dubach combination successfully eliminated Hausmann and Baum. With the results of the school tournament a tennis team was picked to represent Central in the Inter-scholastic Matches.

With colors flying, Central went through the first two rounds of the doubles without a scare. In the finals between Central and Westport, Morris and Dubach met Wornall and Pilley, defeating them two out of three sets: 5-7, 10-8, 6-3. Both Baum and Dubach entered the singles, Dubach getting as far as the semi-finals, where he was beaten by Rogers of Northeast, who later won the singles championship. In the mixed doubles Central was represented by Herbert Peterson and Marie Pendergast.

A spring tournament was held and carried off with great enthusiasm, and in all probability Central may next year be honored with a championship tennis team.

Summary of Girls' Athletics

Under the instruction of Miss Bahe, Miss Roof and Miss Harden, we have accomplished much in our athletic activities this year. Our girl athletes are more enthused than ever and a natural outcome is: interest—work—success.

In tennis, Katherine Cannon won the girls' championship from Alfreda Noble of Westport, 6-0, 6-3. Each class boasted of a strong hockey team, but the Seniors were victors by one point.

After holding the championship its sophomore and junior years, the team of twenty-one was forced to forfeit it to the Juniors by a twenty-two to twenty-four score. The game ended in a tie. The first team to make two points over the other was to be the champion team. The Juniors proved to be the most accurate goal shooters. The Senior second team won the second team championship. On the all-star basket-ball squad the Seniors landed five places, while the Juniors filled the other three. Maxine Ferring, Edna Sullivan and Ruth Bucannon are forwards; Grace McCormack, Annabel Wing, centers; Mildred Frances, Fleeta Jagodnigg, and Isobel Morrison, guards.

The swimming inter-class contest has not been held, but Central's most accomplished mermaids are Louise Meckus, Dorothy Evans, Marie Flynn, Maxine Ferring and Grace McCormack. The swimming manager, Grace McCormack, won the life-saving contest at the Y. W. C. A., for which she received a loving-cup. She was victor over seven of one hundred and fifty-four women life savers of the Red Cross in Kansas City.

The highest athletic honors were awarded to Marie Flynn, Isobel Morrison, Marie Pendergast, Grace McCormack, Fleeta Jagodnigg, Alma Shipley, Maxine Ferring and Enid Fedeli.

The R. O. T. C.

The military class at Central this year was known as the Second Battalion of the Seventh Regiment of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. It was organized under an act of Congress, and while it was a part of the school curriculum, it was directly responsible to the War Department.

The instructor in Military Science and Tactics at the first of the year was Major Francis W. Crowley. About the middle of the term he was replaced by Major S. A. Smoke, who was the instructor for the rest of the year, except for a few weeks in the spring, when Lieutenant Colonel F. J. Herman took his place.

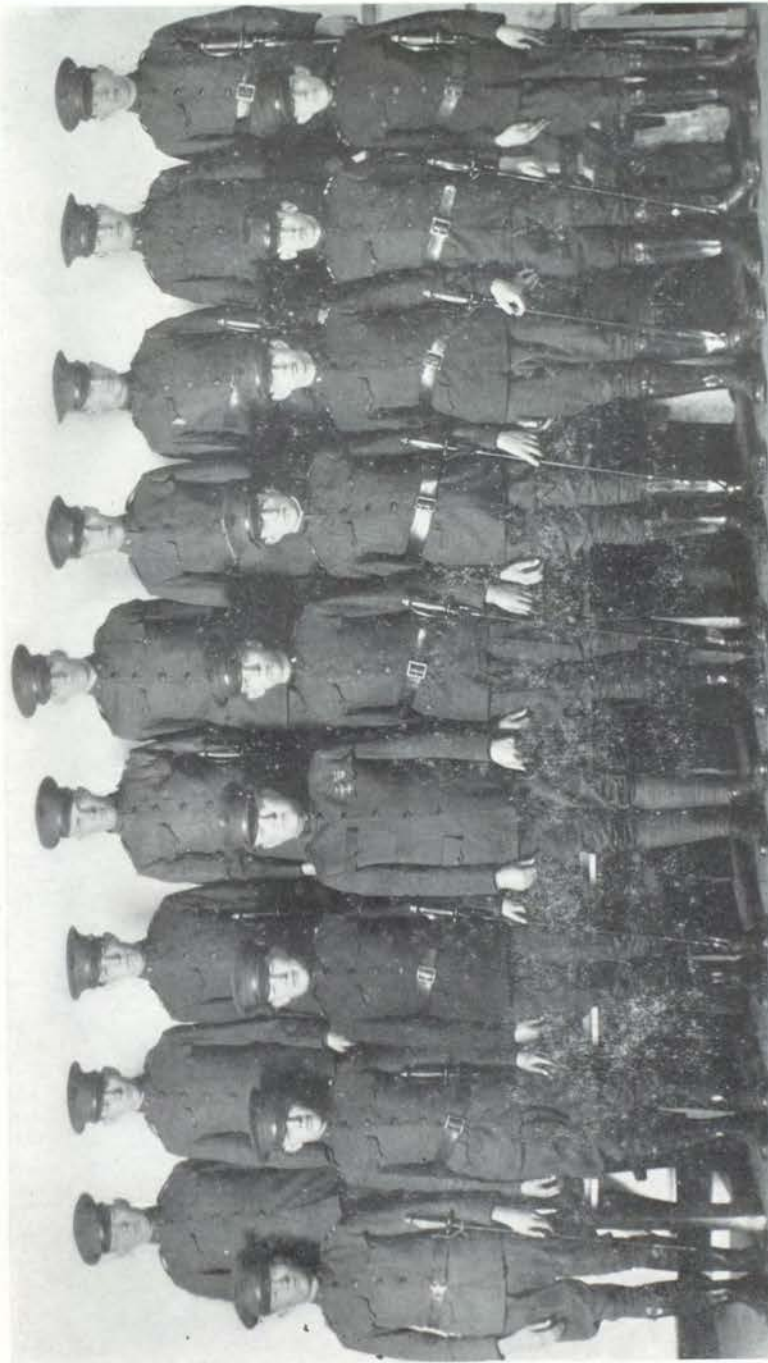

Central's battalion was divided into five companies of about forty men each. The small companies were for the sake of instruction. Work during the year consisted of regular United States Army infantry drill, including close and extended order, target practice, sighting exercises, lecture work and minor tactics.

After a few weeks of drill each member of the corps was equipped with a full uniform, a cap, a rifle, and a belt. These were for his use during the drill season. When the battalion had its weekly parade the cadets made a very creditable appearance.

Central's military instructor was Sergeant J. A. Motley, who had seen service overseas. He is to be congratulated on his success this year.

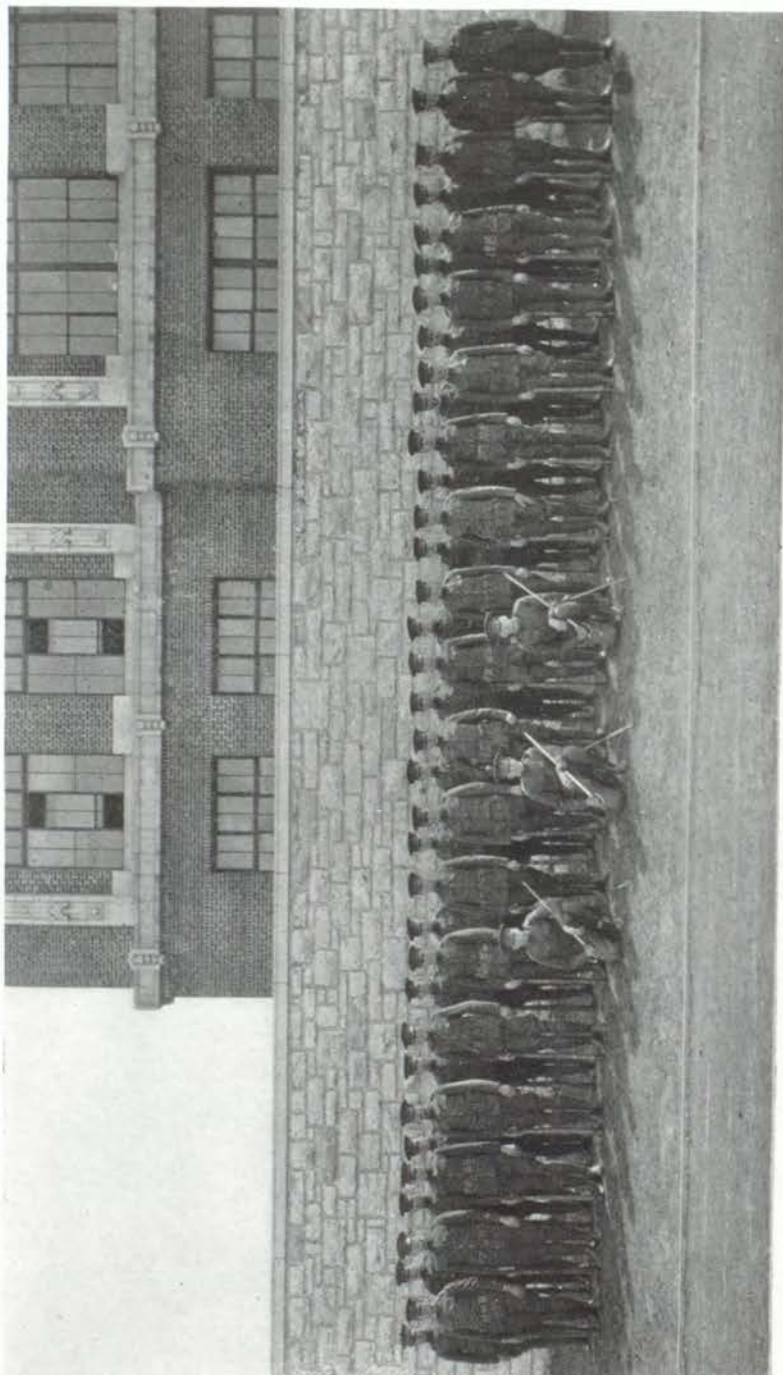

The officers of the battalion were:

Adjutant—Elvin McCommon	Major—John Webb
Captain, Co. A—Joseph Ryan	First Lieutenant, Co. C—Roy Dixon
Captain, Co. B—Bruce Stake	First Lieutenant, Co. D—Alfred Ludlow
Captain, Co. C—Donald Baker	First Lieutenant, Co. E—Leon Seelig
Captain, Co. D—Elmer Hood	Second Lieutenant, Co. A—John Bronaugh

The Class of '24

Have you noticed these "little tots" that rush madly through the halls of Central in the afternoon? We call them freshmen, but they prefer the more dignified name of "Second Year Junior High." They wander around the building with a strained but intelligent look on their faces. We must admit, however, that on certain occasions they have assumed a very dignified appearance.

Our freshmen may well be ranked with the seniors when we consider how they have supported all school activities this year. They came out full force for the basket-ball and football games, and they even donated three of their young athletes to the basket-ball games. We haven't forgotten, either, how the freshmen flocked to the Annual Play. We appreciate their support even though their innocent "Ohs" and "Ahs" caused considerable comment in the audience.

This class does not enter into athletics alone. Do you remember how they responded to the Luminary Story Contest? Neat manuscripts were turned in by eager boys and girls, and the whole freshman class swelled with pride when the two prize-winning stories were printed in the Luminary.

What more could we ask of the freshmen?—brains, pep and talent. Who's the head of the class? Why, the officers, of course! Leland Fowler makes a very efficient president, while James Cottingham and Kirk Briscoe as secretary and treasurer, respectively, are going to make the class boom.

Here's to the class of '24, that will soon be fighting under the Blue and White! May it ever cherish and carry on the ideals for which Central stands.

The Class of '25

At last Central is beginning to realize that its youngest class is not a sub-freshman class but the first year Junior High School. It is, in reality, a senior class, a class of ward school graduates. As quite befits a senior class, it is organized. The officers are:

President—Dorothy Stoner.

Secretary—Esther Hemenway.

Treasurer—Mary DeWeese.

The first-year class of the Junior High has many advantages over the seventh-grade classes of the ward schools. The most important and noticeable advantage is the elective curriculum. All students are required to take Mathematics, English, and American History, then are given a choice from a broad list of elective subjects, including Geography, Latin, French, Spanish, Mechanic Arts, Household Arts, Music, Art, Printing, and Gymnasium. This plan narrows the span between the ward school and the high school, enabling the boy or girl to become more accustomed to the high school life. Kansas City was among the first to adopt this plan, which is now being adopted by various cities.

The class of '25 is fortunate in ending a very successful year. Only next year will it be the support of the Junior High School, and let us hope that it will successfully pull the grade of four more years of high school life as it has the past one year.

Junior High School Athletics

Football at Junior High was not as successful as it ought to have been, partly because of the absence of a definite schedule and partly because of the prevalence of green material. But nevertheless, Mr. Craig, the coach, with his experience and knowledge of the game, succeeded in taking some of the proverbial green out of the squad and finally had a smooth-running aggregation. In the games that were played the same old Central fight was in evidence and a number of good players were discovered who will be back next year to boost Central's chances for another championship team.

With such an able coach as Mr. Ruttinger, a crack basketball team could not help but be developed. Ten games were played and all were won by large scores. The team, besides capturing all the games played, helped Central's second team win the championship, Junior High being represented by four men—Burton, Richards, Patton and Cantrall. In the last two games at Convention Hall this same quartet of players was in evidence, each of them making a creditable showing. "Little" Glen Burton captained the five to so successful a season, Richards and Briscoe held down the forward positions, while Patton and Cantrall were the defensive men. Goetz and Cooper also did some good work when they were in action. All the men will be back next year to help Coach Menze in his task of molding a basketball team for the Blue and White. Junior High can indeed be congratulated on her athletic achievements.
