

FOREWORD

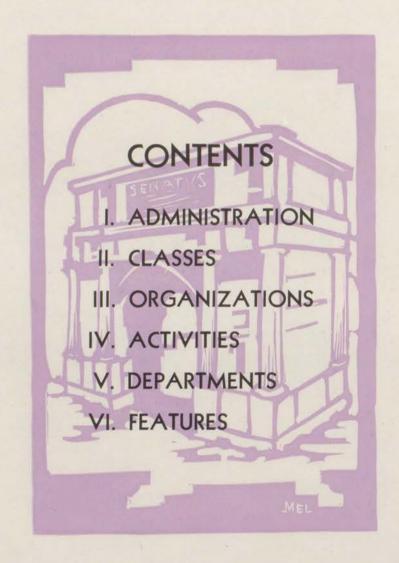

The 1931-1932 annual is now in your hands. The editors of this East High yearbook have striven to make it the honest reflection of a year of activity in our school. We present to you our effort with a sincere wish that it may be always cherished to commemorate the friendships established within these walls of East.

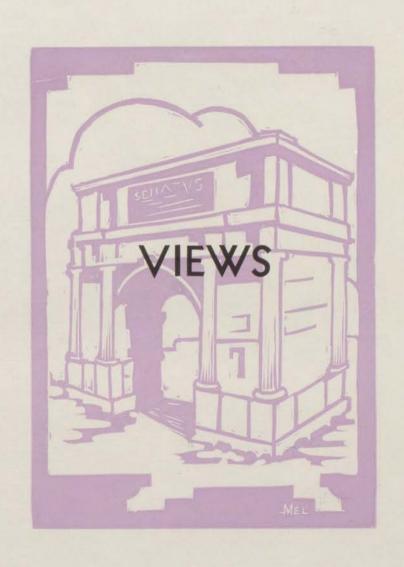

MEL

DEDICATION

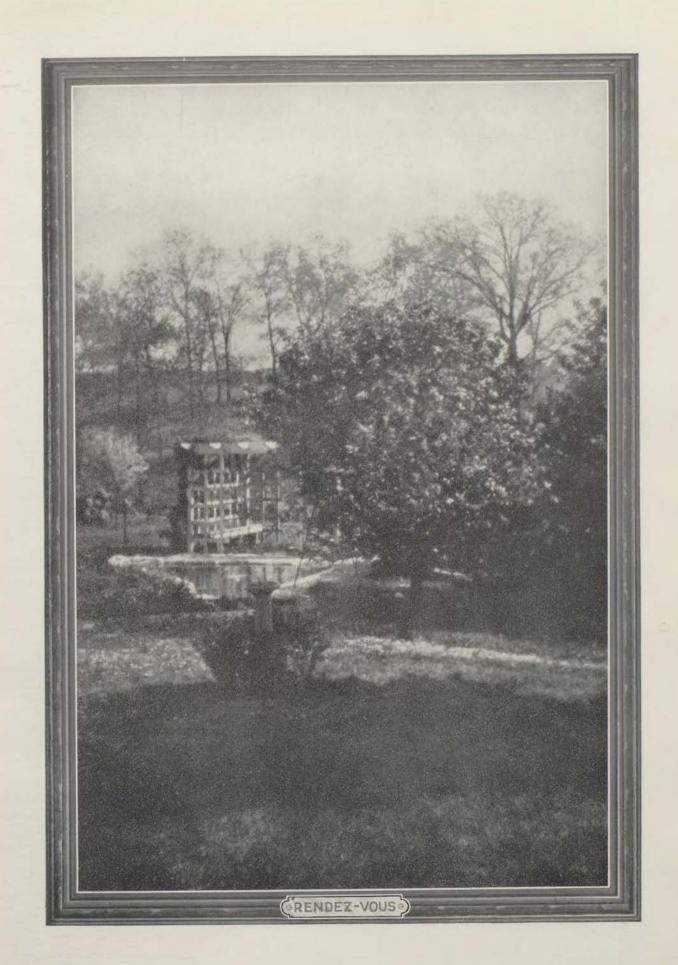

Travel, which was the first teacher of our primitive forefathers, after years of progress in the modes, is a daily commodity in the reach of all individuals. It furnishes the finish to the education of the modern man. To this larger school we dedicate this book, hoping that it will stimulate greater interest in the beauties of the earth.

IN MEMORIAM

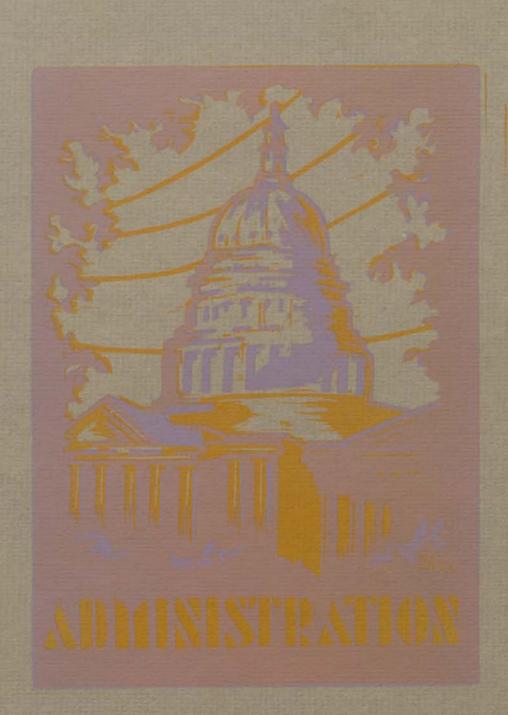

Mr. Ewing B. Avery......August 15, 1931 Mr. W. D. Hifner.....December 4, 1931

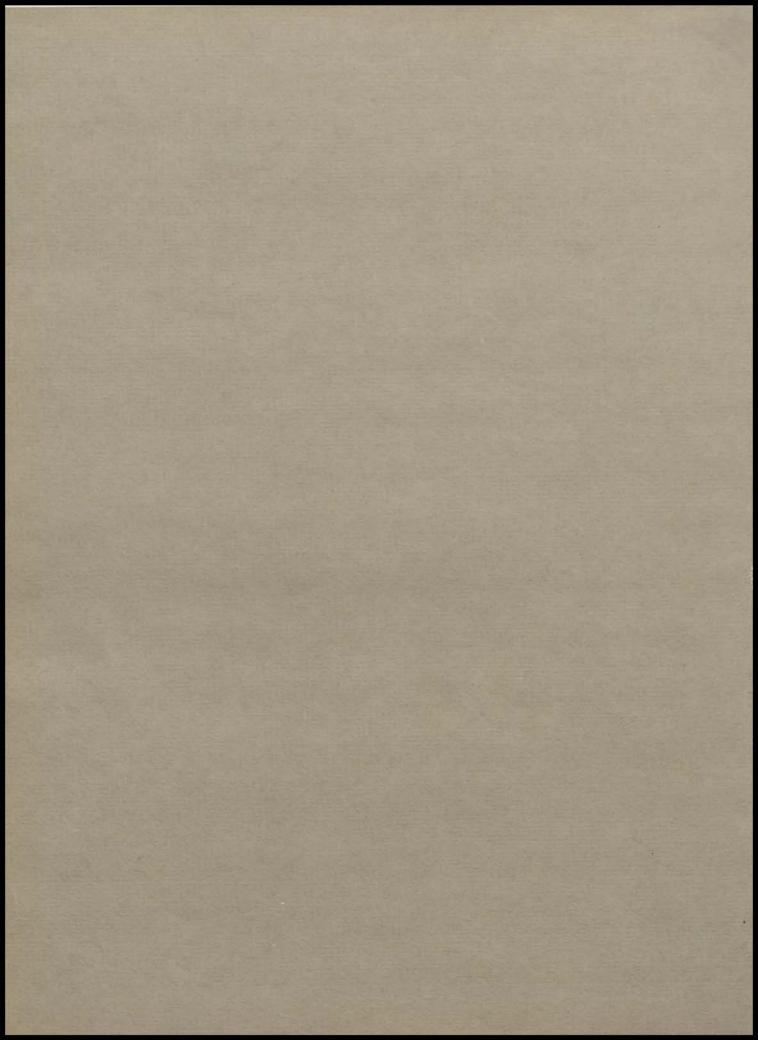

We bow our heads in reverence to two of the open-hearted friends of East, who were called away from their work bench, from an unfinished work and from the sides of companions, to finish a greater work under the supervision of a Great Instructor.

Mr. Avery in his years at East, by his sympathy and understanding, formed a close friendship with his classes. His premature passing leaves a host of friends bereaved of a loved companion.

Mr. Hifner was an expert in the shop. He knew boys and knew how to teach them. He was a lover of sports and sportsmanship and he taught and lived the Golden Rule.

ME

CLIFFORD H. NOWLIN Principal

East is fortunate in having as a counselor so great a man as Mr. Nowlin. His personality is regarded as a model everywhere his fame is known.

EASTONIAN 1932

JOHN R. WAHLSTEDT Vice-Principal

Mr. Wahlstedt is, indeed, a great man and a great moulder of men. With such an example as a guide any boy should strive to be a better son and a better citizen.

The Student Council was organized in 1926 in order to secure co-operation between the faculty and the student body.

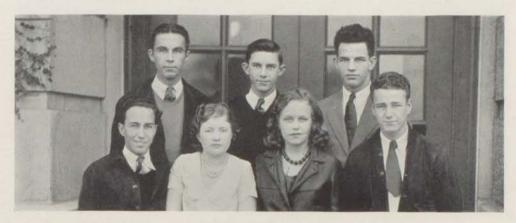

This year the Council followed its custom of previous years of sponsoring various all-school activities. It inaugurated, this year, the policy of presenting honor pins to those on the semester honor rolls. Those on the highest honor roll received gold "E's" those on the general roll, silver "E's."

Several all-school mixers were sponsored during the year. Candidates for sponsor officers of the R. O. T. C. were introduced at the Christmas Mixer held December 21. A St. Patrick's ball was given by the Council on March 17.

"East in the Movies" was again given at the Outburst. The reels depicted classes at work and prominent persons and scenes about the school.

Miss Mary Latshaw is the adviser.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

CLASS OFFICERS

GORDON SHUMAKER, President

Gordon has shown his ability during the last year. His co-operation and eagerness have made him very popular as president of the senior class.

MARVIN SILVEY, Vice-President

Although Marvin is quiet he puts over whatever he starts out to do. This is important in the office of vice-president.

MARY BRIGHT, Secretary

As secretary, Mary has been helpful to the senior class. She has served on committees and has worked for the welfare of all.

MELVIN BEYER, Treasurer

Initiative and a friendly manner are two traits found in "Mel." These are the main qualities of a good treasurer.

MARSHALL LANTZ, Sergeant-at-Arms

When the seniors chose "Pete" they selected someone who was good-natured and likable, as well as being capable.

BERNARD McCarty, Reporter

"Mac's" cheerful smile made him liked by all. His ability to write easily won for him the position of reporter.

Pauline Foreman, Giftorian

Pauline has shown by being in numerous plays that she is worthy of the position of giftorian of the senior class.

Miss Baker and Mr. Ryder, Advisers

Miss Baker has piloted the senior class for many years and her efficiency and cooperation have been responsible for senior success. Mr. Ryder has been sponsor of the class of '32 two consecutive years and his aid was of great value.

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS

JAMES KRATZ, President

"Bud" was awarded this honor because he had numerous friends who recognized his high moral standards, admired his athletic ability, and envied him his looks and personality.

ALBERT BARBE, Vice-President

"Al" is a scholar, leader and athlete. He is well liked by the faculty and admired by all who know him. Need we say more?

JENNIEVE McGuire, Secretary

Her friendship was a treasure, her smile a pleasure. She performed the duties of secretary with unswerving loyalty.

FRANCIS KELLSTROM, Treasurer

"Fritz" was the pride of the junior class, with more humor and practical jokes than a salesman.

WILTON BARGAR, Reporter

With his cheery smile and friendly attitude Wilton could qualify for any office.

JOHN MURPHY, Sergeant-at-Arms

He was a man on the gridiron and he is a man anywhere else. His Irish eccentricities were the source of many a laugh.

DOROTHY SCHUPP, Gift Receiver

Not only is "Dot" a talented speaker, but her radiating personality and attractiveness will lend charm to the graduation ceremony.

VINCENT MANLEY and DENNIS CUBINE, Mascots

Here are two boys whose aim in life is to make friends. They are both boys willing to do the maximum of work for the minimum of glory.

CLASS HISTORY

The colors of the junior class were carried aloft in all departments. The most outstanding accomplishment was having a representative chosen as school orator. Nine class members were placed on the first football team, while five were on the basketball team. There are six junior point winners on the track team. Three juniors are members of the East Echo staff, while two have positions on the Eastonian staff. One junior won a literary contest gold medal, while three won silver medals. Juniors have been prominent in the R. O. T. C. Department, Commercial Department and Art Department. It may well be said the year '31 and '32 has been a series of junior victories.

SOPHOMORE OFFICERS

PAUL O'NEAL, President

Paul carried the sophomore colors through the athletic seasons this year and well earned the title of the "Most Distinguished Sophomore."

ROBERT BARBE, Vice-President

One of the greatest of gifts was given to "Bob," the ability to make and hold friendships. You'll hear more about him next year, and also the following years.

MARIAN NORQUIST, Secretary

Although her personality played a large part in her election, her efficiency and capability were her recommendations.

Roy Jury, Treasurer

Roy's ambition is to be a success in school. His perseverance will take him toward his goal.

INA VIRGINIA PROCTOR, Reporter

Attractiveness and intelligence were Ina's qualifications.

BUFORD MOOK, Sergeant-at-Arms

"Bummer" is one of the best liked boys in school. Big things will be among his accomplishments.

June Taylor and Ellis Lynn, Mascots

Both are small in stature, but each has a heart of gold.

CLASS HISTORY

The class of '34 has taken a part in the school activities on the football field, basketball court and cinder track. They receive instructions necessary in developing future officers in the R. O. T. C. In the art and domestic science departments we see records of sophomore triumphs.

At their meeting February 10, the above officers were chosen and the class designated Miss McGloin and Mr. Broadlick advisers.

FRESHMAN CLASS OFFICERS

Watts, Snyder, Ewing, Lee, Silvey, Popham, Williams, Dettweiler.

FRESHMAN CLASS OFFICERS

ELLA SILVEY, President

The freshman class bestowed upon Ella the honor of being the first girl president of a class.

WILMA WILLIAMS, Vice-President

Her class wanted a jolly, friendly girl for an officer. "Sug" was first choice.

NADINE POPHAM, Secretary

Nadine was a most outstanding freshman at East. With her radiating personality she attracted them all.

LOYE WATTS, Treasurer

Loye's winning manner, coupled with business sense and persistence, qualified him for his office.

DOROTHY LEE, Reporter

Her friends honored her by placing her in this office. This is a small award for one so capable.

TED DETTWEILER, Sergeant-at-Arms

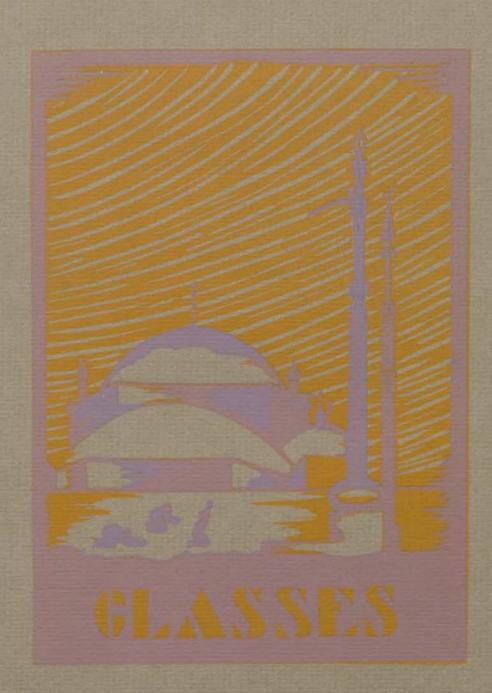

Full of pep and vim, Ted was always working that pleasing personality and winning friends in the faculty and student body.

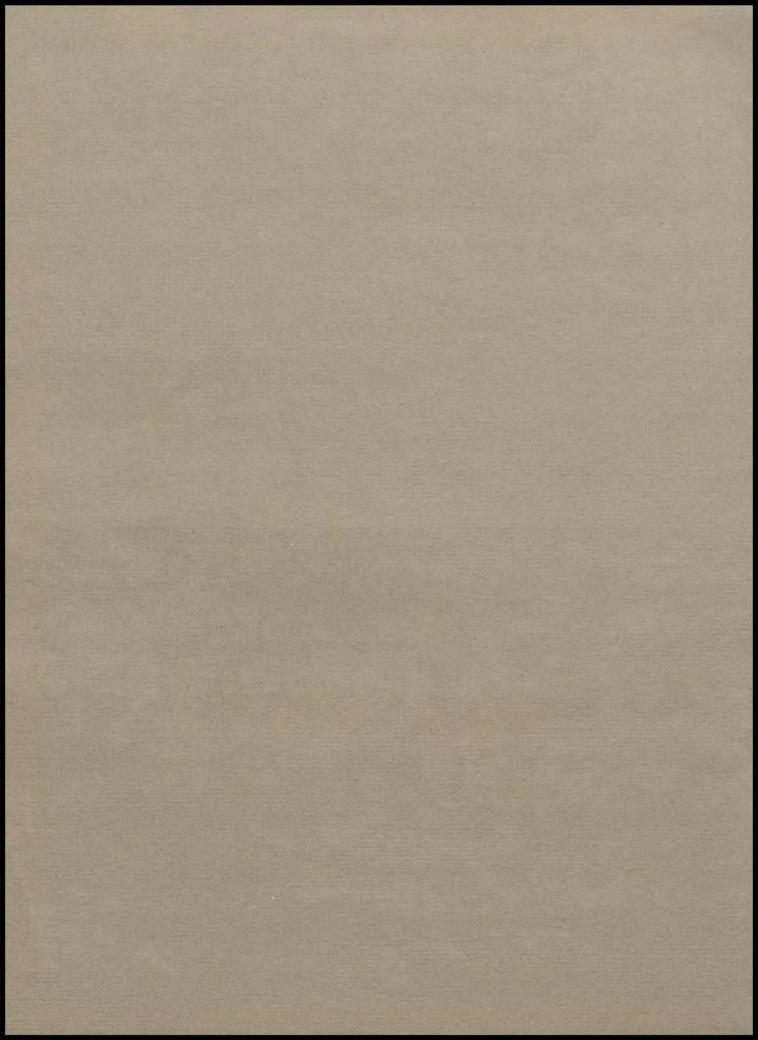

JOSEPH SNYDER and MAXINE EWING, Mascots

Joseph and Maxine proved to the school that to be popular you do not have to be massive.

CLASS HISTORY

Approximately two hundred graduates from local grade schools came to East this year and became known as the freshman class. Already many of the members have taken responsible places in school. We prophesy a great future for them. At their first meeting, February 11, the above officers were elected. Mr. Parks and Miss McClure were chosen advisers.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Twenty-six seniors were presented pins signifying membership to the East chapter of the National Honor Society. These students were chosen by the faculty as those best qualified in the four cardinal points of the organization—scholarship, leadership, character and service.

The members were installed at the assembly Friday, April 1. Rabbi Samuel S. Mayerberg was the speaker of the occasion. Altamae Beard explained the purpose of the organization. The symbolism of the emblem was explained by Jennings Johnson. The candles representing the principles of the organization were lighted by Grace Harmon, scholarship; Glenn Barnett, leadership; Stella Koutelas, character; and Garland Reckart, service.

The following seniors were awarded membership: Grace Harmon, Mary Bright, Jennings Johnson, Alice Hockett, Glenn Barnett, Virginia Rice, Charles Bedingfield, Lyle Arnold, Miller Anderson, Altamae Beard, Vivian Bickel, Winnie Branch, Virginia Cosby, Lorraine Campbell, Elvena Duderstadt, Fred Ewing, Catherine Grabb, Stella Koutelas, John Martin, Dorrance Mathis, Hazel McKee, Esther Milholland, Garland Reckart, Virginia Stilts, Malcolm Shelton and Leo West.

The society organized April 1 and the officers elected were:

Jennings Johnson .		(4)				95	*1	-	President
MILLER ANDERSON	130		248		ī.			Vic	e-President
MARY BRIGHT .		2		10	2		1	23	Secretary
GARLAND RECKART					,				Treasurer

The faculty committee who compiled the scholarship and activity points and sponsored the organization were Miss Hiatt, chairman; Mr. Broadlick, Mr. Tiefel, Miss Abbott and Miss Gilchrist.

CLASS OF 1932

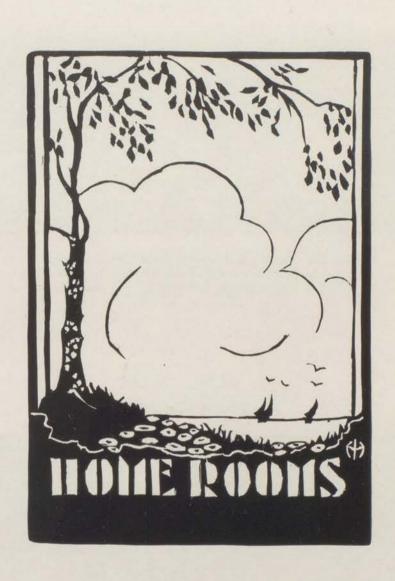

Four years ago some two hundred fifty graduates from grade schools of the vicinity came to East and became a part of it. Though small in stature and new to the ways of high school students, they strove to equal the example set by the upper classmen. They furnished a large part of the cheering section for the athletic events and other contests where the school was represented.

As sophomores they were represented in several of the departments of the school—journalism, art, music, R. O. T. C., dramatics, athletics, and domestic arts departments. Their accomplishments were surpassed only by their efforts toward greater success.

The third year in the history of the class showed greater successes, the most outstanding of these being the junior prom, which was acclaimed the greatest of its kind. Juniors were prominent in all the activities. We find one junior on the all-star football team. Others won medals and awards in the literary contest, art contests, and typing contests.

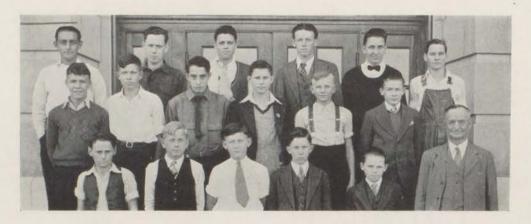

The fourth and greatest year of this class was marked by achievements hitherto unequalled. They presented a wonderful alumni dance. Their senior play was a big success. Two members were ranked as all stars on the honorary grid team. Other high honors were awarded to them in the school and in the community.

When their career at East is finished and they receive their diplomas, this school will find the chairs they vacated hard to fill with students so efficient and responsible. The successes they realized in school are sure to follow them into later life.

The Kalailu Literary Club is the only boy and girl club at East. It is also the oldest literary club, having been organized in October, 1927.

The purposes of the club are: To create a greater interest in literary works; to further the study of parliamentary law, and to foster among its members a finer spirit of friendship, which is the meaning of the word "Kalailu."

Its motto is "Vera Amicitia Omnia Vincit"—true friendship conquers all.

The club won the 1928 Literary Contest and tied for first place with the Leundians in 1929.

Mr. Garland Nichols is the adviser of the club.

The Hamilton Literary Club, the only all-boy club at East, was organized in February, 1928.

The club, having set Alexander Hamilton as its ideal, decided to have its colors blue and white, like those of the American Army.

The Hamilton Club is the brother club of the Leundis and holds its social functions with them.

The club has been advancing rapidly under the supervision of Miss Vee Flinn and Mr. John Broadlick. It placed third in the Literary Contest in 1930 and second in 1931.

The purpose of the club is to develop a greater interest in literature and writing.

The Leundis Literary Club was organized November 8, 1926. It was the second club to organize at East. The club is an all-girl organization and its purposes are to promote literary appreciation and foster higher ideals among its members.

The Leundians have staged "The Follies" at the last two Outbursts.

They have had a great success in the Literary Contests, tying for first in 1929, and winning in 1930 and 1931.

Miss Marie Burrus and Miss Emir Ammerman are the advisers of the club.

The Eulexia Literary Club was organized in December, 1929. It is the newest literary club at East. It is an all-girl club, having as its main purposes the promotion of higher ideals in literature and the social life of the school and the cultivation of a taste for the finer things of life.

The club presented a shadow play at the Outburst this year. It tied for third place in the literary contest last year.

The Eulexians won the Eastonian snapshot contest this year.

Miss Celia Waring is the club adviser.

THE LITERARY CONTEST

The Leundis and Hamilton Literary Societies, with a total of 14 points each, tied for first place in the Fifth Annual Literary Contest, which was held in the school auditorium, April 22. The Kalailus were a close second with 12 points.

The medals were evenly distributed between the Leundians and Hamiltons. The club costumes and songs added gayety and color to the scene that night.

The Boys' High School Club was organized during the year 1927. Its membership is open to all boys of the school. The purpose of the club is to promote, maintain, and extend high standings of true Christian character among its members.

The club meets every Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. hut.

John J. O. Moore is the adviser.

The club sponsored several chili suppers and social events during the year. It also held a Mat and Ring Show in the school gymnasium. This was the first program of the kind ever given by the club, and was open to boys and their "dads." Three hundred persons witnessed the show, which was pronounced a great success.

The Archimedian Math and Science Club was formed by the merging of the Archimedian Club and the Science Club. Since the two were so closely related, it was thought that a better club would be established if the two clubs became one.

Programs having discussions on problems in math and science are held. Experiments are performed and theories are solved.

Miss Emir Ammerman and Mr. W. S. Esther are the club advisers.

The Art Club was the first departmental club to organize in East High School. Its purpose is to encourage the study of art and to assist in the activities of the school. The design on the pin represents a tube of paint with the letter "E" inscribed and a brush behind the tube. The club mascot is an orange and blue palette with brushes for legs.

The club sponsored several skating parties this year. They paint pictures and make block prints at meetings.

Miss Martha Abbott and Miss May Farr Hiatt are the advisers.

EASTONIAN 1932

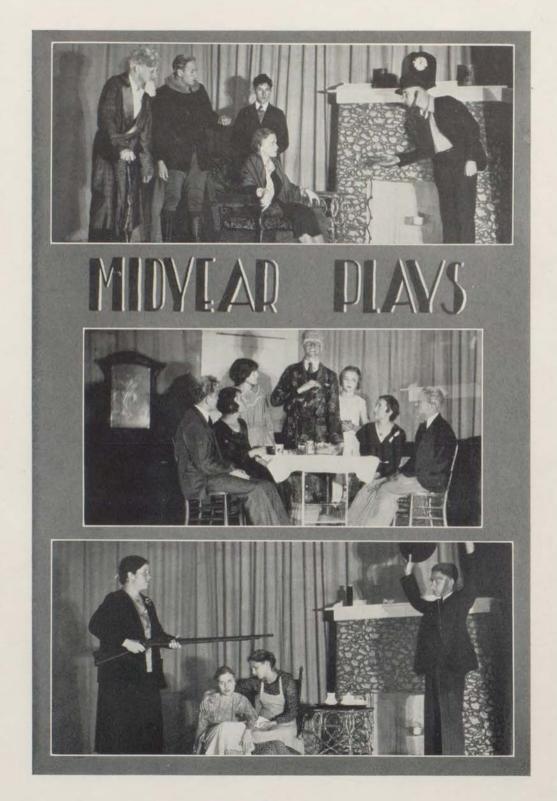

SENIOR PLAY

The senior play, "Just Like Judy," was presented in the school auditorium on Friday and Saturday nights, April 1 and 2. The author of the play is Ernest Denny. Miss Eva Van Natta directed the cast. The play, a comedy, was enthusiastically received by large audiences both nights.

Peter Keppel, an artist known as "Put-it-off-Peter," has just postponed his marriage to Beatrice Draycott. Beatrice, secretly in love with Hugh Crauford, another artist, is angry. Her best chum, Judith McCarthy, appears on the scene at that time, and plunges into the task of marrying Beatrice and Peter. Peter had been wounded in the war, and, when Judy, trying to make him see that he should marry Beatrice before he lost her, suddenly shocks him, he strikes his head against the mantel, hurting himself. When he regains consciousness, Judy makes him think he is married to her. Beatrice had run away with Hugh, but she returns. Judy confesses her part. Beatrice refuses Peter and goes with Hugh. Peter and Judy confess their love for each other and the play ends happily.

MID-YEAR PLAYS

The annual mid-year plays were given in the East High auditorium Friday and Saturday, December 11 and 12. Three plays—a comedy, a drama, and a morality play—were presented.

The comedy, "The Dear Departed," was the story of two sisters and their families who, when they thought that their father had died, instantly began to quarrel over who should have his things. The father was then living with one daughter, Amelia Slater, and her husband. The old man surprised his daughters very much by proving to be drunk instead of dead. Knowing of their quarrel, he announced that he was going to marry a widow and all his things would go to her when he died.

The drama, "The Forty-Acre Patch," was the story of two old ladies who were being swindled out of the last two acres of their father's forty-acre patch by Dave Kenton, a real estate dealer who pretended to be their friend. Mrs. Mayfield, the district judge, befriended the old ladies and helped them to recover their property.

"Dust of the Road" was the morality play. A friend of Peter Steele had died in the war and had left in Peter's keeping $3,000 for his young son, which was to be given the boy when he became of age. Peter and Prudence, his wife, and Prudence's uncle were the only ones who knew about the money. When the day drew near for Peter to turn it over to the boy, he hesitated, wanting to keep it for himself. "Dust of the Road," a tramp, the ghost of Judas Iscariot, showed Peter the error of his ways and Peter turned the money over to the boy.

THE OUTBURST

The sixth annual East Outburst, held November 20 and 21, 1931, furnished plenty of entertainment and excitement for everyone. The auditorium was filled both nights and the numerous sideshows had many patrons.

The theme of the main performance was the Melting Pot. Bill Wilkison, "Uncle Sam," was master of ceremonies. As he stirred the contents of a huge black pot, people of many nationalities bubbled out to represent their nations.

First of all, a group of American tap dancers bubbled out and danced "In the Cornfield." The dancers were Lorene Seever, Marianne Haley, Mary Doran, Mary Mayes, Marguerite Wolfe, Helena Blaine, Janice Rupe, Dorothea Welland and Kathryn Tonge.

The boys in Mr. Thelen's gym classes built human pyramids.

Bill Wilkison with Jane Stivers, Alice Solsberg, Dorothy Schupp, Doris Haines and Helen Mae Smith danced and sang "A Big Bouquet for You."

A skit, "Cal O'Mel's Courtship," was presented by Miss Van Natta's pupils. Arlynne Wagner played the part of Angelina, Cal's sweetheart. Edward Kuhn was Cal O'Mel. The part of Andy, Angelina's brother, was played by Paul Busch. Thelma McDougall was Viney, the old colored nurse.

The boys of Mrs. Caldwell's Junior Glee Club represented China in "China Town." They were Maxwell Simpson, Joseph Snyder, Earl Buell, Harold Max Fisher, Albert Lucas, Glenn Baker, Wilson Dolde and Lewis Logan.

Holland was represented by a Dutch dance given by Edna Felt, Maxine Snow, Margaret Comer, Ruth Hartman, Dorothy Lee and Lucille Cunningham.

As Uncle Sam continued to stir the pot, Hawaiian girls bubbled out and sang "Song of the Islands." The singers were Elaine Peckenpaugh, Dorothy Davis, Geneva Chamberlin, Frances O'Maley, Esther Milholland, Regina Clements, Dorothy King, Pauline Singleton, Valerie Taylor, Vera Wuth, Josephine Hansell, Vivian Martin, Mary Jane O'Connell and Grace Burk.

France was represented by a dance by Mademoiselle Marie, Mary Graham Minor of the class of '29.

"Mammy and Her Chilluns" portrayed the life of a typical southern Negro family. Mammy was Altamae Beard. Her "Chillun," Mary Agin, Ruth Orndorff, Nedra Diamond, Sue Rust, Merrill Hartman, Tommy Grogan, Garland Reckart and Oscar Robertson, sang "Far Away in the South." "Daisy Lillian," otherwise known as Virginia Hines, gave a reading, "In the Mornin'." "Lucinda Ann," Virginia Miller, tap danced. She was accompanied on the French harp by Merl Gladden and John Davison. The octet sang "My Mammy's Twilight Lullaby."

Scotland was represented by Becky Brackenridge, who danced the "Highland Fling."

The East Quartet, William Wilkison, Clarence Lucas, Theodore Fehrenbach and Robert Clarkson, sang a localized song about the faculty members.

The sideshows were Leundian Follies, Novelties, Madame X, Museum, East in the Movies, Fortune Wheel, "Shadow Play" and "Romance of Mary Jane," Spanish Cabaret, South Sea Island Follies, Prize Fight, and Doll Rack.

EASTONIAN

MISS EVA VAN NATTA

FERREL HEADY

The sixth season of dramatics at East has been very successful.

The department, under the direction of Miss Eva Van Natta, presented three Mid year Plays in December, a skit in the Outburst, and the Senior Play. The Midyear Plays were "Forty-Acre Patch," by Della Crowder Miller; "The Dear Departed," by Stanley Houghton; and "Dust of the Road," by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman. The Outburst skit was "Cal O'Mel's Courtship," and the Senior Play was "Just Like Judy," by Ernest Denny.

Ferrel Heady, '33, was the East representative in the Star's Annual Oratorical Contest, which was held April 16 in Convention Hall. The other finalists in the school contest at East were Alvin Singer, Edward Kuhn and Lyle Arnold.

The dramatics department offers three years of dramatic work: Beginning expression, advanced expression and public speaking. The course instructs the students in parliamentary law, debate, oratory, extemporaneous speaking, interpretation and play production. The students who take part in the plays and oratorical contests are selected from Miss Van Natta's expression classes.

MUSIC CONTEST

The annual interschool music contest will be held Saturday, May 14, in Westport Junior High School. At the time this book went to press, the contest had not been held so that the names of the winners could not be printed here.

Each school entered contestants in the nine events: Girls' solo, high, medium and low; boys' solo, high, medium, low; girls' triple trio; mixed octet; and boys' quartet. The contestants sing selections of their own choice.

The judges of the contest are the music supervisors of the city: Mrs. Darnall, Miss Lowry, Miss Haswell, Miss Ritter and Miss Clifford.

Each year the contest is managed by one of the schools competing. This year East High will manage it.

Formerly each school entered contestants in four additional events—mixed chorus, sight reading, choral club and glee club—thus adding twenty-eight more numbers to the contest, making ninety-one numbers altogether. This year these numbers will be omitted, making the program much shorter.

ORATORICAL CONTEST

The Star's Annual Oratorical Contest was held April 16 in Convention Hall. Ferrel Heady represented East High. Although he did not place, the school is proud of his work. Lyman Field of Westport placed first, Glenn Ohlsen of Manual second, and Leonard Sosland of Paseo third.

Drawing Honor List

The drawing honor list represents the students in the art classes whose grades in art are E and who have done an unusual amount of extra work for the department. This year nine art students were awarded the honor. They are: Melvin Beyer, Laura Brown-Berneice Degenfelder, Elvena Duderstadt, Helen Henderson, Bernard McCarty, Ruth Parrish, Ellis Purdy and Carolyn Thompson. Melvin Beyer, Elvena Duderstadt, Helen Henderson, Bernard McCarty and Carolyn Thompson are receiving this honor for the second time.

Outburst Poster Contest

Frances Engle, '34, was awarded the first prize in the Outburst poster contest. Elvena Duderstadt was awarded second place. Carolyn Thompson, Bernice Degenfelder and Flora Mae Brewer were awarded third place. Honorable mention posters were made by Elvena Duderstadt, Bernard McCarty, Glennon Johnston, Melvin Beyer, Ruth Parrish, Wilma Bell and Carolyn Thompson

NATIONAL MUSIC TEST

The music students at East, as well as the students in high schools throughout the United States, assembled April 16 to take the National Music Discrimination Test, which was broadcast over the Columbia Network from the studio in Chicago.

This test, written by Miss Mabelle Glenn, music supervisor in Kansas City and the head of the music appreciation committee of the National Music Supervisors, was a part of the biennial program given by the Supervisors.

Style, form and composer discrimination was the theme of the test. There were ten questions, with a possible score of 100. Mary Agin and Helen Rumans, with grades of 96, made the highest scores at East. Other students whose grades were above 90 were Betty Mathis and Martha Rumans, 94; and Edna Marie Lindstedt, 92.

The highest scores in the different divisions were as follows:

Junior Glee Club-Joseph Snyder, Glenn Baker, Donald Anderton and Charles Brown.

Junior Choral Club, Division 1—Betty Mathis and Caroline Abramowitz; Division 2—Martha Rumans and Irene Higgins.

Choral Club and Girls' Voice Class-Mary Agin, Helen Rumans and Edna Marie Lindstedt.

Senior Glee Club and Boys' Voice Class—Gordon Shumaker and Clarence Lucas.

Band and Orchestra—Vincent Dawson and Ellis Lynn.

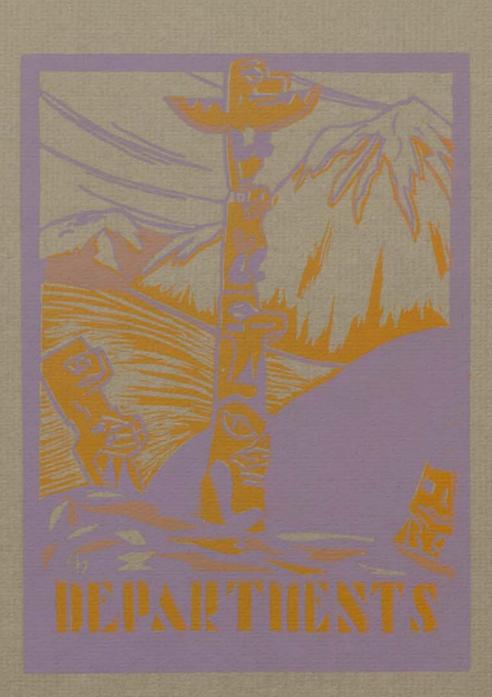

M. I. P. A. CONTEST

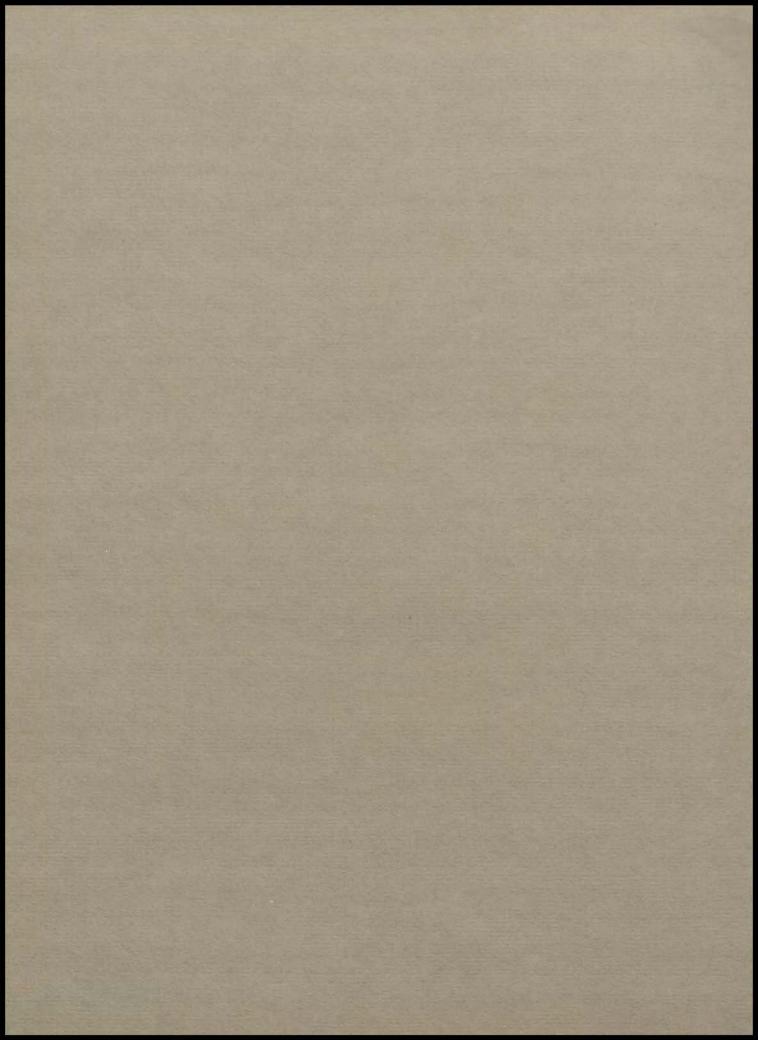

The East Echo placed second in the state in the Newspaper Contest sponsored by the Missouri Interscholastic Press Association held at Columbia May 7.

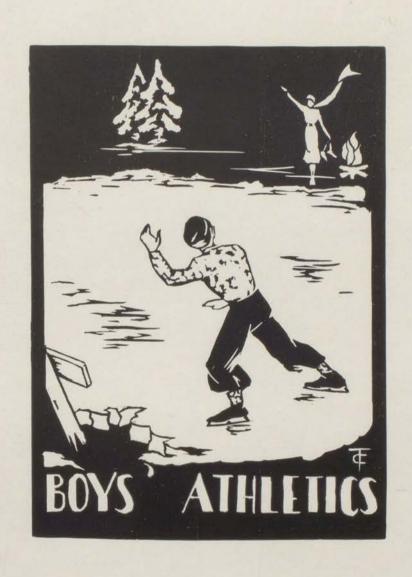

The Echo was entered in five contests and placed in four. Vivian Bickel placed first in individual news story; Carolyn Thompson second in drawing; and Glenn Barnett second in editorial.

J. C. COHLMEYER Coach

The East Athletic teams this year have been judged by critics as being the most co-ordinating and best organized high school teams in the city. This is, indeed, a high tribute to our athletes; but it is a greater and higher one for the coach who made these teams function. Certain it is that Coach Cohlmeyer's first concern in every stage of the game was in the building of men before the building of football or basketball players. Successful or unsuccessful in the athletic end, Coach was always building character in the souls of his charges.

EDWARD F. THELEN Assistant Coach

Co-operating with Coach Cohlmeyer at every opportunity offered, Mr. Thelen completed his third year at East, having won new and great admiration from those whom he coached. The conditioning of East's athletes for track and field events under the complete direction of Mr. Thelen was never lacking in any detail.

W. S. ESTHER Manager

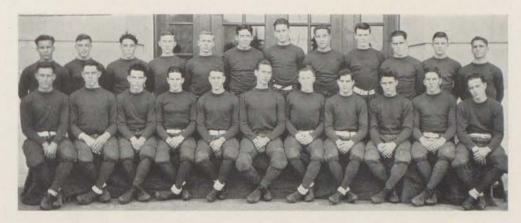

East should consider herself greatly indebted to this man for his energy and time expended so cheerfully in the interests of the financial success of her athletic undertakings. Also, thanks to Mr. Esther's business ability, the teams were never wanting in equipment of any sort. He made a successful attempt at filling the shoes of Mr. McDaniel.

AGIN, LANTZ, ROADCAP Cheer Leaders

Thanks to the consistent endeavors of Marshall Lantz, Elmer Lee Roadcap and Harvey Agin the cheering enthusiasm was high on all occasions of East's competition with other schools. These cheerleaders spared no energy in the pursuit of their assignment.

FIRST TEAM FOOTBALL

FOOTBALL SEASON

The close of the 1932 Interscholastic Football Season found East tied for third with Manual and Central. Considered the most coordinating team in the league, this eleven furnished its followers with many a thrill.

While statistics showed our boys below those of last season, they overlook the absence of letter men from the line up. Next year, with eleven letter men or reserves back, we should bid seriously for the Journal-Post trophy.

East retained the Dartmouth Alumni Trophy by her scholastic ranking and football ability. If next year the team ranks first along these lines, the trophy becomes a permanent possession.

CAPTAIN MARVIN SILVEY

"Mont" proved himself not only an ideal captain but an excellent influence to the team. That he had all the essentials of a red-blooded backfield man was evidenced by his selection for the mythical All-Star team two successive years.

FOOTBALL SEASON

EAST 0-OTTAWA 6

A blocked East punt in the first quarter which placed the ball in Ottawa's possession on East's 20-yard line, led to the only score of the game. The East team, clad in complete new outfits of green, demonstrated a very creditable brand of football for its first game of the season.

EAST 7-NORTHEAST 13

The defending champion Bears made an unsuccessful stand against the stronger Viking eleven in this championship game in the first round of the Inter-Scholastic League. Lapetina and Carpenter were the offensive punch in the Northeast team, while Anderson started for East as a "triple threat man."

EAST 6-ROCKHURST 6

With the old "fighting Irish" spirit, the Bears finally succeeded in tying the score of the opponents when there remained just thirty seconds of playing time. A thirty-five-yard pass, Anderson to Weinberg, followed by a series of crafty running plays executed by Anderson and Silvey, were the means used to score the East touchdown.

EAST 13-MANUAL O

The Bears succeeded, without any unexpected effort, in winning this contest for their second round n the Inter-Scholastic League. John Weinberg, playing fullback for East, achieved the honor of scoring both touchdowns for his team. Had it not been for the exceptional ability of Captain Long, Manual quarterback, as a punter, East undoubtedly would have accumulated a much higher score.

EAST 18—CENTRAL 12

Real history was made October 24, 1931, when the East High eleven defeated the Central High School team for the first time in the six years of East's existence. Forced to be content with a scoreless tie last season, the East team returned with such a determination to win that they couldn't be defeated. Supporting the bulk of the Bears' attack were: Schroeder playing left tackle, Anderson at left halfback, and Silvey at fullback.

EAST 6-PASEO 13

This game with the pace setting Pirates, offering to East her big and final chance to retain her league championship, was beyond doubt the most exciting one of the East season. East trailed at the end of the first half 6-0, but in the early minutes of the second half Captain Silvey, East fullback, ran sixty-five yards off right tackle for a touchdown. But in the succeeding minutes of the game following East's touchdown, Paseo, led by her quarterback McDaniels, again crossed the East marker, this time for the winning touchdown.

EAST 20—SOUTHWEST 13

Although pitted against a heavier team, East again succeeded in coming out with the long end of the score. By virtue of this victory, East went into a tie with Central for the second place in the Inter-Scholastic League. Overcome by the superior strength of the Southwest offense in the first quarter, the Bears yielded, and allowed the Indians to score the first counter. However, East was the last team to score and that is what decides the outcome of the game.

EAST 6-WESTPORT 15

Opening the game with a big offensive drive down the field that netted a touchdown, the Bears started on their way to have what appeared to be another victory. But the strength of the Tigers was not revealed at the time of the predictions of the East victory, for with the advent of the second and third quarters, West-port secured two touchdowns, to which record East could add none. In the second period the Tigers also secured a safety by recovering a blocked East kick behind the East goal.

FIRST TEAM BASKETBALL

Back Row: Reed, Weinberg, Alexander, Reckart.
Front Row: Henehan, Hennier, Sebastian, Richardson, Barbe, Silvey.

STATISTICS OF THE SEASON

The East cagers this year were unexcelled by any team in defensive ability, but their lack of offensive strength proved to be their chief drawback. The comparison of the average number of points which East and her opponents accumulated shows the extent to which defense ruled the team. East averaged 13.4 points for the nine games, while the opponents averaged 15.2 points; but East won five of the nine games.

The conclusion of the Interscholastic League found East tied with Northeast and Central for second place. The season was one of close, hard fought victories and defeats for East. The Bears triumphed over Northeast by one point, defeated Ottawa by three points, and lost to Central by two points. Paseo extinguished East's championship hopes with a victory by two points. These games carried four of the closest finishes ever witnessed in high school competition.

ROBERT ALEXANDER, Captain

Bob was undoubtedly the most outstanding player on the East five and one of the league sensations. No matter what the odds or regardless of the circumstances, Bob was "cool and collected." The team always looked to him for moral support, as well as for the scoring punch he always gave when needed.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Some athletes are born, but others can be developed by training supervised by the coach during the course of the season. Such was the case in basketball this year, and it is to Mr. Cohlmeyer's credit. At the opening of training this season, Paul "Barney" O'Neal was striving for recognition on the second team, but before the season became history he had earned a position as a first team regular. Entered also with O'Neal as a second team man were Louis Richardson and Billy Quear. The progress of these boys increased to place them on the first team reserves with quarters in the first team games.

EAST 10-WYANDOTTE 31

Repeating her performance of the previous season, Wyandotte triumphed over an East team playing her first game of the season. The Bears' defense lacked in strength and their offense in velocity, but inexperience marked the effort as a whole.

EAST 13—NORTHEAST 12

The conclusion of East's opening game of the Interscholastic League found the Bears cherishing a one point victory over the defending Champion Vikings. Alexander held the scoring honors for the East team, having accumulated two field goals and two free throws. In the climaxing last quarter of this battle, the opponents staged a rally that threatened seriously to overcome the narrow East margin of victory.

EAST 15-OTTAWA 13

Determined to balance the score of the East-Ottawa football game, the Bears encountered the opponents at Ottawa and returned victorious. At the opening of the final quarter of this game, the opponents led 12-8, but a final rally instituted by Reed, Alexander, Henehan, Silvey and Reckart (that's the team) registered seven points to assure the victory for East.

EAST 15-MANUAL 6

The emerald and ebony warriors continued there series of victories by turning aside the offensive onslaught of the Manual Red Devils. The East quintet continued the invulnerable defense that marked the Northeast game as well as the entire season.

EAST 7—CENTRAL 9

This game, after seeing a second overtime period, was decided in favor of Central by a long but accurate shot from the center of the court by Linn Dannahower. The game undoubtedly was the hardest fought of the East schedule. It was a battle of defenses (as is evident by the score), with neither team cherishing more than a two point lead throughout the game. As a result of those two points Dannahower scored in that second overtime period, East was forced to admit her first defeat of the Interscholastic season and be content with a second place berth.

EAST 15-ST. JOSEPH BENTON 26

In her third outside game of the season the Bears were so humbled by a powerful offensive team that they were forced to acknowledge defeat again from an outside team. The St. Joe team possessed a center named Hickman whose towering stature enabled him to control all high-ups with ease. Reed led the East team in scoring honors by registering ten of the team's fifteen points.

EAST 8—PASEO 10

Scheduled to be the feature game of the fifth round of Interscholastic play, the East-Paseo battle proved also to be the sequel to that hair-raising East-Central performance. The Pirates and the Bears battled for four full quarters until finally the Pirates through main strength (we would like to think luck) succeeded in nosing out the East quintet in that climaxing last quarter, thanks to Walden and Longan of Paseo.

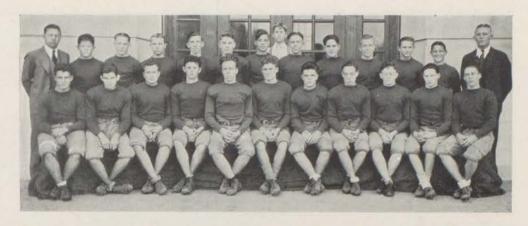

EAST 21—SOUTHWEST 17

The Bears succeeded in holding their own in the last minutes of this game despite the vicious rally the Indians staged. Coach Cohlmeyer inserted all of his reserves in this game without any resulting variation in the team's play either offensive or defensive. The score the East quintet succeeded in gaining in this game was the highest of the season.

EAST 17-WESTPORT 14

The green and black quintet closed the season in a tie with Northeast and Central for second place by a final victory over the Westport Tigers. The Westport representatives were easily the superiors in height, but the Bears succeeded in showing the upper hand in scoring and floor play. "Barney" O'Neal, East forward, demonstrated unrecognized ability as a basketball player by the air of experience he left among those lanky Westport players. Ward Reed and Bob Alexander both played important roles also in deciding the outcome of the game for East.

SECOND TEAM FOOTBALL

Back Row: John Moore, Westbrook, Bargar, Mook, Abrio, Jury, Queer, Anderton, Richardson, Pew, Hansell, Wilcoxson, Pierce, Mr. Thelen.

Front Row: Murphree, Strandberg, Johnson, Jackson, Robertson, Lundstrom, Cristy, Yates, Fehrenbach, Scroggins, Pratt.

SECOND TEAM BASKETBALL

TRACK TEAM

Second Row: Funston, Dettweiler, Hartman, Lundstrom, Wynn, Hayward, Van Deusen, Alexander, Bedingfield, Fahlstrom.

TRACK SEASON

These boys, representing the best East could offer as track athletes, were unsuccessful as a team in bidding for recognition as a high school squad; but theirs was a successful endeavor in consistency of performance and "never say die" spirit, which is, after all, one of the real aims of competitive athletics.

The outstanding performers of this team were: Captain Ed Van Deusen, '33, whose entry in the hurdles invariably meant a first or second; Paul "Barney" O'Neal, '34, for his very successful endeavors as a pole vaulter; Garland Reckart, '32, for his success as a high and low hurdler; and Eugene Potts, '34, who was East's biggest hope in the century and the furlong dashes. While other boys starred on various occasions, these above mentioned athletes were the most consistent in their performance.

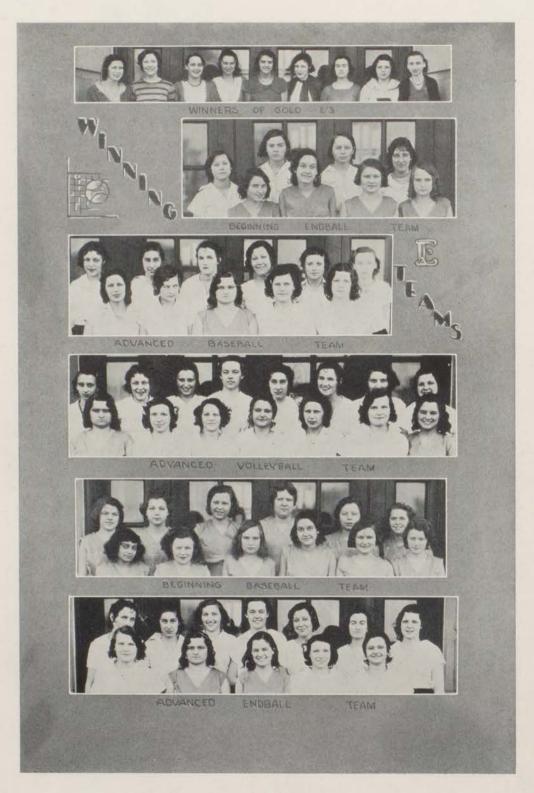

Next year with a squad containing Van Deusen, Potts, O'Neal, Barbe, Campbell, Gray and Marchisio as veterans, East's record should be greatly different from this year's. Also, the eligibility of Farris O'Dell, '33, as a high jumper should place him in the head-lines of every newspaper report.

EDWARD VAN DEUSEN, Track Captain

Ed's superiority over his teammates as an athlete was sufficient to warrant his selection as captain despite the fact that he was only a junior this year. The first two dual meets of the season were opportunity enough for Ed to win his letter, but he continued to be the high-point man for the East team in every meet in which he was a participant. His specialty was the 120-yard high hurdles, but he could perform equally well for East in the pole vault, high jump and 220-yard low hurdles.

The girls are given athletic awards for meritorious work just as the boys. The highest award is a gold E, awarded to seniors and juniors; second, a pillow top; third, a large E; and lowest, a small E. They are awarded as follows:

									Points		Team Points
Gold E .				90			41	100	150	plus	50
Pillow Top	V.	141	02		4	2			110	plus	40
Large E .								1971	70	plus	30
Service III									40	plus	20

Each girl receives five points for being on a class team. One point is awarded for each mile hiked by a group. There are many other things for which points may be awarded.

The following girls are winners of awards:

GOLD E-200 POINTS

Karline Bertram, Betty Dallam, Beulah Hare, Margaret Holmden, Lourene Johnson, Mary Mayes, Esther Milholland, Elaine Peckenpaugh, Helena Blaine, Janice Rupe, Lorene Seever.

PILLOW TOPS-150 POINTS

GIRLS' ATHLETICS

The members of the girls' athletic department, under the direction of Miss Roads and Miss Segelbaum, have done very well this year in their various tournaments.

The advanced classes and the beginning classes have their inter-class games separately. Each class has a baseball team, an endball team and a volleyball team. Different teams are chosen for each tournament.

In the advanced classes the winners in the different games were as follows:

Baseball-first hour team.

Margaret Holmden, captain, Helena Blaine, Hazel Green, Lourene Johnson, Mary Mayes, Janice Rupe, Kathryn Tonge, Dorothea Welland, Marguerite Wolfe and Virginia Frazier.

The substitutes: Mary Doran, Louise St. John, Betty Dallam.

Endball-first hour team.

Myrtle Burge, captain, Flora May Brewer, Beryl Winters, Betty Dallam, Helena Blaine, Dorothea Welland, Virginia Frazier, Margaret Holmden, Esther Milholland and Lena Felt.

Substitutes: Jennie Dombroski, Margaret Hathhorn, Velma Hedberg, Vivian Lester.

Volleyball-first hour team.

Flora May Brewer, captain, Helena Blaine, Jennie Dombroski, Virginia Frazier, Margaret Hathhorn, Lourene Johnson, Vivian Lester, Mary Mayes, Lorene Seever, Dorothea Welland.

Substitutes: Grace Burk, Betty Dallam, Cecelia May, Esther Milholland, Beryl Winters, Myrtle Burge, Lena Felt.

In the beginning classes the winners were as follows:

Baseball-seventh hour team.

Esther Brown, captain, Ellen Tosh, Genevieve Pycior, Muriel Rousselot, Shirley Randol, Evelyn Stokes, Bessie Burge, Angelina Gnotta, Marion Norquist, Carolyn Keltner.

Substitutes: Vivian Warner, Dorothy Helm, Mamie Sudheimer, Irene Keltner.

Volley ball—seventh hour team.

Marjorie Holland, captain, Esther Brown, Eathel Hayes, Genevieve Pycior, Shirley Randol, Evelyn Spalding, Kathleen Stone, Esther Ward.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

As stated in the War Department program for the training of Junior R. O. T. C. units:

"The general object of this course is primarily to lay the foundation of intelligent citizenship by inculcating in the student habits of precision, orderliness, courtesy, correctness of posture and deportment, leadership, and respect for and loyalty to constituted authority; and secondly, to prepare him for further military instruction which will qualify him for a position of leadership in time of national emergency."

The Kansas City R. O. T. C. junior units are administered by Harry C. Mitchell, Captain, U. S. A. retired.

The East High School battalion is composed of three companies and a military band, with a total enrollment of 147. Drill periods are held each day during first, second and fourth hours under the instruction of Sergeant James T. Jenkins.

Seventy-five cadets came out for the rifle team. The team was composed of Cadets Santhoff, Potts, Harrington, Moad, and Corporal Perry, Sergeant Mansker, Captains Johnson, Jones, Bruce, and Major Branch.

The battalion marched in the Armistice Day parade, November 11.

November 14 the East battalion marched in the grand entry at the American Royal Live Stock Show.

The Mothers' Auxiliary of the Officers' Club was formed October 16. Mrs. F. R. Jones was elected president; Mrs. G. W. Branch, vice-president; Mrs. R. S. Johnson, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. J. B. Alley, chairman of the hospitality committee.

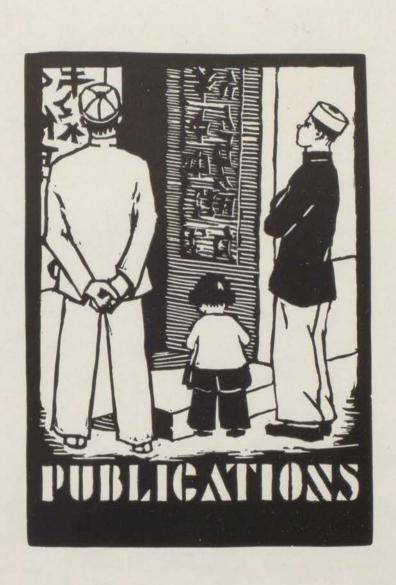

Each year the East battalion nominates five girls from the senior class as sponsor officers. The faculty names two as sponsor-lieutenants. The senior girls vote on the sponsor-major, the remaining two girls being sponsor-captains.

This year's sponsor officers were Sponsor-Major Carolyn Thompson; Sponsor-Captains, Mary Bright and Winnie Branch; Sponsor-Lieutenants, Virginia Rice and Pauline Singleton.

The East High School rifle team placed seventh in the interscholastic matches of the Kansas City high schools.

The rifle team placed first and won the Leacock trophy for the second consecutive year in the four-state rifle match held February 27 at Kemper Military Academy, Boonville, Missouri. The team's score of 739 out of a possible 800 is the world's highest score ever fired by a high school team. After winning this title, the team defeated over 400 teams to win the mid-west sectional championship. They were presented the William Randolph Hearst trophy. The team was composed of Richard Branch, Richard Bruce, Kenneth Jones and Larry Mansker. Jennings Johnson was alternate.

The East R. O. T. C. Corps gave an exhibition of Lentz Cadence Drill at the annual Junior Units R. O. T. C. circus held in Convention Hall April 15.

SENIOR WILL

We, the Class of 1932 of East High School of Kansas City, in the county of Jackson and state of Missouri, considering the uncertainty of this mortal life and being of a sound mind and doubtful memory, do hereby make our last will and testament, that is to say, to wit:

First: The charges for hauling the senior class to the municipal ash-heap shall be added to the senior deficit.

Second: To the Class of 1933 we will and bequeath our invisible crowns and visionary, but nevertheless real, sceptres as rulers of this domain.

Third: To the Class of 1934 we give our best wishes for future prosperity, that they may do unto the seniors as the seniors did not do unto us—a Junior-Senior Prom.

Fourth: To the Class of 1935 we pass the halls in which to loiter, the bannisters on which to slide, the locker doors to slam, and the study halls to "ditch."

Fifth: To the language, English, mathematics, science, journalism, athletic, R. O. T. C., domestic science and manual training departments, our interlinear "ponies," essays to copy, bent compasses, broken test tubes, "perfect" news stories, flabbergasted footballs, "snappy" uniforms, dented pots and pans, and toothless saws.

Sixth: To all and sundry we bequeath the new addition and its new halls in which to loiter, virgin bannisters on which to slide, and shiny locker doors to slam.

Seventh: We hereby appoint our kind counselor and good principal, Clifford H. Nowlin, executor of our last will and testament.

In witness whereof, we hereunto set our hand and seal this tenth day of June, A. D. 1932.

SENIOR CLASS OF 1932.

In the presence of the testator and in the presence of each of us, and at the request of the testator, we declare this to be the last will and testament of the Class of 1932.

James Kratz of the Class of 1933, Paul O'Neal of the Class of 1934, Ella Silvey of the Class of 1935.

SENIOR PROPHECY

The year, 1957—the month, June—the cool summer air refreshing—for the thousandth time I raised my eyes to the man-controlled clouds and thanked Professor Wesley Schroeder for his weather-generator.

Remember how hot it used to be in summer, and cold in winter? How hot it was when I had to run from that cannibal chief in Waikiki? How hot it was the time I crossed the Sahara in a Ford? And how we sweltered when we graduated from high school? It was just about this time of the year we held Commencement Day at East. What was the day?—June 9. And the year?—'32 from '57—Why! Only two days until our twenty-fifth anniversary. Why not do something? A greeting to Mr. Nowlin—just the thing!

Grabbing my hat, I took the chair car to television station X-12, where I broadcast a call for the addresses of all former classmates. I then hopped an elevator to the roof, and hired an air cab for Chicago. I didn't carry any baggage, as travelers merely bought new clothes when the ones they wore became soiled.

In Chicago I found Flora Mae Brewer, Laura Brown and Elvena Duderstadt, artists—billboard. Pauline Singleton was a nurse at the offices of Singleton, Jones and Sons, Dental Surgeons—Kenneth Jones, of course. Marie Wheat was Chicago's "reforming mayor"; Mary K. Campbell, president of the First National Bank; Grace Harmon, editor of the Chicago Tribune; and Vivian Bickel, columnist. Jasper Mossberg was big pineapple and sub-machine gun man. Porter Rude was found among the collection of fossils in the Field Museum. At the zoo I saw Bennie Young, sole living gangster, thanks to Mayor Wheat. Joseph Welland ran an elevator in the new Skye-Skrayper Building, which took two weeks for a trip to the top and back.

From there I flew to New York and found Mayor Frances Tudor. Bruce Rust was a Park Avenue milliner; Don Lee Sabin, a beauty shop owner. Otto Rumpf ran an exclusive dress shop on Fifth Avenue. Melvin McIntyre was a feminine beauty culturist. Carolyn Thompson had made millions lettering "Bell Out of Order" signs. Melvin Beyer lived next door, of course, and was one of our noted coal-hopper painters. Here I found the "One and Only Lantz." Pete was the sole survivor of that notorious class of tars with four-masted schooners tattoed on their chests, exhibited by Virginia Stilts. In the same show was Arlynne Wagner, originator of the Hop, Skip and Giggle, latest dance craze. At the Metropolitan Opera House I found Herr Roberte von Clarkson—ushering. Glenn Barnett was editor of the Ladies' Home Journal; Garland Reckart conducted the Infants' Department; Willard Pemberton, the beauty aids department; and Willard Olson was "The Confidante." Hudson Corley was secretary to the president of the Women's League for the Substitution of Women's Names Instead of Men's in Marriage. Charles Bedingfield was the society editor of the Herald. Herbert Harper was a milk-man. Vernon Donnigan was sergeant of the police department.

In Washington, D. C., I found Winnie Branch, President of the United States, and Chief Justice Altamae Beard. Also Senators Louise Sparks, Lorraine Quackenbush, Jane Lloyd and Elaine Peckenpaugh; and Representatives Mildred Schupp, Mabel Mahnken and Sue Rust. Dorrance Mathis, the husband of Representative Peckenpaugh (or Mathis), was found walking the family lap-dog. Mrs. Mary Johnson, the former Mary Bright, was Secretary of Education—Jennings was at home with the children. Gordon Shumaker was a Senate page, carrying everything from lip-rouge to new hats. Lorraine Campbell was the Secretary of War. Alvin Singer conducted a thriving business airing babies and dogs for hen-pecked senators' husbands. Stella Koutelas, Dorothy King and Grace Wulfert were members of the House Committee on the Eighteenth Amendment. Fred Ewing and John Martin were pages in the House. Leo West was official laundry man for the representatives' youngsters. Wilford Stepp, Clarence Perry and Floyd Owens sold balloons, popcorn and candy in the House.

I now hopped the trans-Atlantic plane for London. Virginia Wagner and Myrtle Burge were co-pilots; Milton Gartrell, a host on the air-liner.

London contained the Dutchess of York's husband, Hugh Nevins; Malcolm Shelton, man in waiting to the Queen; Frances O'Maley in the House of Lords, from the Irish Free State: Esther Milholland, Marchioness of Waterbury; Geneva Chamberlin, Duchess of Waterloo, and Regina Clements and Mildred Downey, owners of the Rap'n' Wink, where Virginia Iones pounded the ivories—she was a dentist on the second floor. Ruth Bell was a handsome cab driver. From London I proceeded to Paris and discovered Beryl Winters, now Madame de Lannen; Josephine Hansell and her petite pulchritude emporium; Madame La Busch, or Caroline, in her ultra-smart Shoppe de Bergere, featuring Esther Schara and Marie Piehler as models; Marie Corazzin and Earline Allen as members of the French Parliament; Monsieur Cole, Bob himself, a designer of dresses for the best dressed women of Paris. Paris, still thought of as the source of all feminine beauty, was being criticized by Mrs. Jack Callaghan and husband, Mrs. Jack Easley and husband, also by Dora Stevenson and Helen Miller, teachers enroute.

Next to Moscow. Lorene Berning, Gladys Frazell, Marian Seever, Marjorie Roberts and Margaret Wayland were members of the Domestic Science Department of the Soviet Republic. Ward Reed was Recreation Engineer; Mark Green head of the Department of Agriculture, and Edward Dobbs, American Ambassador.

had now been gone thirty-six hours and was one-third of the way around the world. Now I flew south and located Roger Fortin, ambassador to Lithuania; Louis Guion, Italian Prime Minister; Margaret Garrett, Viennese dancer, and Madeline Higgins, secretary in the Switzerland embassy. In Switzerland I heard Ruth Orndorff, the only yodel teacher, teaching Swiss youngsters to yodel. At St. Moritz I saw such famous grads" as Edna Ferguson, novelist; Virginia Miller, aviatrix; Ruth Peery, New York society matron; and Evert Caton, porter, who had inherited a fortune.

At one of the coast towns of Italy I learned of a strange American town about one hundred miles down the coast of the Mediterranean which was inhabited by women only. Thither I journeyed and found the town of Libera established in 1949 by the fiery Mildred Cahill and her band of indignant followers who protested against living among the degenerate, insignificant men. In this colony of advocates of "women's rights were Anna Lee Lefler, Thelma Scrivner, Anna Peuster, Eileen Mundy, Mary Elizabeth Ward, Valerie Taylor and Lourene Johnson. In Africa were several explorers and big game hunters: Ava Keltner, Helen Bowen, Catherine Brynds and Shirley Brunson.

In Egypt I heard of Bob Henehan, now Sheik Bib Hana Han, who had acquired a harem of four hundred "Egyptian Ellas." Wyard Munden was the Abyssinian American ambassador.

In India I found General Donald Roby and his six hundred flea-bitten camels. Ruth Randol, Mary Katherine Hedge and Ruth Payne were members of Mahatma Gandhi's laundry staff.

Charles Ditsch was the American Minister to Persia. Carlos Cook was a traveling salesman for the Homecraft Rug Co., U. S. A. Kathryn Stewart was a saleswoman for the Aladdin Metal Lamp Co.

Thence to Siberia and Herbert Rothwell's world-famous Maple Grove Kennels of Siberian cheese-hounds. Here, too, was Durward Nipp of Nipp and Tuck, Revolutionists Wholesale or Retail.

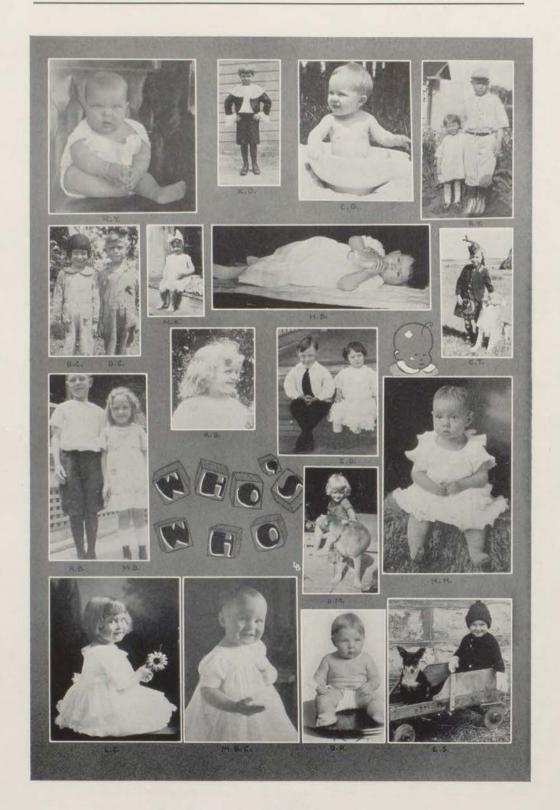

In Manchuria were Marvin Hedge, developer of the coal fields-a miner-and Kenneth Kellstrom, governor.

Melvin Wilson was a Chinese novelties manufacturer. Russell Madden sold Fords, and Dorothy Forrester, missionary, tried to save the souls of the poor heathen Americans. Marian Faulhaber was an advocate of Chinese women's rights, and Myrtle Eldridge was the Empress' maid-in-waiting. Bernice Degenfelder and Helena Blaine were members of the Home Economics Department. Joseph Highman, B.S.A., S.O.S., X.Y.Z., was official dog-house builder for his majesty, the Emperor. Here I ran into First-Class Seaman Thomas Kneaves, with at least five girls in every port, whether he had been there or not.

Now I flew to the Philippines for the signatures of William Dettweiler, governor; Russell Kennicutt, secretary of finance; and Frieda Gibbs, official mosquito swatter.

Beulah Hare was a teacher in Haiti; Gladys Briggs was Empress of Taihiti, one of the smaller islands; Geraldine Hathorn was a teacher of hip-juggling in Hawaii; "Mike"

Coughenour was the football coach at Hawaii U.; Russell Darr was stopping in Honolulu on his way around the world, thumb trouble having developed.

I immediately boarded the plane for San Francisco, where I added the signature of Sherman Sharp, a porter on the air-liner. Donald Wade was official polisher of the Golden Gate. Cliff Stillwagon was a real estate agent, selling lots twenty-five feet under water. Bill Wilkison was a Montana livestock raiser and champion hog caller of the country.

Jonathan Peelle was a big Mid-West "apple and cider" man. Marvin Silvey, managed the Blue Streaks, professional football team. Hollywood contained Pauline Foreman, of course—she was a prominent movie star's maid. Katherine Stenfors, Evelyn Hawkins, Mae Blossom Clark and Karline Bertram were novelists in Los Angeles. Walter Terrill, Lawrence Stacy, William Coleman, Robert Alexander and Harvey Agin were future divorcees at Reno, Nevada.

At last I reached Kansas City and found several telegrams awaiting me as the result of my broadcast. Helen Madison was a flap-jack artist in Alaska. Margaret Ramsey was an oil magnate in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Marcella Pruessner was an Arkansas revenue officer. Dorothy Keady was a Mexican revolutionist. Alice Hockett, a Brazilian ambassador. Jeanette Janoe was a slack-wire walker with Ringling Bros. Circus. Margaret Holmden was a "rubber" stock saleswoman in Philadelphia. Virginia Hines was a Milwaukee near-beer baron. Harriet Smith was a Northwest Mounted Policewoman in Manitoba, Canada. Her motto is, "Get your man."

And in Kansas City, Virginia Rice was president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, since some brute had stepped on Teddy's tail. Janet McLeod was principal at East. Lina Schock was a manual training teacher at Manual. Edna Marie Lindstedt and Genevieve Lewis were pilots for the N. A. T. Hazel McKee was Kansas City's mayor. Virginia Ladeski managed a real estate company. Marie Lamanno was an attorney for John Doe & Co.

Martha Anschutz had become one of the most forceful and fiery Socialist leaders. Virginia Cosby was president of the Chamber of Commerce. Beatrice Carney had become curator of the Nelson Gallery of Art. Anne Katherine Carr was president of the Carr Candy Company. Katherine Grabb held the reins of the Democratic party in Kansas City, succeeding Tom Pendergast, Jr. Helen Gulick taught a boys' domestic science class at Southwest. Mary Eastin was a Joliet, Illinois, rock crusher—manufacturer.

Larry Mansker was a member of the All-American needle-threading championship team. Bernard McCarty had become a power in the newspaper world—he oiled the presses at the Star's office. Billy Knowles, Richard Branch, Richard Alley, James Doran and Paul Bridge had married and settled down. Mr. Branch may now be found at home washing the dishes and the baby.

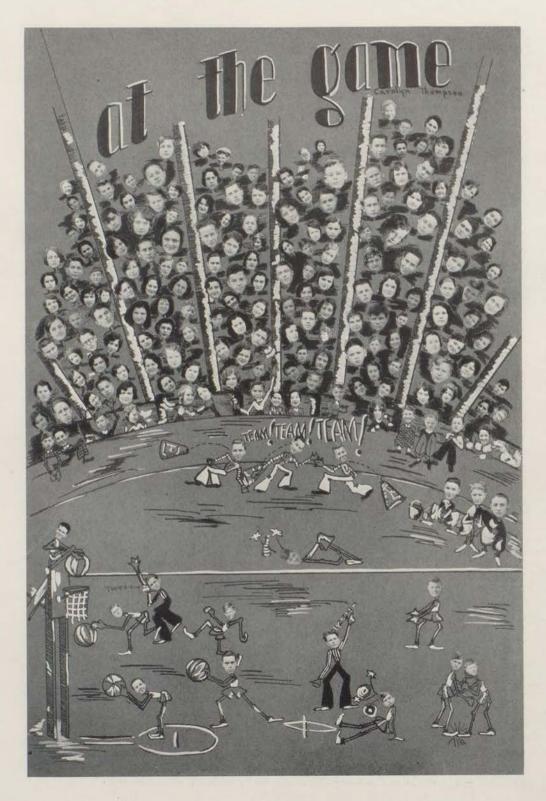

Kenneth Bradley was a beauty operator. Frank Frazon butlered for a South Side philanthropist. Martin Enloe was the police patron, taking care of the few and timid males now committing offenses. Richard Bruce, the last woman-hater of consequence, acted as High and Exalted Adviser on Male Affairs.

Bertram Carney, Harold Dodson, Leroy Jacobs, Art Hammen, Jack Cohen and Harold Cisco were chorus men. Ernest Katherman was a cosmetics expert for the few women who still regarded men as their equals. Miller Anderson still thrilled crowds with his crafty, shifting, swift, darting plays—he was champion checker player of the universe. Catherine Harper was a blacksmith in the one-horse town of Rosedale.

At last I had all the signatures of the members of the Class of 1932. I scrawled a hasty Lyle Arnold at the bottom of the list and rushed with it to Mr. Nowlin's home, where I presented him with the products of my labor.

The greeting read as follows:

Clifford H. Nowlin: We, the Class of 1932, on this, our twenty-fifth anniversary, wish to express our sincerest gratitude for your splendid example and helpful counsel during our four years at East High School, which we feel has been a dominant factor in any success we may have experienced in the past quarter-century. May we voice our heartfelt hopes for your continued happiness and prosperity and longevity.

AEOLUS

(Gold Medal Essay, Literary Contest) By CAROLYN THOMPSON

Haven't you always been someone else? There is no impudence in my query. Of course I don't mean to suggest that you are living under an assumed name, or that you are "starting over again." Instead, I mean aren't you someone else in imagination, in your deepest-buried, for treasure-only, mind. From that drab chrysalis may burst an ardent caballero, or a flaming chorine, or a dark mystic, or a —but you know better than I whom you become when the narrow personality walls become too restricting.

Now ever since I was a small, small girl, since my mother read to me fascinating tales, I have been Aeolus, king of the winds. That mythic god is my appropriated being. Wholly he orders my hours or dream thoughts. Such power is his! Does he not sway those aerial currents which to we mortals are so uncontrollable? On his most petty whim rests the path of chinook and blizzard. Kiss and fondle gleaming wheat tops, or a child's curls; crack and strain Sequoia; sculpture desert sands; for his sole amusement all these things the four puppets perform. His sceptre alone pulls their far-reaching strings.

Aeolus is an absolute monarch; too, he is an inquisitive monarch. (Mother's book didn't say so, but I made him that way.) Whether one appropriately would give a sovereign just that particular attribute, I do not know. Nevertheless, I do give it to him. Really, why might such a potentate be not human? Don't those whom we love endear themselves to us in a still larger measure by their small faults and mannerisms? Already the strong pipe and wooden leg of Peter Stuyvesant is overshadowing in histories and hearts the work done by him in the Dutch Colony. So does the characteristic of Aeolus bring him nearer to me. In him, however, it does not border our back fence noisiness, but touches rather upon benevolence and a wish for human relationship. Can't you see him giving that puppet detective quartet invisible wishing-cloaks, magnifying glasses and long black cigars, then tugging them away to strange places?

Aeolus's theater is located on the busy corner of Entire Globe. His four performers are versatile. The people on all ways of life they depict. His stage has a back drop of prairies and slums; it is set with African long grass and Penguin haunts. I would give all to do, to be, as he. He has merely to quirk a string, hold a breath for one tense moment, and then he is with a Chinese barterer, or following milady's perkey beret down the Champs Elysees. He then may be with his marionettes, saving the sporting prestige of a team whose boats win by tradition; filling and swelling the graceful sails, tauting the humming ropes, blowing stiff the pilot's hair. Instantly, now, they are at the scorching equator, fitfully refreshing shuffling, bronze plantationers. Whimsically he will flit through the delicate maze of a moth's antennae, or catch up and play with a wafting dandelion parachute. To bound down tumbled mountains with a foaming stream as comrade is within his grasp in moments of exuberance.

Having you think that Aeolus is primarily a pleasure-seeking ruler would never do. Instead, you must realize why he has been stationed as Lord of the Winds. He has been placed where his mysterious sagacity most interprets itself. A most responsible position is his. Upon seeing the problems of his world people, the heart-break of a "Hell's Kitchen" child, the weariness of a struggling homesteader, he ponders the situation in his wise old head; then magically to them he dispatches a consoling zephyr. He sends to them relaxation, ecstasy, solace.

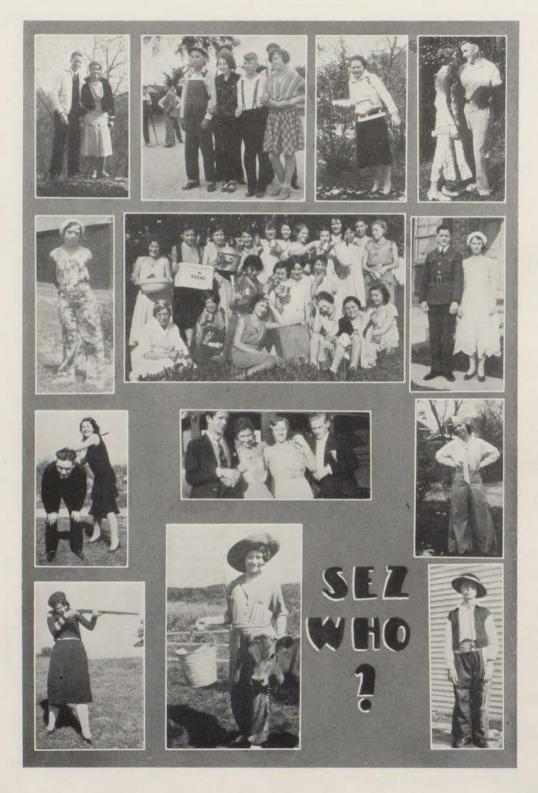

Haven't you yourself at sometime fled away from it all, from everything? Haven't you fled to your own sanctuary, whether it be hilltop pine cathedral, waving meadow, or cool, surprise grotto? In that hour Aeolus will never fail you.

When some matter—trivial to you, momentous to me—has upset me, has tightened my breast, my solace is found as a gale bends me, tears through every separating boundary of my body. In my ears is the roar of stirring bugles signalling "Advance." As if I were irritatingly slow, the impatient thing tugs at my hair, making of it a bristling Lilliputian array of bayonets. The movements of my garments sound the swishing stacatto of a cadence drill. My nose even is thrust to attention as that wind commands, "Forward March."

As an inner joy so secret whisks you away to your own world, isn't it the most satisfying thing to drop down upon a shade bespattered spot. With the fiddle and trill of a capering breeze attuned with your own heart strings, the shadows perform a gavotte before you. The rustling of the grass keeps time with that breeze-pulse. Yellow dandelions haggle and bend with chickweed. Young air currents skip at a maypole of daisy petals. A laughing, gay country green is all about. Nature is shouting, "Come to the Joy Fair."

Again, when sorrow has deepened the soul, creep to a brave aged evergreen. Here softly with you the wind will moan. The minor tones will envelop you within yourself. That scar, at first so livid, will cool. Aeolus sends to you the perfect condolence; he forms within you the perfect reconciliation.

Did you know that guiding you through your labyrinth were the wind king's strings? From the imprisoning mazes of your mind he frees you. He shares with you the gladness; the perfect confidante is found in him. In spite of skyscrapers and industrialism, I will never give up my fancied alias. None of the hair tearing of the universe is able to take away our natural desire to be someone else. The dream temples in the land of imagination are the richest there can be. What quantity you take from it makes no difference. It is overbrimming ever. Aeolus is the lax treasurer. He is in every fiber of me. But your other being is just as relaxingly entrancing, I am sure.

DRIPPING WATER

The Gold Medal Story in the 1932 Literary Contest By VIRGINIA RICE

A blue white glitter of steel raced downward through the air as the Frenchman leaned suddenly forward. The Spaniard opposite drew back quickly, but his heavilybraided jacket sleeve remained upon the table as before. It was pinned there by a thin, steel dirk imbedded in the table. There was an immediate ominous silence in the room. Not a word was spoken, but there was a tensing of movement among the nondescript Spaniards grouped about the tables of the wine shop. The light of the oil lanterns, swinging from the overhead beams, was dimmed by rising wreathes of smoke as the men puffed nervously upon long, brown cheroots.

Then the Frenchman raked the gold coins from the table into his blouse front with a characteristically swift movement of his arm. His opponent quailed when his glance met the steady, penetrating look in the Frenchman's eyes. In another moment the dirk was again in its sheath beneath the latter's armpit, and he was but a few strides from the narrow, swinging doors at the entrance. Not a man moved to intercept him; but the Spaniard swung about in his chair, and scattering sawdust from the path of his foot, leaned forward. His face was deeply flushed beneath the natural brown of his race. "Senor!" The soft liquid accent filled the room.

The Frenchman checked his stride and faced about warily, one hand within his blouse. He did not speak, but waited.

"We shall meet again, Senor," the Spaniard explained in a peculiarly indifferent tone conveying an implied threat.

Then Carlos Sanchon turned back to the table and waved to the apologetic barkeeper for more spirits. Maurice Jaures stepped out into the narrow street among the vesper devotees with their gayly-colored shawls and bandoleros, and scampering, halfclothed gamins, and made his way quickly to another section of the city of Granada,

Maurice did not sleep well that night. It might have been the thick, adobe walls of his room, radiating their daily absorption of heat; or it might have been the interminable scampering of the rats in the straw tick of his bed. But then-there was a Spaniard's threat even though he had been caught cheating!

It was early evening. Whatever of coolness might be detected came on the vacillating Mediterranean breeze, as it lazily fanned through the dusty streets of Granada. Aged, disreputable buildings lined the streets, their upper stories projecting above the low doorways; conspiring, as it were, to exclude sunlight by day, and moonlight by night, from searching too scrupulously into the dim interiors of the shops. The streets of Granada wound about to form a maze of innumerable "patios," blind alleys, and junctures.

Two Spaniards strolled languidly across the square and met in the soft glow of sunset beneath a twisted eucalyptus tree. The tree bent its gnarled boughs above the crude, cobble-stone well in the center of the patio.

'A pleasant siesta, I hope, Senor Parsola?" queried Sanchon in his carefully modulated voice.

Senor Parsola adroitly concealed the look of displeasure which expressed itself unwittingly upon his placid countenance.

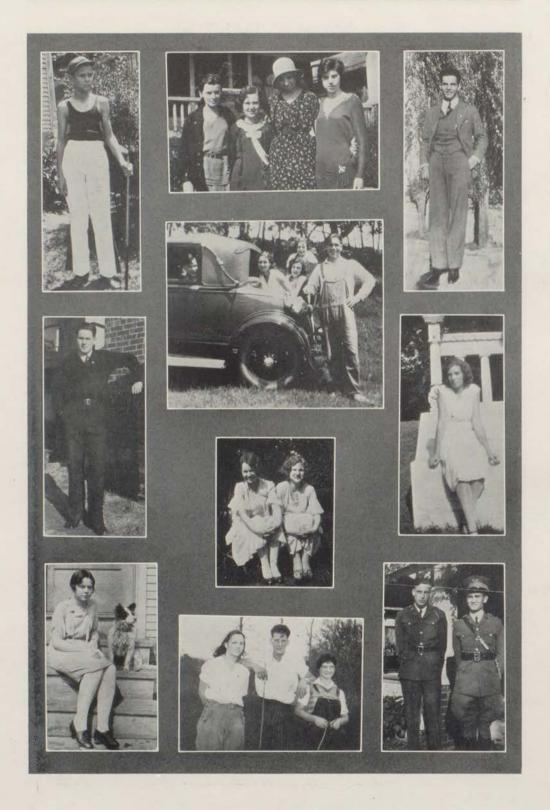

'Pleasant, oh yes, but I usually miss my cup as a consequence," he wearily replied, in anticipation of the other's invitation.

"Then a glass or so of Medula on me, Senor—it is so dusty on the street."

Sanchon's sombrero swept the cobble-stones.

With a nod of acceptance, Parsola, strutting pompously, accompanied Sanchon into a nearby shop where they seated themselves at a table in a remote corner of the barroom and engaged in a low, earnest conversation. Parsola objected, strenuously objected. Why if he were discovered—an expressive gesture indicated the severance of his head from his short, corpulent body.

"But it is impossible, Senor; you know not what you ask of me, a mere attendant, We would both be sentenced to the chamber of tortures.

His body writhed from the pure mental suggestion of the consequences he would be forced to endure. Gold was produced. What was gold to the honor of a Sanchon? All he asked was to be allowed to speak to the Inquisitors for five minutes, just five minutes, and they would understand, then, what an important message he had for them.

At length, after a cautious inspection of the patrons of "The Golden Goblet," the pouch of coins was exchanged and the agreement concluded. The two strolled to the door. The moon laid a silver sheen upon the smooth square of gravel, but it was shadowy just outside the door.

"At eight, then," whispered Parsola, his eyes darting about the room behind them. "At eight," echoed Sanchon, as he slipped into the shadows and was gone.

The next evening two cloaked forms met in a secluded blind alley and disappeared immediately within a vine covered passageway. The mellow tones of the far distant vesper bells tolled the hour. Finally, after being led by Parsola past guard and through subterranean corridors, Sanchon was admitted to an ante-room where he awaited summons. When ushered through the doorway of an inquisition chamber, Sanchon's nerves nearly betrayed him; for he was to stand before the mighty Inquisition of Spain.

The walls of the room were hung with black velvet tapestries; and the room was lighted by three candles, each upon a tall, silver candalabrum. About five paces before him and behind the dim lights, were three hooded figures at a low draped table. He stepped forward hesitantly, kneeled, and began his prosposal.

'Sir Inquisitors, I am but an unknown Spanish subject; but, having conceived an idea which will undoubtedly be of great interest to you, I seek audience with you to offer it for your acceptance or rejection.

He paused; but as there was no word of dissent from the hooded trio, he continued rapidly, discarding his mock humility in his zeal.

Noble Senors, your methods of punishment are known throughout the world for the unique and frightful tortures which they inflict upon your enemies, but I, a poor man, have devised one more slowly agonizing than any which you have ever used. I came

Realizing his audacity, he sank again to his knees, in dread suspense. No man had ever spoken thus boldly before the all powerful Inquisition and lived to boast of it. After a short and inaudible conference with his confederate, the middle figure leaned forward, and demanded distinctly, "Your price, Vermin?"
Sanchon protested weakly, "But just a little favor, noble Senors."

"We shall see if it is of value as you claim; then if it is not too great a favor, ah-

Perhaps."
Yes, yes, noble Senors, of course, of course. As you know, Sir Inquisitors, no man's mind can endure monotony. As monotony persists, the victim loses first reason, then self-control, and finally passes through extremely slow degrees of torture when the monotony acts upon his nervous system.

"I suggest that the subject be fastened securely in a heavy, metal armchair, in the center of an unfurnished room. From above his head, through the ceiling, a drop of water should fall, one a second, directly upon his head.

He stopped and glanced up eagerly from his kneeling posture in anticipation of approval. Receiving none, he added hastily: "Thus it is in your power to make this continue hour after hour until your designs are complete.'

Again the three conferred, and then, with a low, mirthless laugh, the leader spoke. "And your favor——?"

"Ah, Master Inquisitor, merely that a certain French gutter-rat be the first victim. One Jaures, by name.

The soft wavering chords of a guitar seemed to drift into the street upon the warm, gardenia-scented breeze. Monsieur Maurice Jaures leaned upon the sill of his room's solitary window and pensively regarded the blue, star-strewn heavens, as he listened to the sentimental notes of a serenade. The street below was still, save for the occasional soft shuffle of passing drinksters, late frequenters of a nearby cafe. The latticed window shutters swung in the wind with low creaks.

Jaures turned quickly from the window as a hand grasped one of his shoulders.

His eyes, unaccustomed to the dark interior of the room, were momentarily useless. "Oh, Marguerita, is it you?" he inquired in a tone of relief. "You frightened me

It was not Marguerita!

"You are summoned before his Majesty's Holy Inquisition," commanded a hooded form at his side, with an air of pronouncing a judgment.

Jaures recoiled in fear and leaned heavily upon the window sill for support.

"Bon Dieu! What have I done?" he cried.

He now perceived a second figure, at his other side, and the perspiration upon his pallid face gleamed in the moonlight. The two indistinct shapes remained silent and immovable. He glanced quickly over his shoulder to the window, gauging its height from the floor.

"One does not escape from the Inquisition of Spain, Senor," warned the guard who had first spoken, sensing Jaures' intention to leap through the opening. "Your knife," he ordered sternly.

From his blouse front, the Frenchman produced his sole weapon and handed it to a black-robed escort in resignment. The latter flipped it insolently past Jaures, where it sank its tip into the wooden window frame.

The three left the room silently. The serenade concluded with an exultant note, and then only the creak of the shutters at irregular intervals disturbed the quiet.

As the guards closed the door behind him, Jaures faced the man who sat in a highbacked chair at the opposite side of the room. It was Carlos Sanchon! The Spaniard eyed him cooly, with a sardonic sneer twisting his lips.

"We meet again, Senor." The soft liquid accent was irritating in its unnatural melody. Sanchon motioned towards the only other article of furniture in the room, a chair similar to the one in which he was seated and exactly opposite at Jaures' left.

"Be seated. I wish to have a few words with you," he added, affecting a dignified

Jaures seated himself cautiously and scrutinized the small room minutely; then he fixed his attention upon Sanchon, watching the Spaniard's every movement as he talked and gestured.

"Senor, the honor of a Sanchon is ever upheld. At my request, you are a prisoner of the Inquisition, and will meet your doom when I so desire. Interested? Ah, yes, it will be my satisfaction to tell you precisely how you are to die." He chuckled gleefully.

'At my command you will be fastened in that chair in which you sit. When I pull this cord on the wall, your chair will move through a door in the wall behind you, and you will find yourself in the center of a small, square room. The one opening will then close.'

"Then, oh—then, Senor, you will pay for your insolence. You will curse, it is so quiet, and just dripping water. Then hours will become eternity and you will weep and scream and-

With a sharp snap and a grinding rush Sanchon's chair unexpectedly slid backwards into a black void, which opened in the wall.

For an instant Jaures saw the Spaniard's gaping mouth, staring eyes, and the steel bands which had automatically fastened themselves on his wrists. Then he was facing a gray wall. He was alone.

FINALE

The three hooded figures bent together in conference behind the black-draped bench. The middle figure rapped sharply. Then the kneeling man before the table spoke respectfully, "Master Inquisitor, your orders have been obeyed. The secret is safe, for the inventor now tests his own invention.

At that moment a bewildered Frenchman with a drawn and haggard face stumbled into his room, muttering to himself in perplexity, "Dripping water. Mon Dieu, just -VIRGINIA RICE. dripping water.

SNOW

(Literary Contest Gold Medal Poem)

What are these fluffy flakes of white That float with grace in their swirling flight?

Maybe the Lord of the realm on high Is shaking star-dust from the sky;

Perchance the moon from her path has strayed And is breaking bits from the Milky Way:

Perhaps the angels with flowing hair Are clipping fur from the great white bear.

The gruff north wind, a warm blanket doth reap. By stealing the fleece from the cloud herder's sheep.

Whether star-dust, fur, or bits of fleece, The snow brings thoughts of heavenly peace.

CRUISE OF THE "EASTONIAN," 1931-'32

The K. C. H. S. "Eastonian" was backed from the pier on the Kansas City waterfront September 8, 1932, for its annual voyage circumnavigating the globe. Its crew will study the life, customs, literature and language of the countries touched on its cruise. Lieutenant-Commander John R. Wahlstedt was on the bridge replacing Commander Clifford H. Nowlin, who was temporarily confined to his berth following a major operation. This is Commander Nowlin's first illness in forty years of navigation. The members of the crew will study American conditions and history. They will study the history, geography, and life of South America. Australia and the Philippines, Japan, China, India, and particularly survey the languages of Germany, Spain, France and Great Britain. The story of this wondrous educational annual voyage may best be told by the bulletins which were issued monthly on board the "Eastonian."

NOVEMBER BULLETIN

"Eastonian" defeated the "Southwesterners" in a hard fought game of water polo. The members of the team, through force of habit, took a shower to wash off the dust of battle.

The "Porters-to-the-West" defeated our team in the final game of the season.

Captain Silvey was appointed official ballretriever on the fleet's all-star team.

The anniversary of the explosion of the Sphinx, which was caused by the antics of an "Eastonian," first class, was celebrated by Burst-Out days, November 21-22.

Shore leave was granted to the entire crew November 26-27.

Letters of commendation were presented to the members of the water polo team November 23, in order to save postage.

DECEMBER BULLETIN

We regret to announce the death of one of our most beloved instructors, W. D. Hifner. instructor of manual training.

Kratz was appointed commander of the Seamen Second Class, December 7.

The first class seamen's Rogues Gallery (Senior Ballot) was elected by them December 9.

The Ship Skits were presented December 11-12. The plays "Dust of the Road," "The Dear Departed," and "Forty-Acre Patch" were the program.

The water polo team was presented with the Dartmouth Cup for the second time.

The crew mutinied December 23.

As soon as I've shot a few bags of ducks, eaten a big dinner, rested a mite, I think I'll go get them.

JANUARY BULLETIN

I finally decided to round the mutinied crew and had them all in irons by January 4.

We docked at Hawaii and shipped the queen of queens. Because she had some unpronounceable name, we christened her Carolyn Thompson, and made her a major.

In January the Awfternoon Tea Clubs were reformed; four of them, Kalailu, Hamiltons, Leundis, and Eulexia. They elected a commander apiece, ensigns Arnold, Beyer, Thompson and Scrivner.

Letter writing being hard for most, we named Barnett, Beard, and Harmon to gather news.

Our tiddly-winks team was functioning like a patent anchor until they ran foul o' the "Vikings," "Ottawaiians," and "Centralites."

FEBRUARY BULLETIN

The second half of the voyage having begun, Second Class Seaman Smith was chosen head of the Officers' Mess.

The Awfternoon Tea Clubs held a "Lit" Dance February 5.

Ensign Paul O'Neal was elected to command the Seamen Third Class.

Ensign Ella Silvey was appointed commander of the Seamen Fourth Class, February 11.

The "Paseon" tiddly-winks team defeated the Bears on February 12.

We defeated the Indians Febbruary 19 after wearing out many "winks."

Again we downed the "Porters of the West" by sheer grit and determination on their home table even.

The second half of our voyage started with an addition to the crew gathered from the far corners of the earth.

The Ship's bean shooters staged a great match at Kemper, February 27. They shot the World's Highest score for high schools!

MARCH BULLETIN

The First Class Seamen have decided it is best to wear dungarees when they walk off the plank at the end of the cruise and drop into the cold, dark, forbidding water of the Seven Seas.

Ferrel Heady, seaman second class, was officially proclaimed the ship's fog-horn March 11. He will represent the "Eastonian" April 16 in the Constitution Oratorical contest.

The Irish Christmas was celebrated by all the gobs March 17, followed by a gigantic St. Patrick's ball on March 18. Green being the prevailing color, all freshmen were admitted.

On March 11 the Gossipers' Home Sewing Circle held a "Boy Friend" Party for all the boys who could be persuaded to approach them.

APRIL BULLETIN

The Biggest and Best Bluffers of the upper class seamen were "recognized" April 1. They certainly deserve their appointment to the National Honor Society as it is possible to bluff your teachers a little while, but it requires an expert to bluff them for four years.

The First Class Seamen presented a comedy entitled "Just Like Judy," on April 1-2.

The Awfternoon Tea Clubs held their annual contest Friday, April 22. They gathered about in a cosy circle and yelled insults, orated, argued, told stories of the eighties, and razzed each other's literary "efforts."

The cooks' staff held their annual R. O. T. C. Circus April 15. For hours they drummed on empty cans, executed knife and fork drills, and presented the girls they had in this port.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The staff of this 1932 Eastonian here expresses its appreciation of the assistance received in the production of this yearbook.

Mr. Cooksey of the Teachenor-Barteberger Engraving Company proved a willing and efficient counselor. To him we are indebted for numerous suggestions for reducing our engraving bill.

Credit is due to Mr. Smith of the Smith Grieves Printing Company for his original type arrangements in the pages of this book.

The photographers, Mr. Grube and the LeRoy Studio, did well a gigantic work.

Words hardly express our appreciation for the time given by our faculty advisers in the service of the Eastonian. Miss Varney gave her time to the literary staff and her co-operation was imperative. Miss Abbott supervised the art department and willingly gave her valuable time in this service. Miss Baker and Mr. Broadlick, through their efforts in sales and advertising departments, made possible this annual financially.

We are also indebted to all those, the patrons and advertisers of East High School, who have supported this project.
