When we try to pick out anything
by itself we first find it hooked to everything else
in the universe.

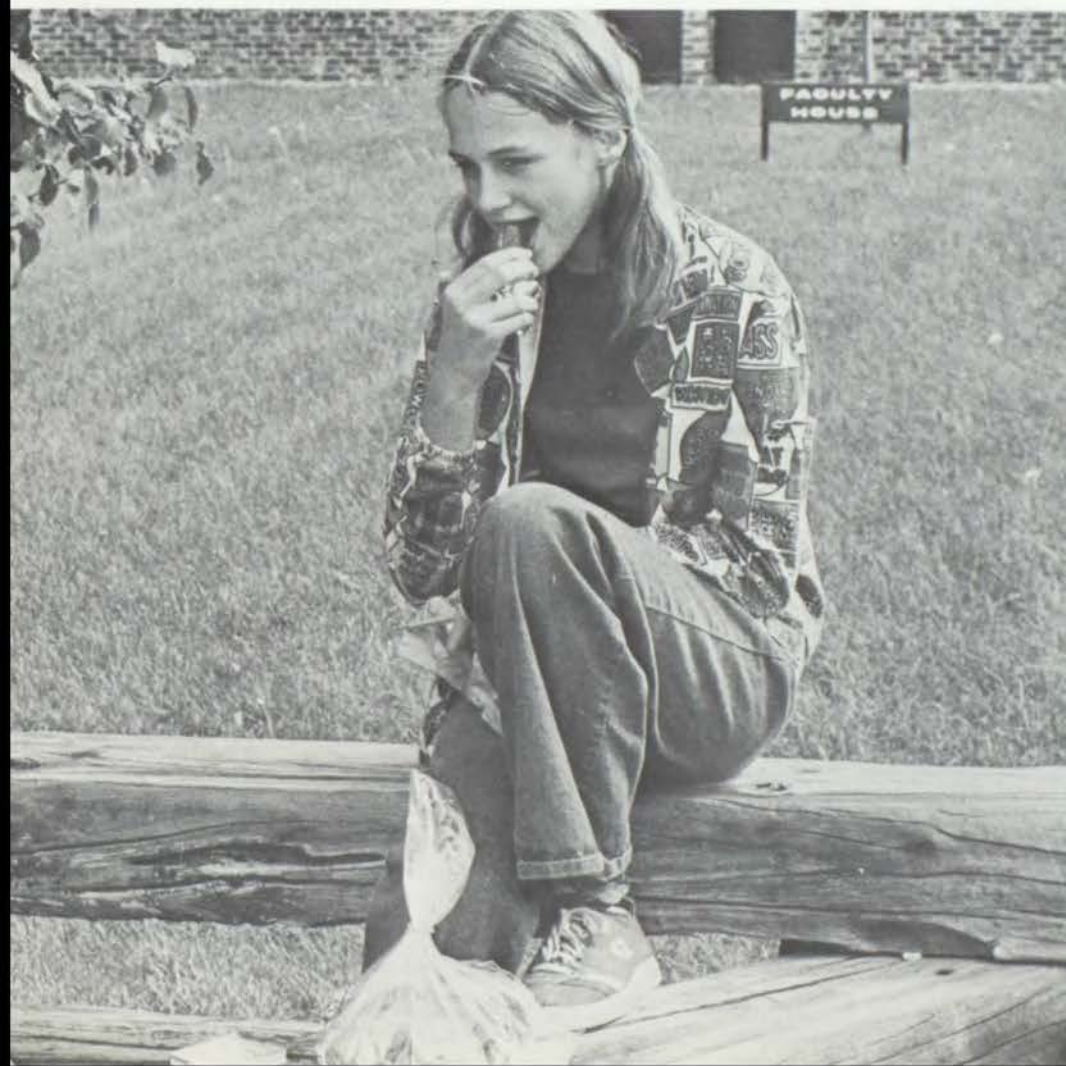

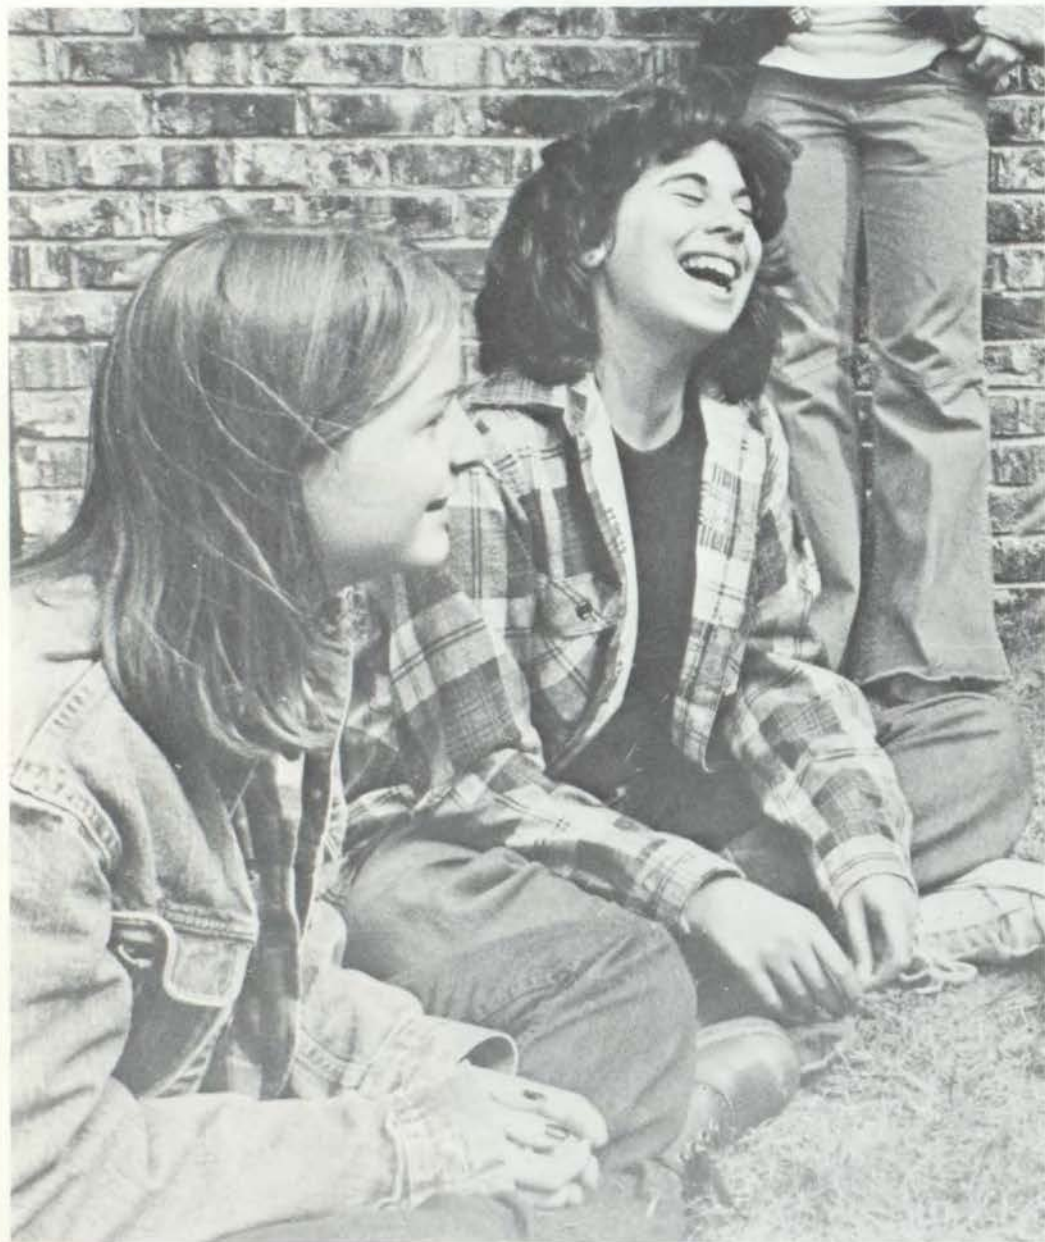

There
must be a
time
during the
day
when
the
man
who makes plans
forgets
his plans
and acts
as though
he had no
plans
at all

The dawn
bursts forward
in a parade of
colors scattered,
from a box.

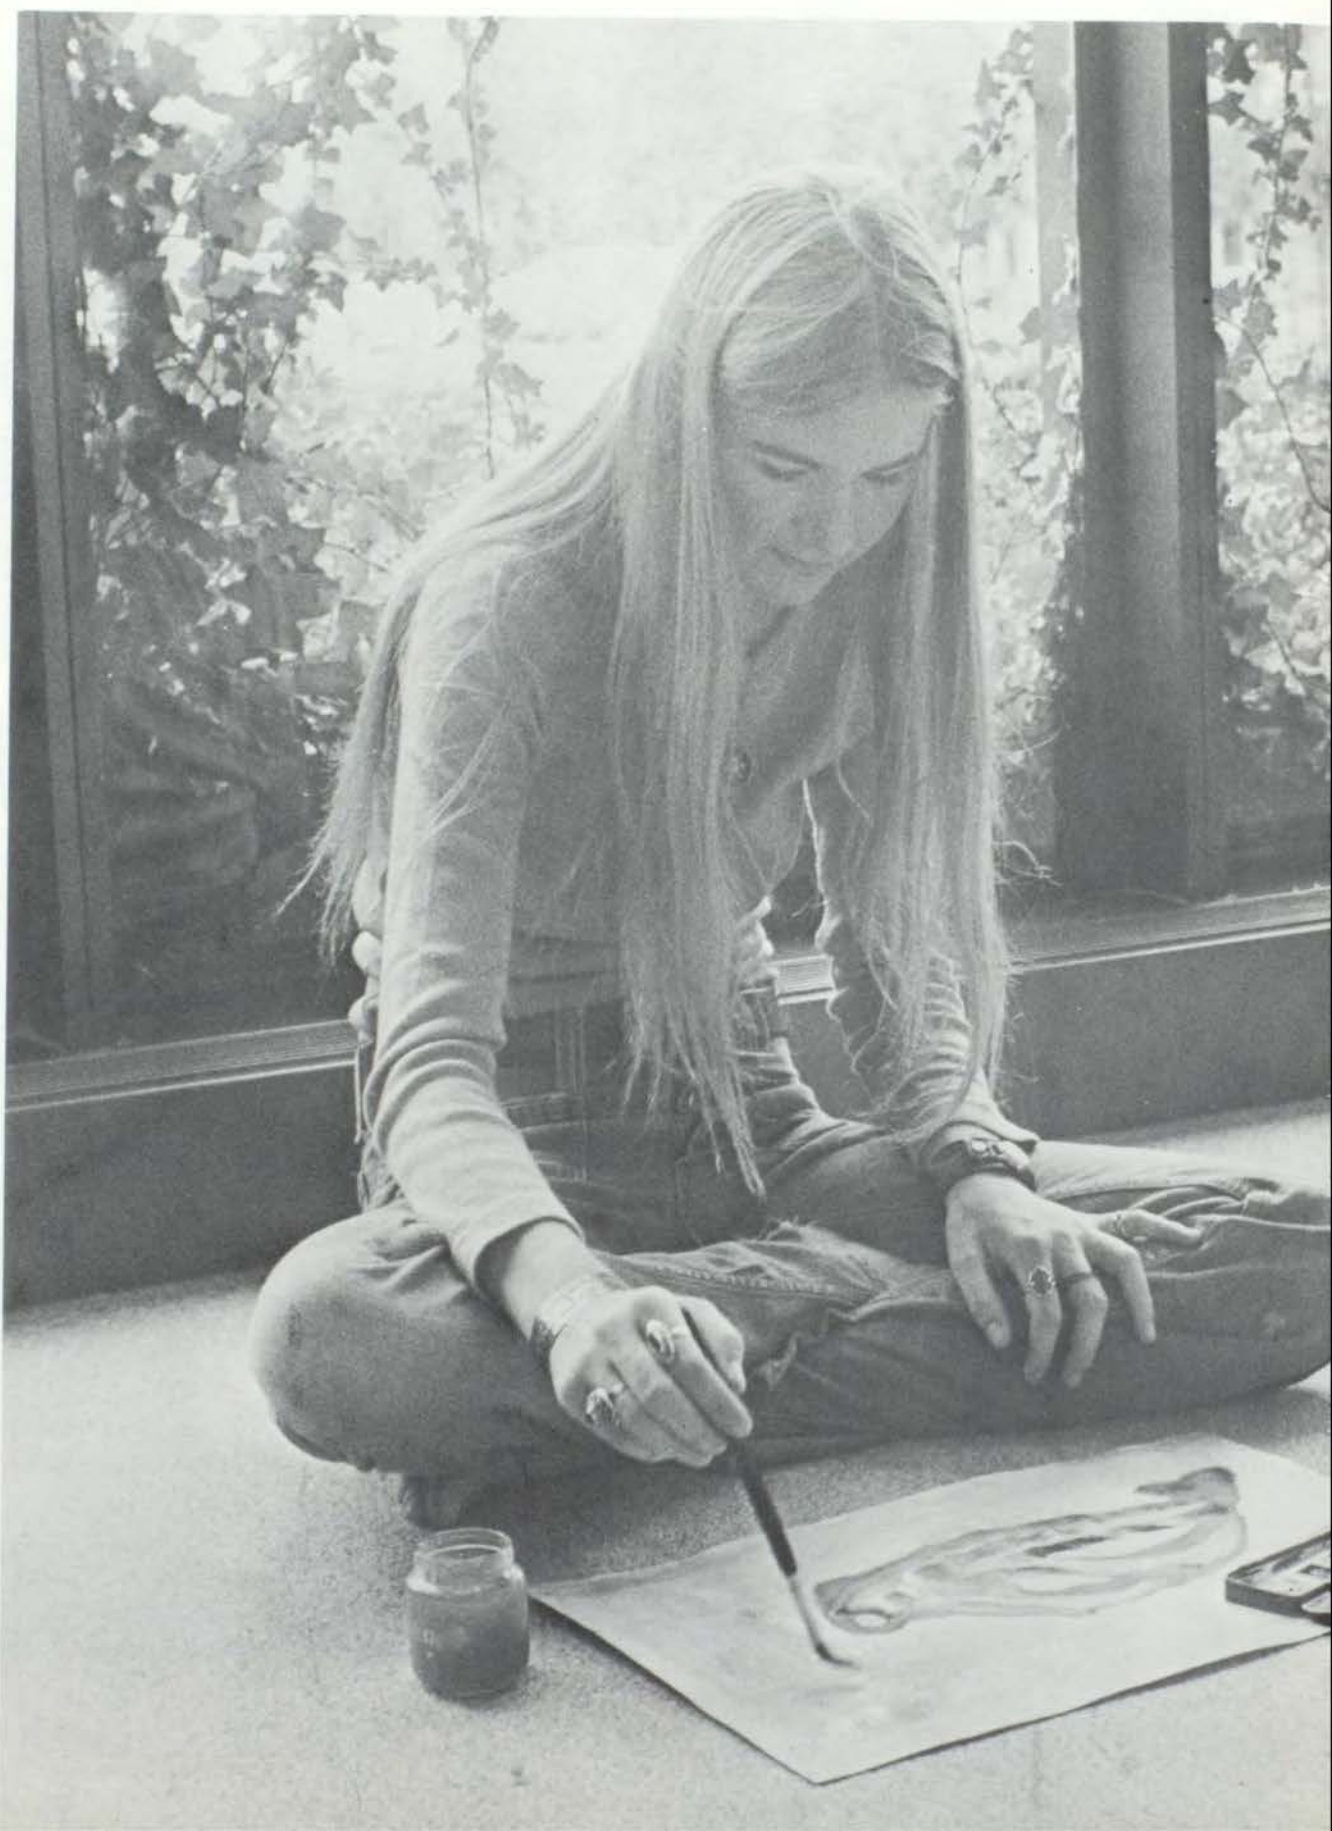

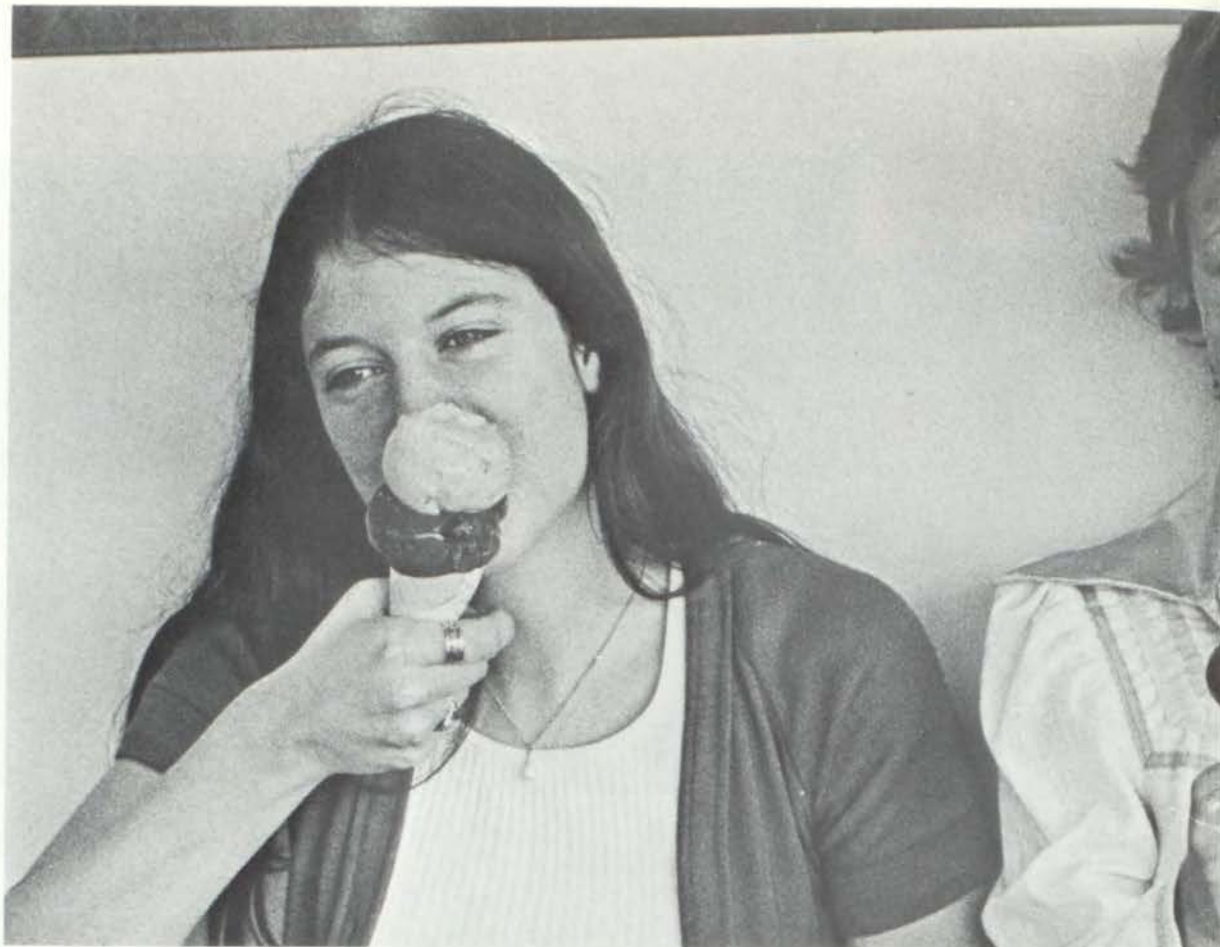

It's amazing what
you become aware
of when you lie on
your back and think about what you're seeing
instead of just seeing it.

Scenery like music
is thought compelling
and gives one
a rare combination
of practical and
poetical inspiration.

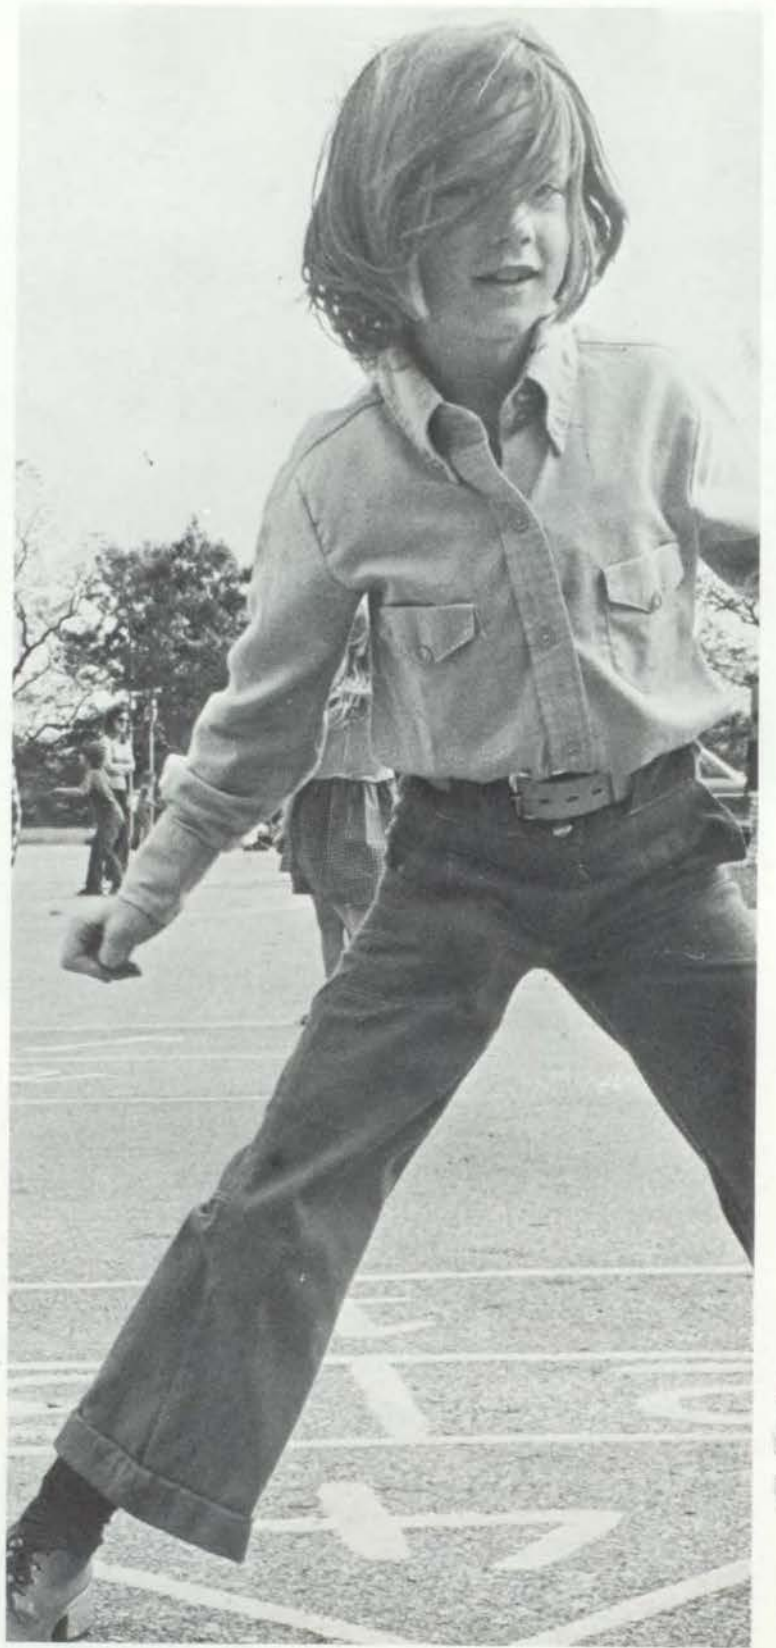

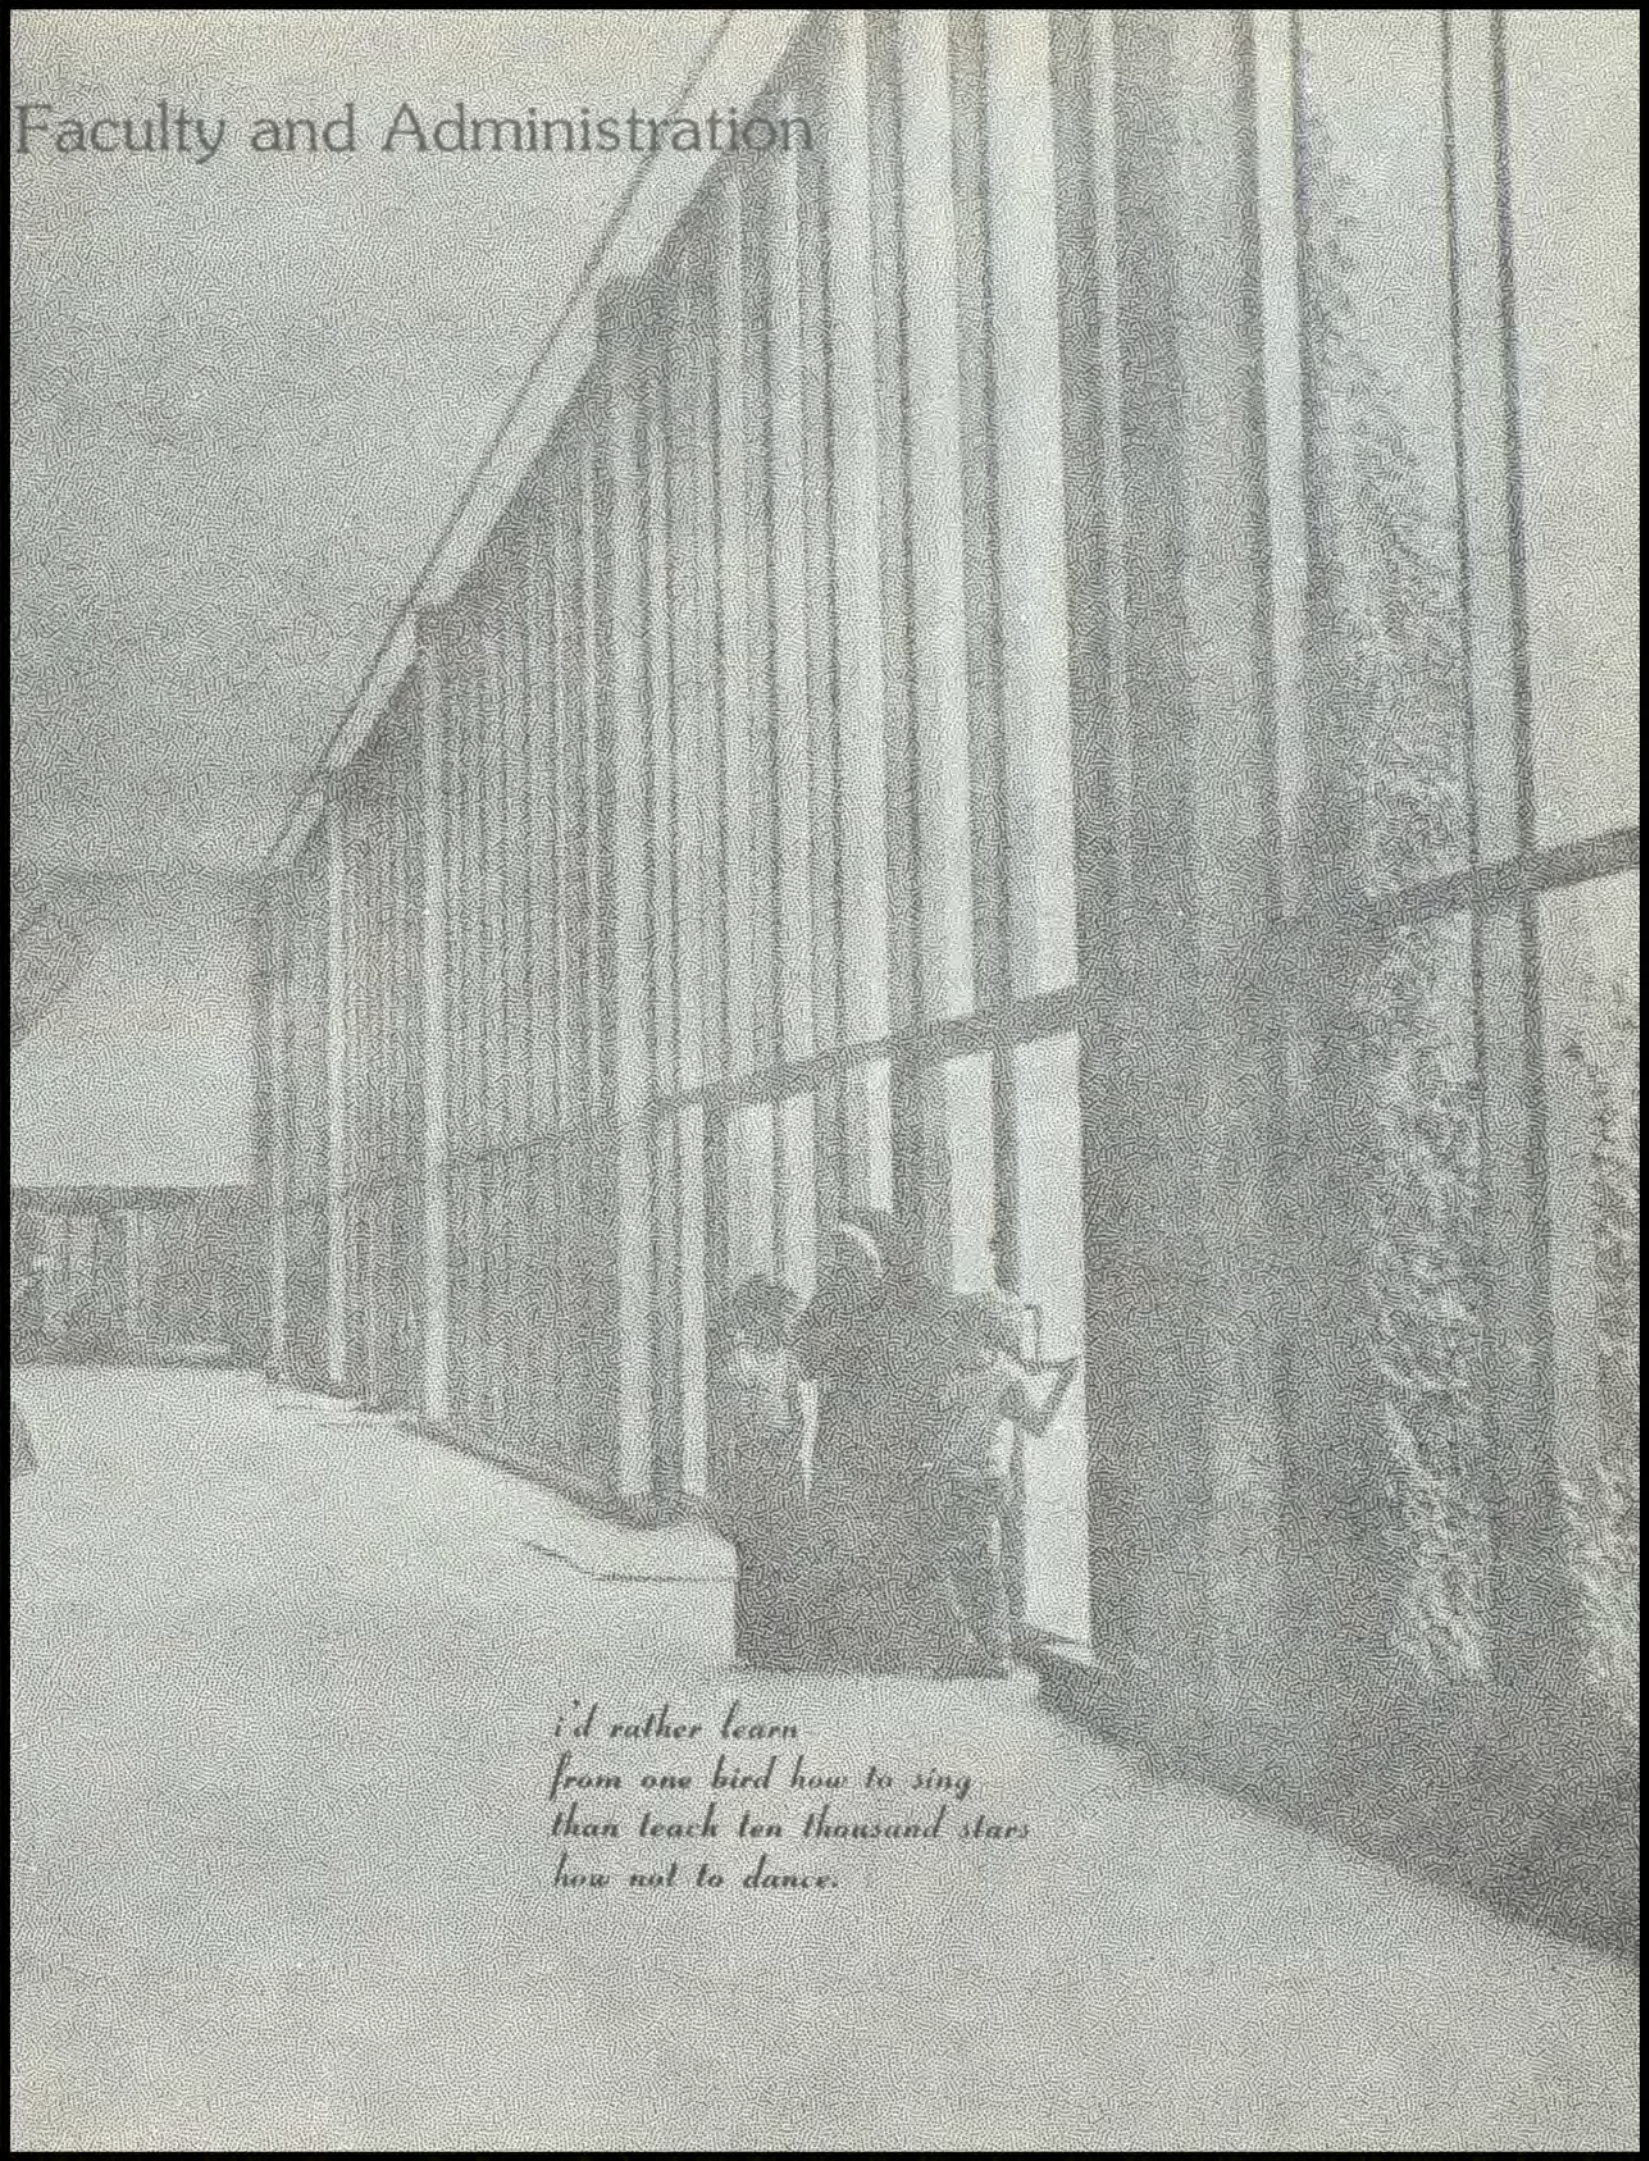

There must be a time
of day, when the man
who has to speak falls
very silent. And his mind
forms no more propositions
and he asks himself did
they have a meaning.

Activities

Amidst a spattering of green directional signs and descriptive photographs, Loretto held classes Sunday, March 3. The major promotional event of the year, School on Sunday provides an opportunity for interested area residents to visit the premises who would otherwise be unable to do so because of weekly responsibilities. These interested parties materialized in traffic jam capacity both inside and out. After stopping at either the Loretto Parents' Sign In or the Guest Registration, visitors waded their way to classes, the Book Fair, the Parent/Coffee Rap, and other scheduled activities. The unfamiliar multitude created a colorful array as they filtered through the hallways, their multi-colored name-tags flashing from their lapels.

It was certainly not necessary to conduct a headcount before acknowledging the all-around success of the day. Unlike last year, even the students themselves contributed to the encouraging outcome by blessing the school with their presence, more or less. Judging from the community participation, it seemed the promotional literature available was an unnecessary extra. People seemed to know without being told that Loretto IS more than just a school.

School on Sunday

Halloween Party

The Annual Halloween Party began with a variety show contest consisting of such acts as: Leader of the Pack, Interpretive Dance, Lori Blume and her guitar, Missy Miller playing the piano, and other mimes to songs. There was a Jitterbug Contest and a Bump Contest. The Sophomores provided refreshments. Some people bobbed for apples, participated in balloon relays, and all in all everyone had a good time.

November Dance

The annual November Dance, sponsored each year by the Junior class, was held at Loretto the 29th of November. Those willing to challenge the ice and snow of an early winter storm, were greeted by the welcome sound of "Shades of Madness". Against the background theme of "An Evening in Casablanca", the guests gambled, guzzled, danced, and dined the night away. A number of Freshmen catered to the needs of the couples, lending a dazzling aspect to the scene in their short satin skirts and tops glittering with sequins. Of course, all good things must inevitably come to an end. After three hours of merrymaking, all departed, leaving in their wake a dry champagne fountain as testimony of their presence.

Advent Breakfast

Advent Breakfast, a celebration given by the Freshmen each year, is the harbinger of Christmas joy and goodwill. The fact that it is always held the day preceding a two and a half week vacation, usually insures a successful attempt at brotherly affection.

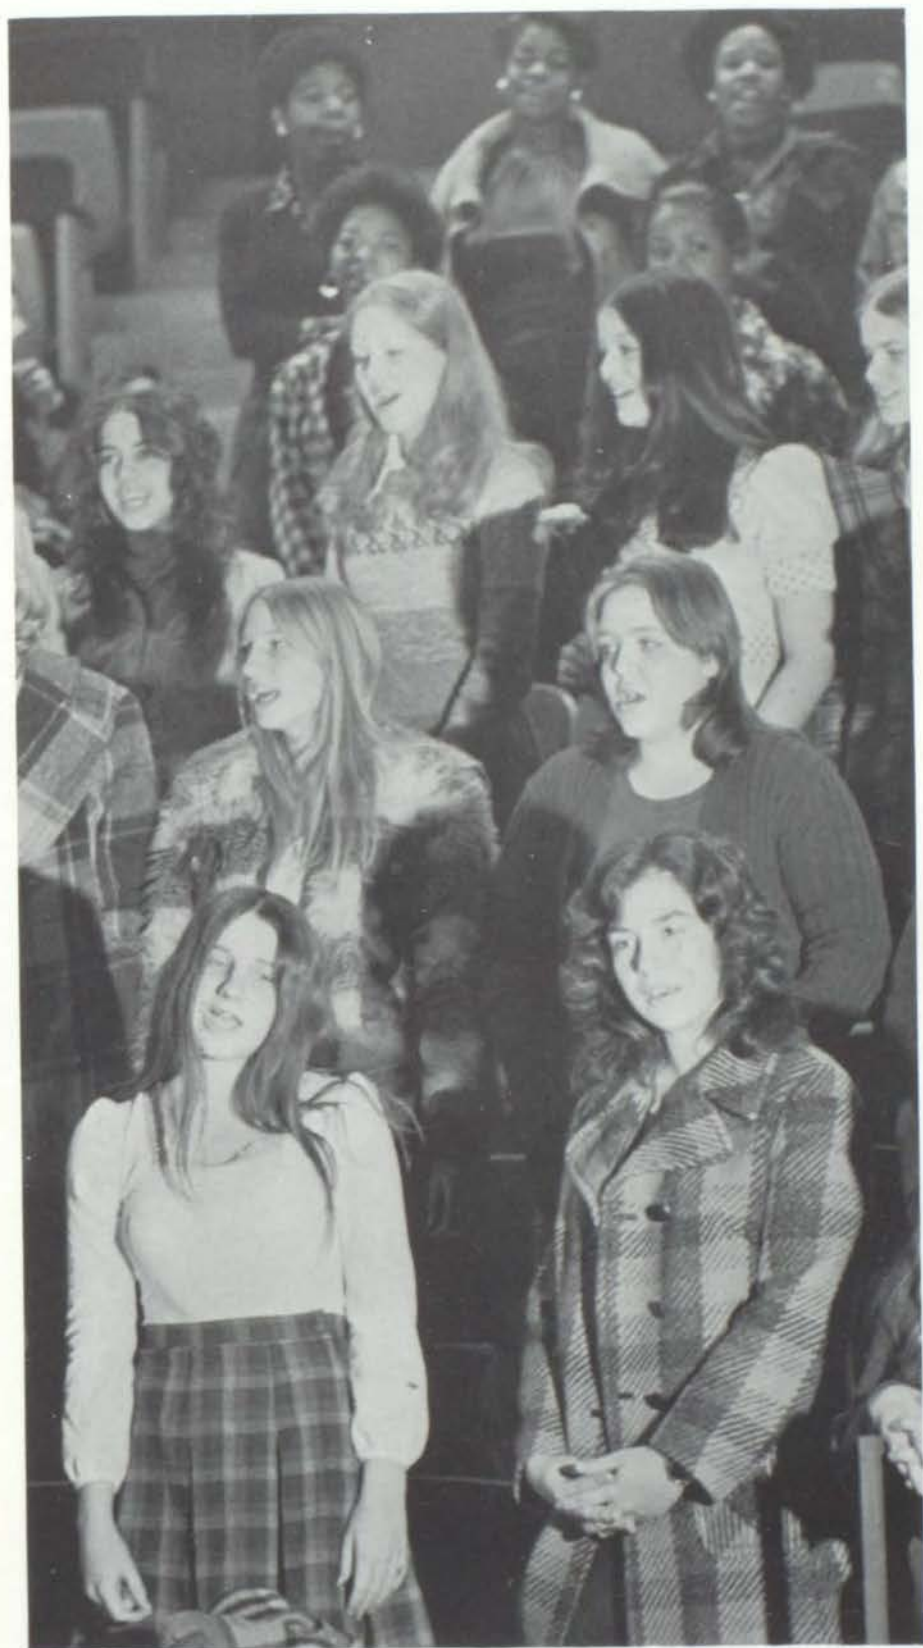

In keeping with the morning's traditional format, Father Arnold said Mass for the student body in the theater. Readings were delivered by both Bob Finch and Michelle White, a Freshman who helped organize the service. In a feeling of community spirit, all gathered in the cafeteria for entertainment and refreshments

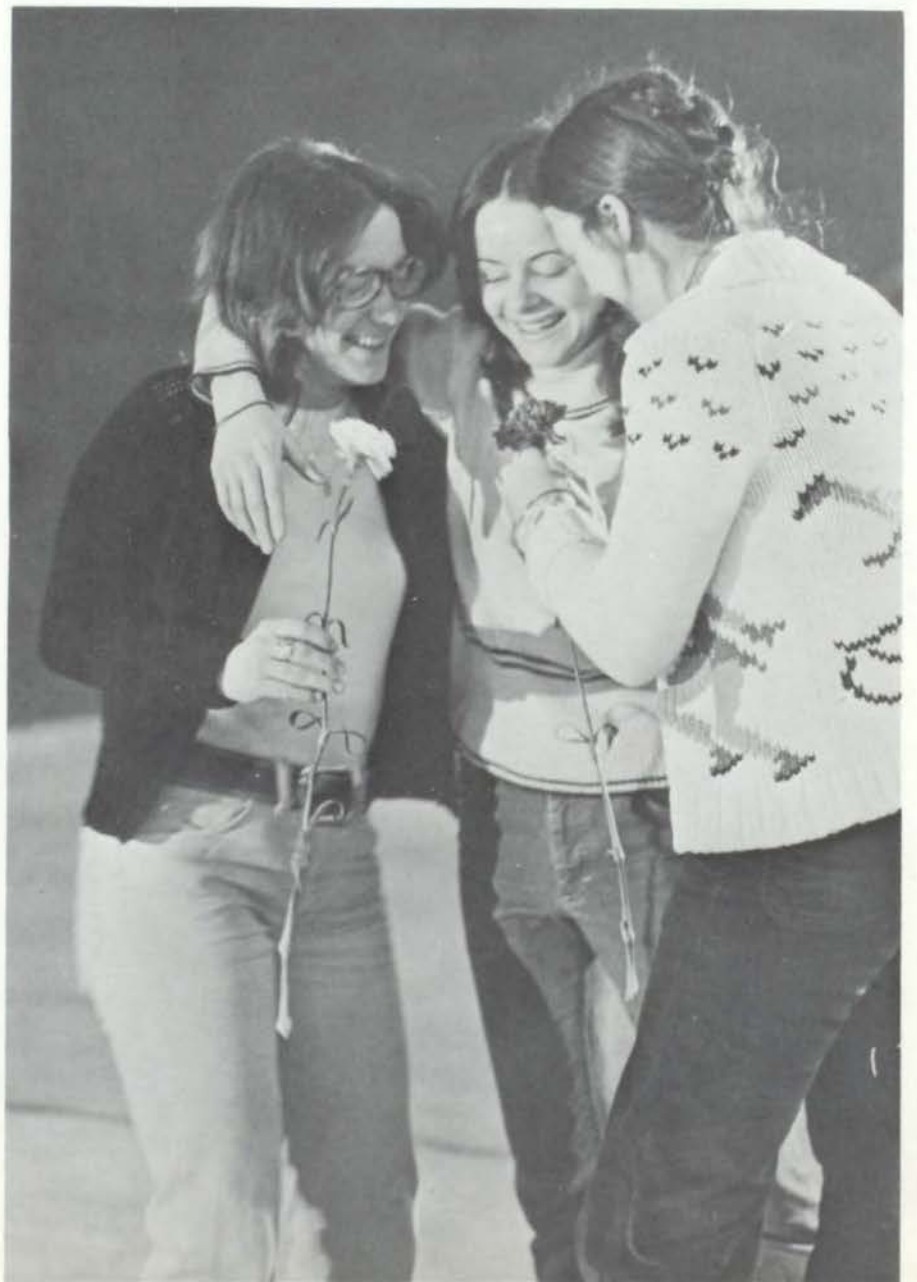

This year, hot chocolate and doughnuts were served while easy listening and holiday tunes provided musical enjoyment for the students. Lori Blume, a Junior, sang several songs accompanied by guitar and Diane Alfino, a Senior, played the accordion.

Junior Ring Ceremony

Tradition emerged once more at Loretto as members of the Junior class received their rings during a brief ceremony held February 12 in the theater. This day, honored by the entire Loretto community, recognizes the advancement of the next year's graduates and the impending departure of this year's Seniors. Guided by the chosen theme, Promise for Tomorrow, the program emphasized the actual presentation of the rings which Father Arnold Blaes referred to in his speech as "symbols of one's need for another person, one's dedication to and concern for another person, and one's hope for fulfillment through another person."

As each name was called, the student came forward with her mother who received the band from Father and placed it on her daughter's finger. Then, each Junior turned the ring of the Senior who had chosen her, a gesture signifying her upcoming move into society. A carnation was offered in return.

The Glee Club performed several theatrical numbers which served to enliven a ceremony which, though superficially futuristic, was, in actuality, securely rooted in the present. This point seems best exemplified in the introductory words of the Junior Class President Lisa Perry: "While we are here we still have a lot to give and our school has much that will enrich us even now."

Field Hockey

Another team sport was added to the steadily increasing number offered by the Physical Education Department this year. Field Hockey was enthusiastically received by those students who participated in the classes instructed the first eight weeks of Fall semester, during fifth and sixth blocks. The only differentiating aspect between the two was the fact that the fifth period students were not considered varsity members due to their lessened degree of concentration on the sport, meeting only twice a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Both groups of girls began by discovering through practice the basic skills of the game such as dribbling, passing, and blocking. After grasping these fundamentals, they subsequently scrimmaged amongst themselves and culminated their sessions with actual contests with Sunset Hill. These games bound the two classes together in competition resulting in a season record of one tie and one loss. What the statistics didn't show, however, was that Field Hockey proved to be a successful challenge to all involved.

Swimming

The Swimming Class made a big splash the first eight weeks of Fall semester, meeting Monday, Wednesday, and Friday with Field Hockey taking precedence Tuesday and Thursday. Students began their venture by viewing films dealing with the fundamentals of the sport as well as safety techniques necessitated by its practice.

Once the group finally hit the water, time was spent on learning or brushing up on basic strokes such as the elementary backstroke, breast stroke, crawl, and backstroke. Upon ascertaining the individual skills of the members of her class, Ms. Maxwell divided the girls into two sections. The first group's goals were aimed at acquiring the rudimentary abilities of swimming and consequently perfecting them. The more advanced students studied lifesaving techniques. It should be noted that Karen Helwig received a Red Cross swimming certificate for her efforts in the afore mentioned group.

Ms. Maxwell was assisted in her teaching endeavors by Peggy Mulvihill and Jane-Twila Ramm, students from Loretto and St. Theresa's Academy respectively.

Basketball

Loretto's Varsity Basketball team successfully completed another challenging season of competition this year, playing eighteen games of which nine numbered in the winner's column. For team members, the season really began in early September when practices were held in preparation for the opening game at Drexel. Actual league contests commenced on November 11 with a clash at Hogan and ended with the Third Annual Loretto Invitational Tournament on January 26 which they won 48-32. Under the coaching expertise of Ellen Baty, the team gained the distinction of being second best in a field of eight. A trophy was awarded to those who finished in the top three positions: Barstow first, Loretto second, and St. Pius third.

For the second straight year, the Varsity team entered the Missouri State 2-A regionals. This year, Loretto travelled to Creighton, Missouri for the event. The girls battled for the first round victory against Hogan, but in this instance, the opposition played the superior game and advanced to their own downfall in the third round quarter finals.

The outcome of this season was a most commendable one viewed in the light of the team's adjustment to a new coach and the difficult schedule with which it was faced.

Not pictured: Leslie Campbell-forward, Susie Lohr-forward, and Julie Schopper-guard.

Gymnastics

Gymnastics has held an increasingly more significant role in the Physical Education Program at Loretto in the past year. Where there was none before, now there exists a Varsity team most proficient in the practice of such a demanding sport. To accommodate the expanding group, new floor mats were purchased, enabling the girls to safely practice their routines for upcoming competitions.

Here is a recapitulation of the meets Loretto took part in this year. The order in which the names of the schools are stated, is the order in which they finished in competition: Loretto vs. Belton, Belton vs. Lee's Summit vs. Loretto, Van Horn vs. Loretto vs. J.C. Harmon, and Shawnee Mission West vs. Loretto.

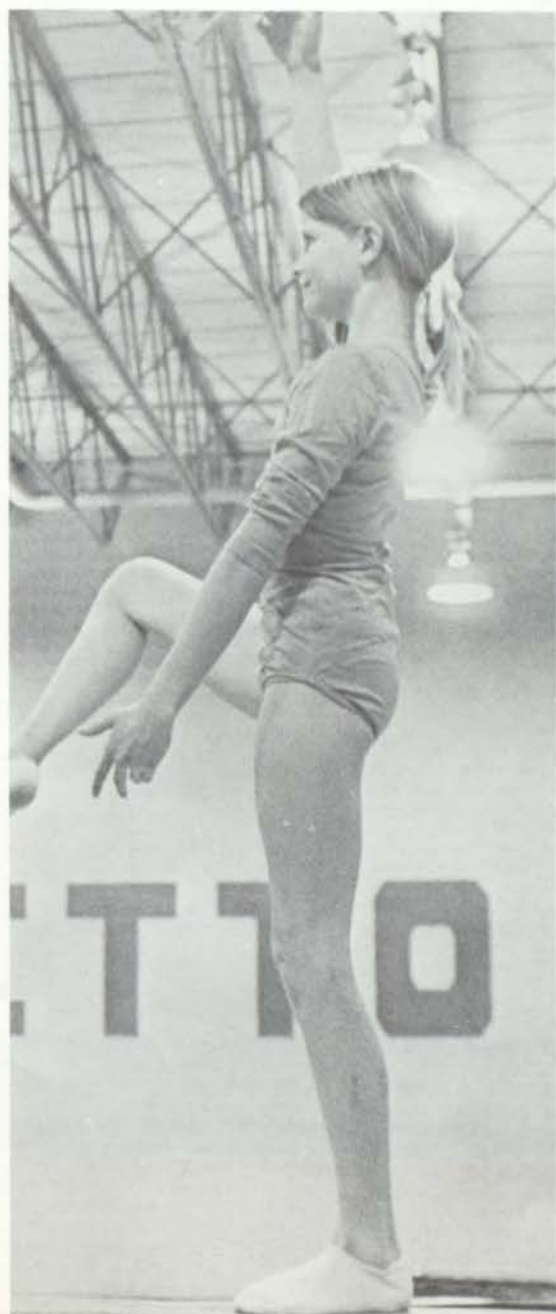

The Loretto Invitational Gymnastics Competition was held Feb. 8 between Loretto, Van Horn, J.C. Harmon, Belton, and Lee's Summit. They wound up their season with a meet with Belton in March.

Volleyball

This season Varsity Basketball was a very popular sport at Loretto with a surprising number of students going out for the team. Among these hopefuls, the top performing eighteen were selected and began practicing for the challenging games ahead. Meeting sixth block and frequently after school hours, the girls developed new skills which they used both in individual and team play. Of course the key to their end success was not the fact that they learned a great deal, but that they had such a good time in doing it.

Art

The Art Department, run by Sr. Jeanne Deuber, Joanne Bockelman, and Carol Andreason, plays a vital role at Loretto. Without these people and the students who participate in the wide variety of art classes offered, we would not have the interesting school that we do. They provide us with a pleasant atmosphere. What makes the atmosphere pleasant? The contributions these people make. From panels on the shelves in the library to the stone, metal, and wood sculpture of Sr. Jeanne's in the halls. Everywhere you go, there is someones' contribution to our school in some form of art work or another. Look around and take note. Don't you think it's great? Try an art class, you'll be sure to like it!

Orchestra

The Orchestra is full of talent. From drummers to violinists, pianists to flautists, trumpeters to bass players, the Orchestra is a fine performing group. Made up of students from Upper, Middle, and Lower School, the Orchestra makes many performances. They performed in the Classics in Music Week Assembly. They held a concert for parents, teachers, brothers, sisters, students, and friends that turned out to be quite successful. Even Sr. Patrice, who directs the group, had to admit that it was a successful evening. And they have given many other performances, including small recitals for the younger musicians, with the older kids accompanying them. This year has proved to be a successful year for the Orchestra, with many young rising musicians in the field of music.

Glee Club

What a fantastic year it's been for the Loretto Glee Club! The girls, under the direction of Ms. Gerry Kinerk, have proven themselves most outstanding in both song and dance.

Consisting of thirty-two members, and including many new faces as well as familiar ones, the group is strong in voice despite its relatively small chorus. This was demonstrated throughout the year in programs such as the Classics in Music Week assembly sponsored by the Kansas City Philharmonic, the Thanksgiving Celebration, and the Father-Daughter Banquet. Upon invitation a medley of Christmas carols was sung at Crown Center and to add to it all, the girls performed what seemed to be the biggest singspiration of the year—a collection of Broadway hits from various musicals.

Many factors contributed in making these performances successful, such as numerous practices and rehearsals and the cooperation of both members and accompanists. The addition of bright, new chorus dresses also brought more enthusiastic applause.

Hopefully, next year's Glee Club will be remembered for those attributes the 1974-75 group most assuredly possesses: talent and determination.

Government

Students, parents, and faculty discussing and working together to make decisions about Loretto and its future, describes the basic philosophy of the Loretto Community Government. (However, there is little parental involvement.) During the 1974-75 school year, Community Government became involved in the issues that most concerned the students; for example: the co-education decision, the smoking lounge, and student input or lack thereof in administrative decisions. The government committees sponsored both new and traditional activities. Curriculum Committee—Activity Days, Public Relations—School on Sunday, Special Projects—Candy Drive, Mission Day, and Father-Daughter Banquet, and Student Affairs Committee—Open Lunch.

Co-ed Panels

Since last spring, when the decision that Loretto Upper School would admit boys was made, over half the student body expressed their dissatisfaction through petitions and letters to the Legal Board.

The Board, under student pressure, decided to reconsider their decision and asked Community Government to "implement a process in which the entire student body would be involved." The process "implemented" was a series of three panels on co-education, the first of which consisted of educators familiar with "mixed" education, its advantages and disadvantages. Educators familiar with "separate" education composed panel number two. Both of these discussion groups began with each guest giving short introduction about themselves, followed by questions made up beforehand by interested students. Expressed viewpoints were then opened to the audience for comment. The third panel, a debate, consisted of two Loretto students on either side of the issue, for and against.

A summary of the panel discussions along with other information gathered on co-education, was turned into the Board on Dec. 6. On which date, they revoted and found it necessary to confirm their original decision.

A future prospect for Loretto's Upper School Body—Mr. Kevin Baldwin.

The purpose of any scholastic journalistic endeavor should be, through the often painful process of trial and error, to learn the mechanics, the power and the responsibilities of the media. Over the past year, the Phoenix and Mandella staffs have argued, worried, laughed, created, tried, erred, re-tried and ultimately, learned. Learned to work together and to work alone, learned about each other and about themselves. And none has learned so much as I.

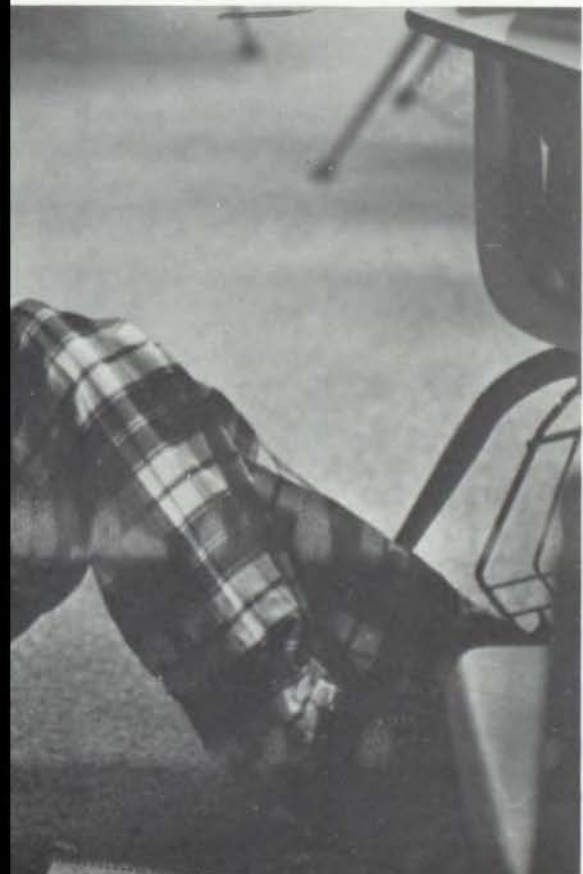

--Pat Sarro

Disgusted with unsymmetrical layouts, crying over stories three inches too short, uncertain about missing articles, and frustrated due to lack of money, the Phoenix staff struggled through the 1974-75 school year. Undoubtedly, the staff never felt the need for more excitement as one crisis arose after another. The unending turmoil, beginning fifth block daily, lasted twenty-four hours daily. But due to Pat Sarro's faithful and encouraging leadership and a competent editorial board, the newspaper's oldtimers and newcomers succeeded in producing six enlightening issues of the Phoenix.

In an effort to produce a polished yearbook, Loretto's Mandella staff fought, argued, made mistakes, and drove its advisor to the edge of her sanity, but their end product proved to be a sentimental memory book which will hopefully be cherished by the students for years to come.

The editors and staff will vividly remember the hair-pulling responsibilities which they took on. It is not easy to put together a yearbook. Staying up nights and spending hours of free time is a sacrifice which the staff should be commended for.

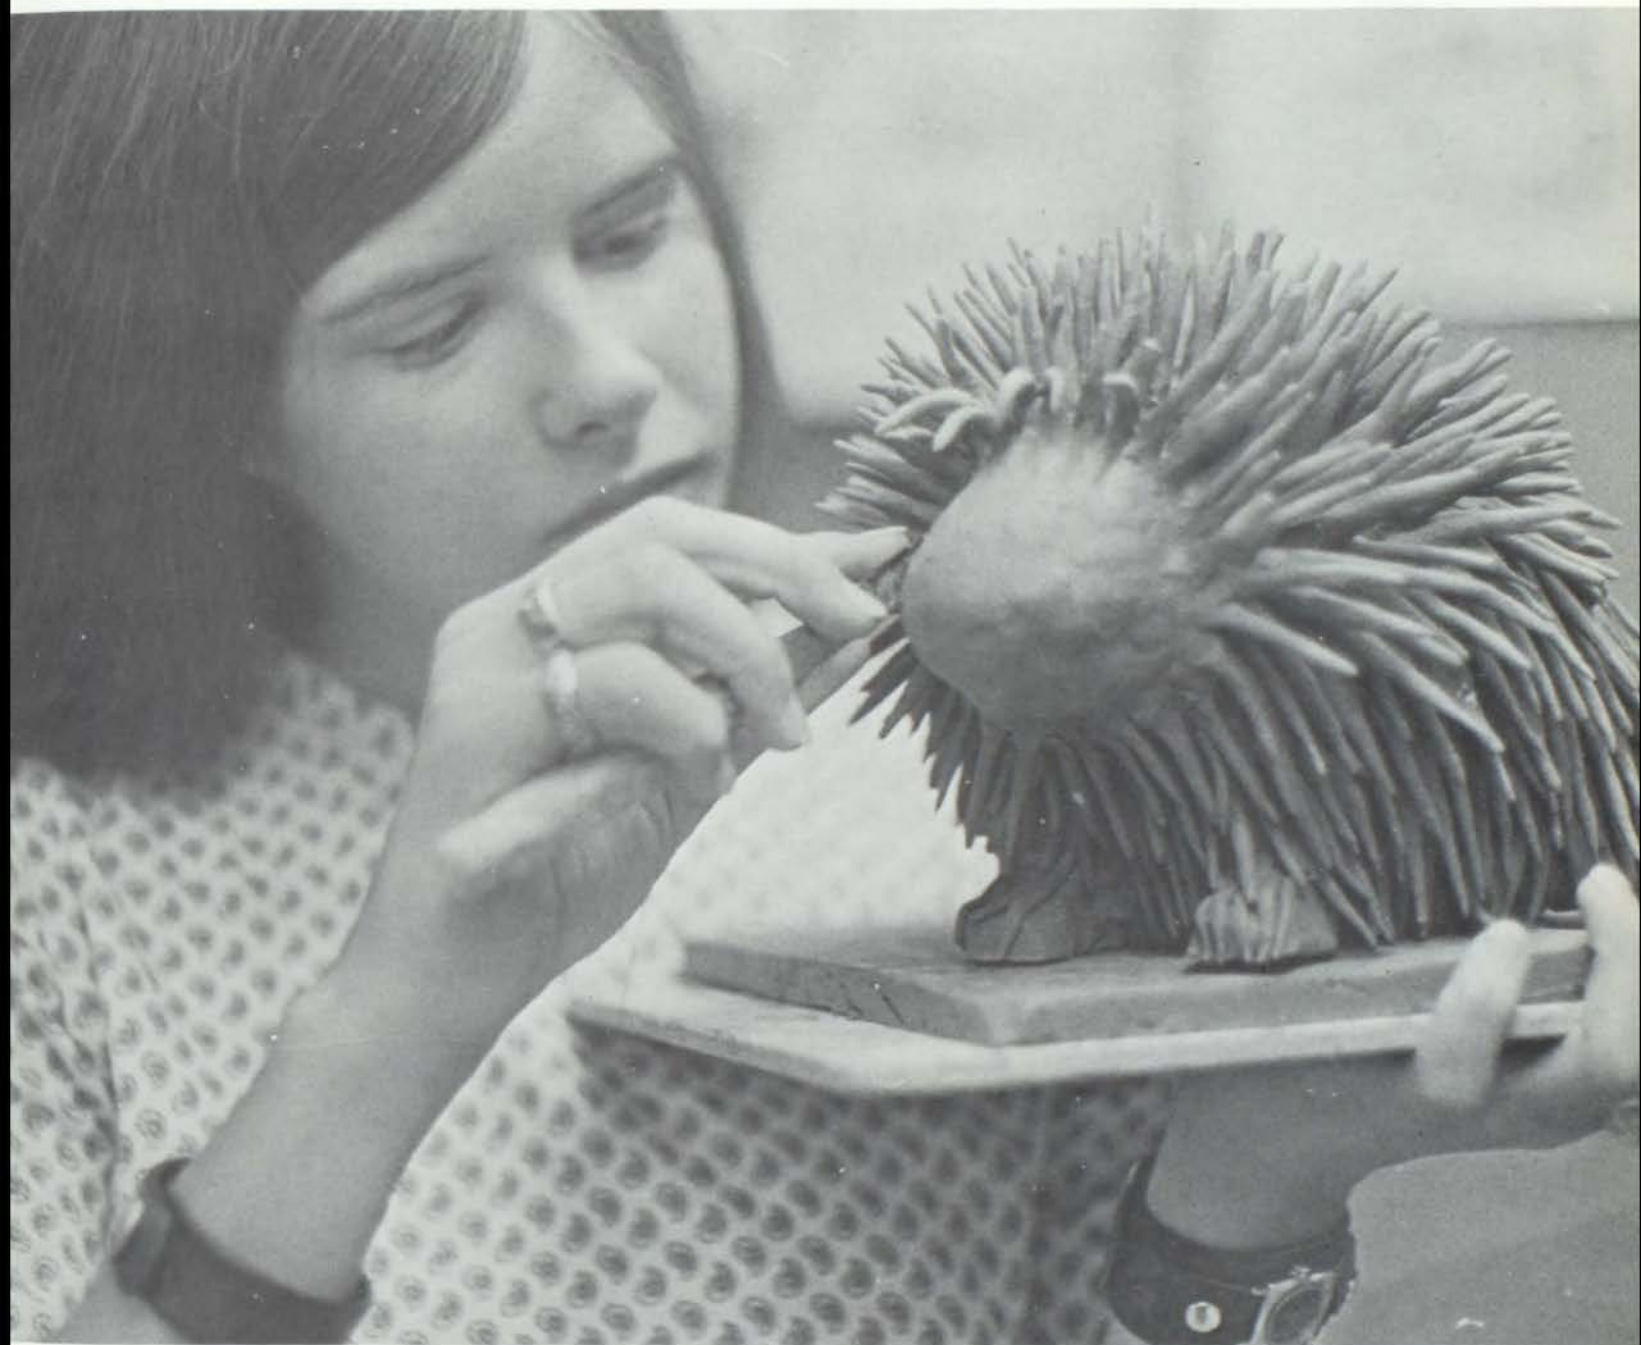

In every organization there is always one person to whom its success is owed. This person never gives up, even when everything seems totally chaotic. When fear tactics seem appropriate to aid the group, these she willingly supplies. She is the Mandella's adviser Pat Sarro, commonly known among the staff as "fearless leader".

I would like to extend a special thanks to all the people who made this yearbook a reality: to photographers Beth Holtzman, Judy Coulson, Kathy Kinney, Abbey Martin, and especially Marilyn Spencer; to Fr. Arnold Blaes for the use of his darkroom and developing supplies; to the Mandella staff for producing creative layouts; and to Pat Sarro for the courage she has shown throughout the year.
