SOME OF THE AIMS AND PURPOSES OF "THE NATIONAL CONGRESS OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS"

To raise the standard of home life. To develop better trained parent-hood.
 To bring into relations the home and the school, that parent and teacher may cooperate intelligently in the education of the child.

To surround the childhood of the whole world with that loving, wise care in the impressionable years of life, that will develop good citizens instead of law breakers and criminals.

To carry the mother-love and mother-thought into all that concerns or touches childhood in Home, School, Church, State or Legislation.

The Northeast Circle of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers has a membership of 300.

Faculty Resolutions

WHEREAS, it has pleased our Gracious Heavenly Father to bring to an end the earthly career of our beloved friend, Charles B. Reynolds,

BE IT RESOLVED: That in the death of its organizer, its first principal, its honored principal emeritus, the Northeast High School has sustained an irreparable loss.

That both the faculty and the student body have been deprived of the inspiring influence of a kindly gentleman, the helpful advice of a wise counselor, the support and encouragement of a loyal and sympathetic friend.

That the teachers of Kansas City have lost from their ranks a man of stainless integrity, of high ideals, of faithful, untiring devotion to duty.

That the community has lost a good citizen.

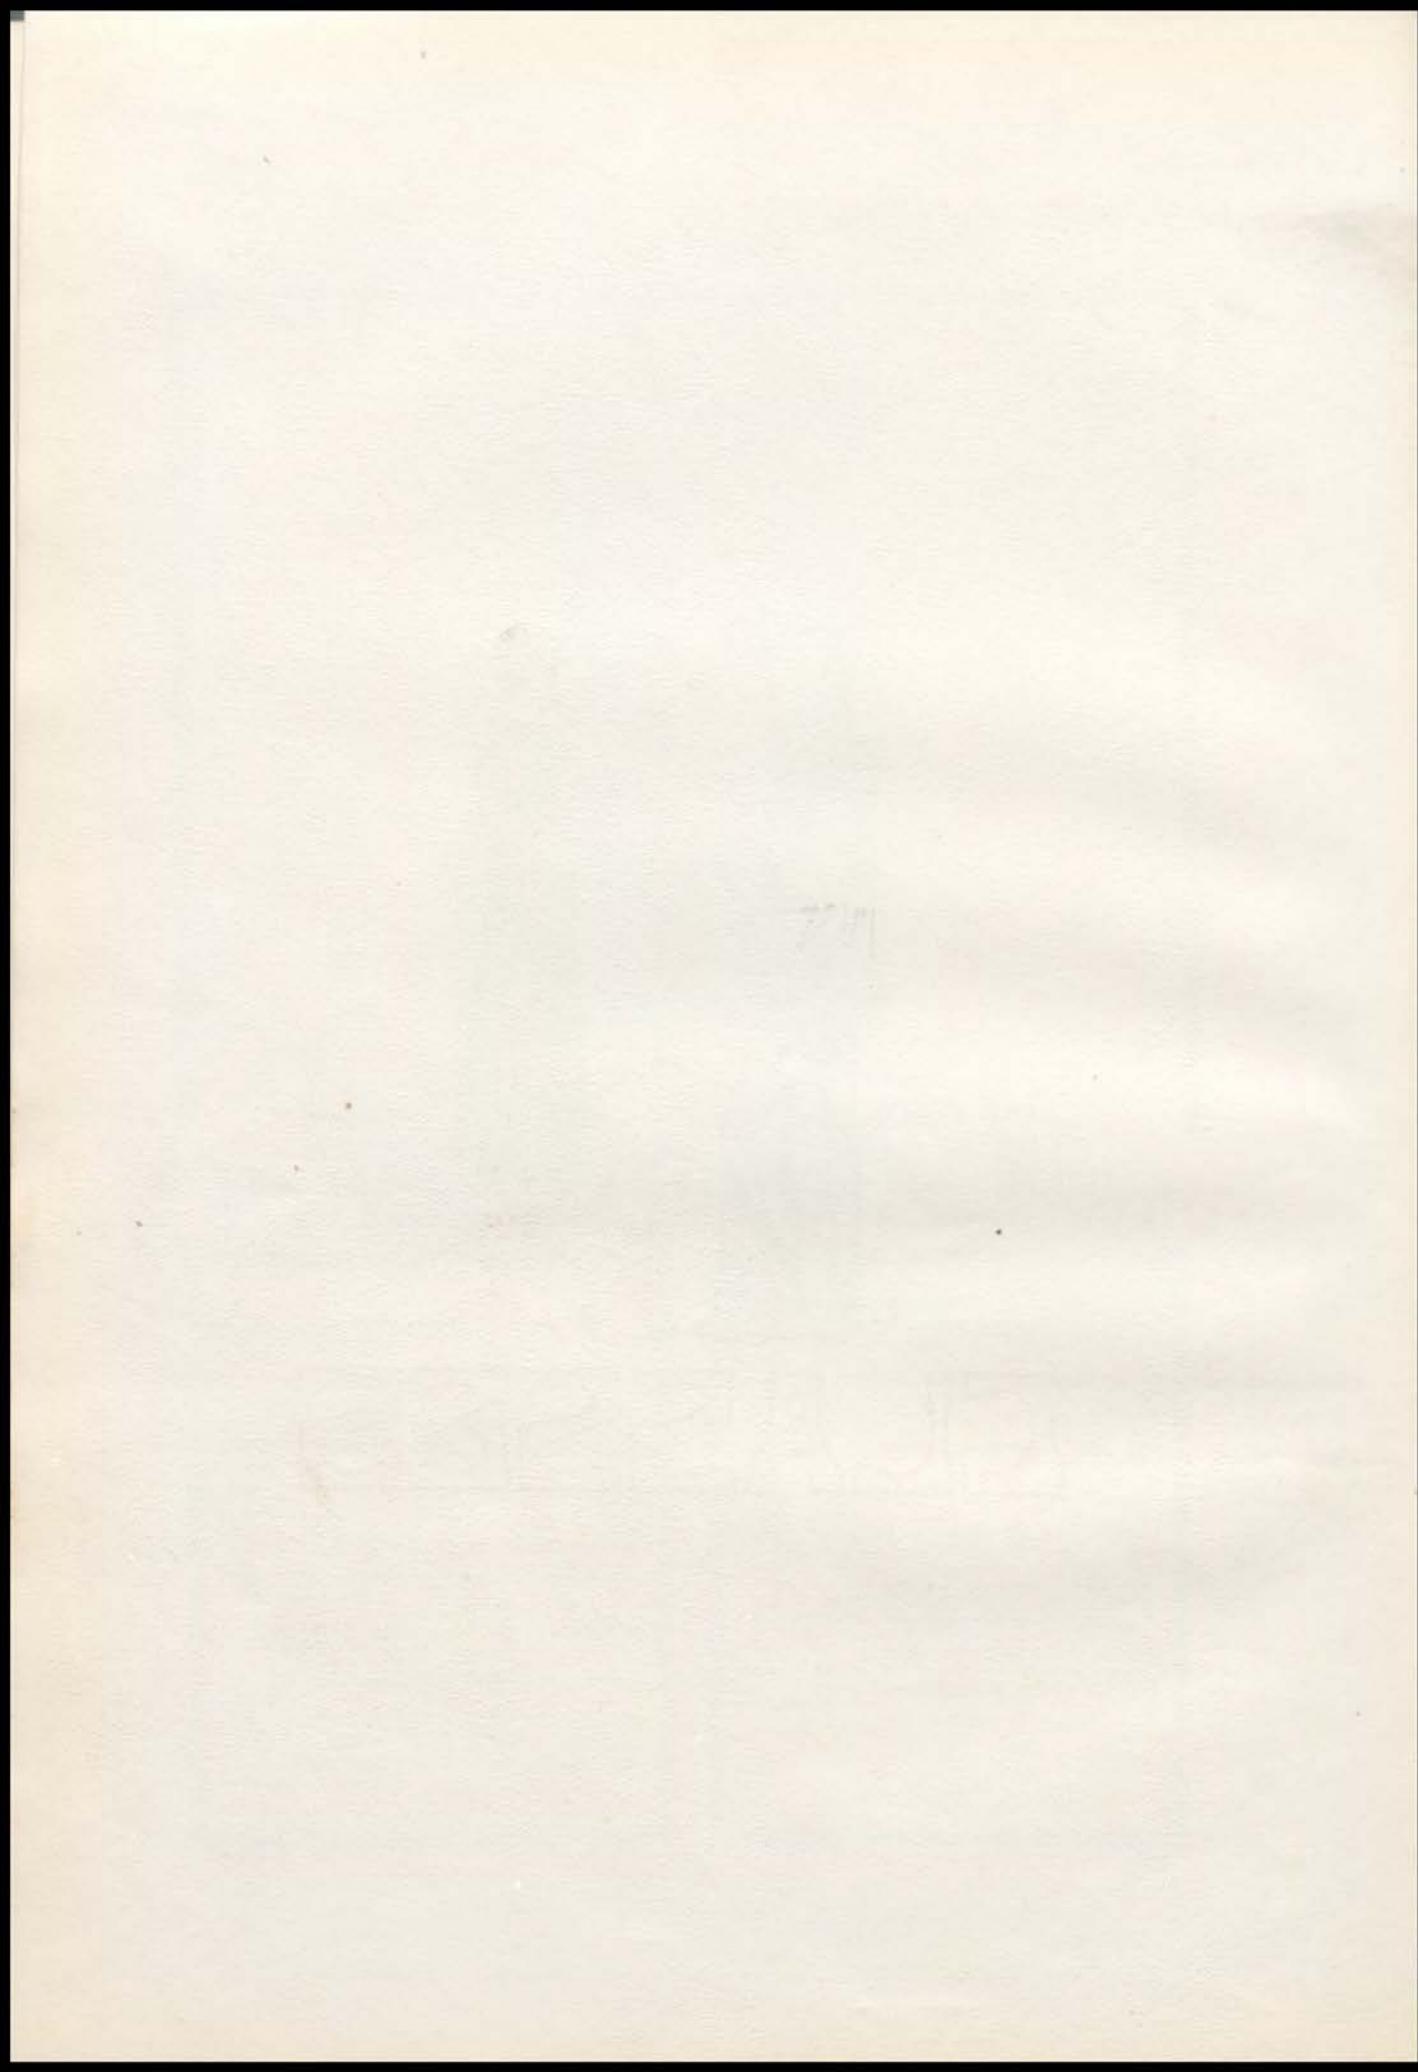

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That we express our sympathy to Mrs. Reynolds and her family in our mutual loss.

That copies of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Reynolds and to the Kansas City Teachers' Journal, and be spread upon the records of the Northeast High School.

It was September 5, 1923.

A young boy who appeared to be in his early teens, with the timidity of one who is wearing his first long pants, walked shyly up the steps of Northeast. He reached the top and looked longingly into the faces of the throngs around him.

But not a word was spoken to him, and not a smile answered his lonesome gaze. He was a lowly sophomore, fit only for carrying the books of the upper classmen and receiving the brunt of their disdain.

One year later—the young man again stood on the steps of Northeast. This time he was greeted with shouts of joy. Because of his reputation made the year before his advent was the signal for a hearty greeting from the seniors.

The day was in June, and the year, 1926.

A young man with the confident air of one who has accomplished something worth while walked down the broad steps of Convention Hall and gave his thanks for the diploma which Mr. Stigall handed him.

A boy in the front row of spectators was heard to speak these words:

"Say, Jim, that is what we wish to be like three years from now. If we can look back and see the trophies lining an enlarged case, then we shall have carried the name of Northeast to the far corners of the country."

Verily, every deserving worker receives his reward, if he will only serve faithfully and wait.

The annual Junior Prom, given the night of May 21, by the Junior class for the Seniors, was indeed a success.

The Gym was transformed into a walled garden, roses twining over the lattice walls and pergolas. This effect was made still more impressive by the false ceiling, consisting of green fringed paper, which started from the banisters of the Gym and ended at a beautiful jeweled ball. During the dance the lights were turned out and colored spot lights were turned on the revolving ball which threw off all colors of the rainbow. The basket ball goals were transformed into living flower pots. The chaperones' corner was decorated as a porch on a summer evening. The orchestra was located near the center at the North wall, seemingly on the lawn of a beautiful home. Refreshments were served in the alcove by seven sophomore girls.

The spirit of the Junior class was one which will be hard to equal in the coming years. Each junior contributed his best to make this farewell to the Seniors one to be remembered. All the juniors have to hope for now is that this same spirit may continue through the coming school year, and that we may go out from Northeast feeling that we left nothing but pleasant memories to those who follow us.

Junior Class

Timid and with fearsome tread,
We as freshmen knocked
At the doors of dear Northeast,
And found them all unlocked.

Fearsomely we entered
How long the halls,—and wide:
But very soon our fear was drowned
In one great surge of pride.

Doggedly we bore the jeers
Of seniors, juniors, sophs;
We tried our very best to please
The Principal and "Profs."

Patiently and hard we worked,—
Then, we were sophomores:
We lost our fear of juniors,
And thought the seniors bores.

We cherished all traditions,
We strove for further fame,
We caught the High School spirit,
We tried to play the game.

We wore the White and Purple
With shout and cry and yell
To basket-ball and foot-ball games
And Lit Contests as well.

Our junior year has come and gone;
And now with lofty aim,
We'll seize the torch the seniors drop
And carry it to fame.

Sophomore Class Officers

Moon Mullins
President

Dumb Dora
Vice-President

Maggie Jiggs
Secretary

Mrs. Muddie Smear
Adviser

The contest for Sophomore Class officers closed after a heated campaign by all concerned. Moon Mullins orating showed his ability to persuade his followers by securing the largest number of votes hence securing the office of president.

Dumb Dora secured the office of vice-president by her dum ones in political activities.

Maggie Jiggs gained her office of secretary through her ability to wield the rolling pin instead of the pencil.

The office of Sergeant-at-arms was won by a very adept, young lady, Tillie the Toiler; may she toil faithfully in her office by keeping undesirables from sophomore class meetings.

Perry Winkle, the youngest member of his class, was elected reported by an overwhelming majority.

Mrs. Muddie Smear, wife of Egbert Smear, Professor of Real-Estate Science, is our adviser.

Cicero Sapp, a scholarly chap gained his office by his ability to secure the vote of the feminine section of the class.

Winnie Winkle, young Perry's sister, was elected gift-taker by a clear majority.

The officers as a whole furnish a very fair example of the leadership and ability of the Class of '28. May their high standards remain before them in the future as they are at the present.

Sophomore Class

Though Northeast may have failed at times to realize that we are true jewels, and though we are said by seniors and juniors to be merely sophomores, we are really greater in number and achievements than they. Well may we hold our heads high, for we have shared a great part of the responsibility of the school, won many honors, and made the sophomore class mean more than ever before. Since we shall stand out as examples next year to the lower classmen, we have high hopes of glorifying ourselves still more, so that we may appear more worthy in the eyes of these severe critics.

Of course the senior class of this year is "The" senior class, as all other senior classes have been. But to be "The" sophomore class stands for a little more, and this is the title we hope is ours. It is well to remember that when the seniors and juniors are gone we are the guardians to whom the duty of keeping up our dear Northeast is left, and although we are allowed two more years at Northeast, (the school is indeed fortunate), may this year stand out to show what true and loyal sophomores can accomplish for their school.

Girls Debate

After three months of toil and diligent perseverance both of the Northeast Girls' debate teams emerged from the contest victorious. The debates, held Friday evening, February 5, proved that the Northeast teams possessed both intellectual ability and persuasiveness for both teams were able to influence two of the three judges.

Northeast's affirmative team at Southwest not only upheld that the United States should establish Federal control of child labor, but proved to the audience and judges that it was so. Opal Judd, in opening the debate, presented a convincing history of the question together with a strong argument. Lois Wise, second speaker, literally crumbled the arguments of her opponents to fragments in her rebuttal speech. As third speaker, Laura Judd was brilliant, fiery, and poised. Dorothy Teller, as alternate, did all in her power to aid the team both before and during the debate.

The Girls' negative team engaged the Westport affirmative in a most interesting verbal fray at Northeast. There was some doubt as to the outcome of the debate after the construction speeches, but Northeast saved herself in rebuttal. Mary Elizabeth Riepma started the rebuttal for Northeast with a very effective speech. Foline Eppstein followed with a rebuttal which tore down many of the affirmative contentions with clear logic. Ruth Campbell finished the negative attack with a rebuttal which was not only well organized but which surpassed all others in effectiveness and delivery.

Much credit must be given to Miss Burton, debate coach, through whose tireless efforts the girls were able to win the debates.

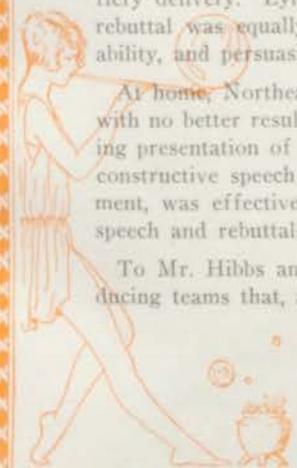

Boys Debate

The goddess of debate was seemingly against Northeast the evening of January 29, for Northeast lost both debates by two to one decisions. Nevertheless, much credit is due both teams for they debated in a far better manner than the score would seem to indicate. There is no disgrace attached to an honest defeat, and Northeast can be justly proud of her two hard-working teams.

Northeast's affirmative at Southwest debating Southwest's negative upheld the issue that "All foreign obligations contracted during the World War should be cancelled." John Pigg opened the attack with a clear-cut, decisive argument. Nathaniel Soderberg next hurled volleys of facts. Robert Richards concluded the Northeast argument with emphatic and fiery delivery. Lyle Killingsworth, as alternate, proved of great value to his team. The rebuttal was equally effective, proving the boys possessed quick minds, accurate thinking ability, and persuasive delivery.

At home, Northeast's negative team opposing Westport's affirmative, fought bravely but with no better results from the standpoint of votes. David Marshall gave a clear-cut opening presentation of the Northeast stand. Frank Woolridge, as second speaker, had a good constructive speech and delivered it well. Charles Grote, in closing the Northeast argument, was effective with his forceful delivery and directness of attack in both his main speech and rebuttal. Edward Lehrack was the "silent partner" of the team.

To Mr. Hibbs and Mr. Holmes, boys' debate coaches, must be given the credit of producing teams that, although they did not win, gave their best to Northeast.

THE URGE

First Place in Short Story by Minola Maddy.

The sun was completing its journey, cast long shadows through the west room of the little cottage. The room itself was not very large and the dark old furniture gave it a sombre air that was unrelieved by any glow from the old fashioned fireplace. Through a slightly open window came a bit of the spring air and the smell of green things outside. Opposite the window stood a small grand piano, the only new piece in the room. It was in front of this piano that Branán Allsted sat, his face buried in his arms. In his ears still burned the words of his teacher Mateo, spoken that morning.

"That's all I can give you, Branán, my boy," he had said simply, "The rest you'll have to get yourself. Perhaps if you could go east to study under some of the masters, your style would come to you. There is something lacking I cannot seem to give you," he ended sadly, "I'll come over tonight to see if we can plan a way."

Branán had only nodded dumbly, he knew only too well what his kind old teacher, one of the best in the country, had meant. Even in the first few years of study, Mateo had urged him to cultivate the individuality and spontaneity in his music that would mark him a genius. He could well remember then how he had visioned this day, the day when he could have finished, ready to start out on his career as a great musician. Yet, here he was still unfinished. Always there was something lacking, something which Mateo told him he had and which he himself felt that he possessed. A latent power that he could neither still nor arouse.

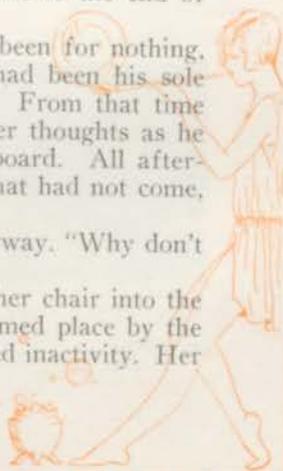

Perhaps if he could only go east to study more, it would come, but this he knew was impossible. His position as leader of the orchestra of the town's only theatre left him nothing for study trips. Then, too, he could neither leave his mother so delicate was she, nor could he take her from the care of her own physician and lifelong friends.

As he sat at the piano, Branán seemed to be all arms and legs and his shoulders were slightly rounded as though well accustomed to his place at the piano. His hair was a dark brown which glistened in the evening sunlight and as he raised his head, one could see that his eyes were the dark brown of a dreamer. He had the mouth and forehead of an artist and a strong chin. Indeed, there was nothing weak about Branán, but it seemed to him as if he had come to the end of everything.

As though his mother's years of teaching and struggles had been for nothing, for she having been both a player and singer of some note had been his sole teacher until she had become an invalid through an accident. From that time on, her boy had become her world. These were Branán's bitter thoughts as he sat miserably running his strong slender fingers over the keyboard. All afternoon he had sat there playing, listening for that hidden spark that had not come, playing a piece which he himself had composed.

"You must be tired, dear," spoke a sweet voice from the doorway. "Why don't you go out into the garden for awhile?"

Turning, Branán saw that his mother had silently propelled her chair into the room. Quickly he jumped up and wheeled her to her accustomed place by the window. She was a slight little woman wasted by years of forced inactivity. Her face was kindly but white and drawn from constant suffering and her eyes those of Branan older and faded.

He did not answer immediately, but crossed over to the door and stood staring out. His mother said nothing, only watched him a while in silence. In her eyes came all the love she possessed for her boy. All the sympathy and understanding one soul may have for another.

"Can't you tell me what troubles you, Branan?" she said at last. Branan walked over to the piano and seated himself once more so that she might not see his face. Stumblingly, he told her. Speaking as lightly as he could, saying little of the desired trip. But with a mother's instinct, she saw the despair behind his words and with a sickening feeling, realized that she was the one who stood between her boy and his ambition. Not a thought of reproach or of the long years she had cared for him entered her mind and being used to constant suffering, she had learned how to hide her pain.

"Play for me dear," she said arousing herself, "your own piece that you were playing just now. I love it so well." To please her, he began to play, rather listlessly. He played well but with a stiff, detached manner. Once he seemed to have found the secret, but it did not come again. It was only enough to show his mother that her faith was not unfounded. Suddenly, as though oppressed by the room, Branan jumped up from the piano.

"I think I will go out awhile," he exclaimed. His mother did not reply, she was busy thinking.

Leaving the house, Branan entered the garden. It was not a large one, only such as he could attend to in his spare time. Flowers grew in profusion everywhere and in the farthest corner stood a large old cherry tree just beginning to blossom. In the waning sunlight, it made a beautiful picture, but Branan saw nothing of this—his troubles were paramount in his mind and his eyes were hard with despair.

Why was it he could not play as he wished? What order of life was it that would give him a promise of such talent and yet withhold from him as if in mockery. A little bird flying home after a long day stopped on a limb of the old tree and began a song of praise to its creator.

"Yes, I could play that way too, if I were as carefree," he muttered. "You haven't anyone to criticise you and no one to care for but yourself. I have to drudge for my very existence. I wish I were as free." The image of his mother came to his mind and ashamed he brought himself up with a start.

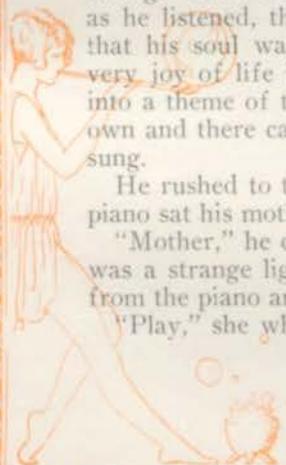

"What have I said?" he groaned and buried his head in his hands once more.

It was then that a note sounded forth in the light evening air, so pure it seemed to have come from the heavens. Even the bird stopped and tilted its head listening. Then came another soft and questioning, as though testing itself. And as he listened, there came to Branan's ears a melody so supreme, so beautiful that his soul was uplifted. On and on it trilled, as though enhanced by the very joy of life itself. Then with a deeper understanding, it lowered its tones into a theme of throbbing compassion. Dimly Branan realized the song was his own and there came to him a sudden desire to play. To play as he had heard it sung.

He rushed to the doorway and there he paused, for sitting in her chair at the piano sat his mother.

"Mother," he cried, "you? But I have not heard you sing for years!" There was a strange light in her eyes, as with a deft movement she whirled her chair from the piano and motioned him to it.

"Play," she whispered, her voice trembling. As if in a trance, Branan began to play, living again those moments in the garden. There was not a shade of difference in the song as he played it. Piece after piece he played, each one seeming to open new secrets to him. His soul was filled with the ecstasy of the conqueror.

At the door, Mateo just entering, paused lost in the spell of the player. Never had he heard such playing. Branan had come into his own. Eagerly Branan's mother searched Mateo's face, confident of what she would see, a look of understanding passed between them. Her battle ended, she sank back, lifeless. With a cry to Branan, Mateo sprang to her side.

Several hours later, as she lay on her bed, utterly exhausted, she heard dim voices.

"She'll be all right now, lad," a voice, that of her doctor was saying.

"Thank God," she heard Branan reply, and at yet another voice, she opened her eyes. Seeing her awake, Mateo crossed to her bedside.

"I'll have to tell you why I came this evening," he said to her. "I came with an offer from the business men of the city to send Branan east to study. But," he continued, with a twinkle in his eye, "now, Branan doesn't need it. His greatest teacher was right here."

Poem

THE THREE IRIS

First Place in Poem by Jane Gleason

(A description of the traditional Japanese arrangement of flowers)

He put the iris in a jade green bowl.
I watched his long brown fingers as he worked.

High on a green stem, of pure unspotted white
The tallest iris poised proudly all alone.
"This," he smiled, "is heaven;" and then
The shorter-stemmed blossom in his hand,
He placed in the jade vase and said:
"This is man." It lifts its white cup upward
And gazes at the proud tall iris overhead.
The third blossom had grown close to earth;
It had loved the brown soil its stem was short.
He also placed it in the green jade bowl.
It nestled there; its petals almost touched
The clear water. "This is earth," the brown man said.

Heaven, earth, man—all three in a bowl of jade.
And man, midway between the other two,
Forgets the earth and gazes heavenward, aspiring
Yet not attaining quite the heights above.
For man loves the earth only as it gives
Him foot hold to grow heavenward!

Heaven, earth, man—all, in a jade green bowl.

Essay

ON AN AQUARIUM

First Place in Essay by Gordon Willis.

I think that I shall never forget my first attempt at keeping a two-quart bowl of water with sand in the bottom. Of course, the water needed changing about twice a day and because it was allowed to go longer than that without attention, the fish died in the course of two or three months.

There is hardly anything which can be put in the average home which will furnish so much beauty, and such an undying and ever changing source of interest as a well balanced and attractively arranged aquarium. The many different and strange varieties of water plants and mosses and the beautifully colored animals of the tank never grow uninteresting or commonplace even under more or less constant observation.

In the long winter evenings when one likes to sit and dream, the aquarium with its active life, forms an excellent background for dreams, and thoughts of a rambling nature. Its long graceful fronds, the sunlight flickering on white sand, polished shells, and grottoed castles, make one think of the marvels of an aquatic fairyland, while the china mermaids and the languid fish make this dreamland seem almost true. Then one notices a huge Japanese snail or a newt or tadpole, and his mind goes back to the age of giant reptilion monsters and stone age men, and he imagines himself very tiny and helpless in the face of the newts and turtles, and his imagination rambles through battles, narrow escapes, and great adventures of his stone age forebears.

The newts especially remind one of the huge monsters of the reptile world, now ages past. With their rather deliberate and heavy manner of walking along the bottom resembling a crocodile more closely than anything else, and their forbidding look as they perch high on a projecting stem of water plant or ledge of castle, or lie basking in the sunlight of their diminutive beach they display all the sluggish and fearsome qualities of the reptile. They will fight over food, or just on general principles, with turtles or fish, four times their size, or with one-another with a ferocity that is appalling in such a little creature. Even the loss of a limb or tail only impairs their fighting until another grows on. Then when they are floating at the surface of the water, asleep, if anything startles them, they, with a swish of water, a flirt of the tail and a flash of gay color, dive to the protection of the depths with a surprising show of speed, or as they play, tumbling over one-another and racing around or eating out of one's hand they are as gay and friendly as puppies. These little creatures are capable of being so tamed that they can be handled, even out of the water, fed out of the hand, etc., and never display the slightest fear.

The various kinds of small turtles, which can be kept with fish, are very novel and are quite easily tamed. The great amount of pure joy to be gained from the care of a tiny turtle, as a pet, cannot be imagined by one who has never tamed one. They become very trusting, feeding from the hand and resting quietly on the open palm with perfect confidence when handled carefully and gently.

These little fellows are unconsciously, professional clowns, and cut more capers than any paid clown I ever saw. When I have been depressed, my turtles have cheered me, with their seeming, droll humor. They are always jolly, good fellows and, if annoyed, merely pull in their heads, legs, and tail; and patiently wait for the bother to pass on. Even in a fight a turtle is self-possessed and unexcited.

The goldfish, of course, are the aristocrats of the tank and, if kept by themselves, look very artificial, but when put with other animals their gay colors, beautiful fins and tails, and shining sides add a touch of grace and beauty, entirely lacking in the other denizens of the aquarium.

The Comet, with his long feathery tail and fins, has more speed and grace than any of the others. He is not very highly bred and does not seem freakishly expensive. He seems to be festive and always happy.

The next highest step in goldfish is the fan-tail. He is a pompous individual, with a very awkward swagger and seems to look down on all the rest of the fish, as he spreads his beautiful tail and swims away in his erratic way, seeming to need rest after every few jerks of his tail. Of course, like people, the more a goldfish is worth, the more self important he seems, and when one goes past the telescope-eyed fish, and the Black Chinese, into the veil-tails and lion-heads, the poor creatures are unbearable in their self-esteem. On the other hand, the common varieties, or more specifically, that one variety, known as Common Goldfish, puts on egotism to make up for his lack of breeding. One has to strike a happy medium, and choose Comets, and the pretty little Calicoes to have fish he can get along with.

The little fish which can be caught in ponds, such as shiners and minnows, make a tank very interesting and take away the artificial look of the goldfish. Many of them are really beautiful and add color, as well as nature.

Pollywogs or tadpoles, boatmen, diving spiders, and diving beetles are very rare in aquariums and one who is so fortunate as to be able to catch them in brooks and ponds, should take advantage of his opportunity and add a few of them to give his tank an unusual and extremely attractive touch.

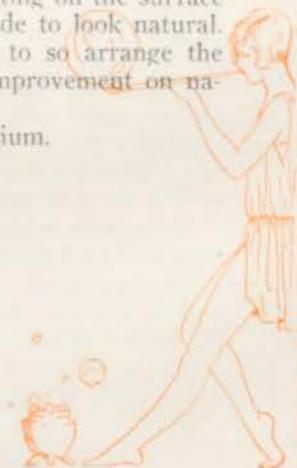

There should be some Japanese snails, Ramshorn snails or some other kinds, in an aquarium to keep algae from growing on the water plants. It is quite fascinating to watch these creatures as they move along and one never tires of watching them rasp off minute particles of food.

Plants, such as cabomba, ludwigia, and water grasses, have an important place to fill in every fish tank. They keep the water fresh for the fish, and eliminate a great deal of water changing. Cabomba, with its lacy leaves and graceful form, is quite an addition to the beauty of the tank, as indeed are most water plants.

The red and green leaves of ludwigia are shaped much like the plants we see growing in air, and this combination of queer coloring and normal form is quite striking.

Of course, all of these things may look merely gaudy unless arranged in an attractive and artistic manner. I have seen otherwise beautiful aquariums entirely spoiled by the very apparent lack of thought and care in their preparation and arrangement. Many times, plant tips and mosses are left floating on the surface of the water instead of being planted in white sand, and made to look natural. The secret of making an aquarium beautifully attractive is to so arrange the plants, rocks, shells, etc., that the whole will appear as an improvement on nature, but still natural.

These are the impressions I get, when looking at my aquarium.

Oration

THE CONSTITUTION

First Place in Oration by Robert Richards.

In this wonderful land of ours, which stretches from the bleak and stormy shores of old New England across the rolling prairies and the white-capped mountains of the West to the sun-wrapt coast of the Pacific, there is a spirit of unity, a love for a common ideal, which has held this broad and mighty nation of ours together in its times of strife. That spirit is the faith of the American people in their Constitution, which has ever been the defender of their liberties. A document that was the culmination of the political experiences of the centuries.

Let me picture to you the conditions under which this magnificent document was framed. In the thirteen new-born states, under the Articles of the Confederation, business was paralyzed, anarchy was rife, and foreign interference was threatened. And so it was when in May, 1787, there met in Philadelphia a distinguished group of representatives from the states whose sole purpose was to create a new government, national in form, yet one which would preserve the liberties of the people. And it was only as the result of compromise after compromise, that, guided by the omnipotent hand of God, they produced the Constitution of the United States, that document which secured to the individual those inherent rights which are his heritage.

Fortunately the fathers of the Constitution had provided for a system of checks and balances which has protected us from executive tyranny; has curbed hasty and unwise legislation; and established a judiciary, which serves as a defender and interpreter of the Constitution. This judiciary is the most genuine American feature in the Constitution; it is that august body, which has preserved the liberties of the American people and has protected the Constitution itself from the attack of political theorists. We were indeed fortunate that early in our history this guardianship fell into the hands of a supreme court dominated by John Marshall, our greatest jurist, and the man who did the most toward establishing the Constitution as the supreme law of the land, before which the proudest states must bend, and yet one which has expanded with the nation that it has protected.

For there has been a great change in the world of human affairs in the last hundred and fifty years. During that time this nation of ours has changed from a few impotent straggling states to a mighty nation, abounding in wealth; and yet the Constitution of 1787 is, in its basic principles, still the Constitution of 1926. Could the fathers of our Constitution have rolled back the clouds of the future and viewed the conditions of the present, they would have scarcely have been able to produce a document that would have been more suitable for the needs of today. While the Constitution was marvelous in what it provided, it was infinitely greater in what it left implied; for it has been through the judicial interpretation of the doctrine of implied powers that the Constitution has been adaptable to the ever-changing needs of this progressive age. Other governments have fallen before the ravages of time, but our Constitution has remained a vital living document, ever protecting the rights and privilege of the American people.

According to the Proverbs: "Where there is no vision the people perish: but he that keepeth the Law, happy is he." The vision of the American people is the Constitution, yet, however, great this vision may be, it will remain our guide only as long as we maintain an observance for the Constitution and its amendments, for it is perpetuated by the faith and respect of the American people. On every hand we see political theorists striking at the very heart of our government; we see foreign organizations defying our authorities; we see demagogues exciting racial strife and social unrest; and we see millions of dollars lost through the subtle grafts of corrupt politicians. This is the challenge to the youth of America! This is the Constitution's present test! Will it survive? It will; for through the murky clouds of strife and unrest is seen the gleam of that ever-shining guide, by which this nation has been led to greatness—the Constitution.

And let us pass on to our posterity this noble vision, not as a ruined Parthenon but rather as a superb Gothic cathedral, resplendent in its glory, which will inspire their faith and devotion and lead them on to greater and nobler achievements.

The officers realized the responsibility which was theirs, not only as representatives of the Northeast High School Unit, but as commanders in the Junior Unit of a great organized reserve body of the United States Army. As leaders they have tried to promote in the cadets the four-fold purpose of the training, namely: character, leadership, physical culture, and citizenship.

This year's unit was not in the limelight as much as last year's, but much practical work has been covered and the result is a fine standard. The cadets are to be commended for the fine spirit which they manifested in their work.

The officers wish to take this opportunity of thanking Sergeant Carroll and Sergeant Fitzpatrick for their constant efforts in trying to make our Unit efficient. Without their interest in us, and their loyalty to Northeast in every respect, we feel that our efforts would have been in vain.

It can never be said that a better spirit of loyalty and obedience ever existed in a company than in Company "C". The willingness to work on the part of the men has been dominant throughout the year.

The drill is executed with snap and there is accuracy and precision in every movement. This success has been attained through the fine direction of our instructor, Sergeant Fitzpatrick, who has endeared himself in the heart of every man.

With the field meet near at hand, Company "C" expects to play a great part in making Northeast come out with flying colors.

In parting, the company commander wishes to express his appreciation to the men and officers who have worked so faithfully under him and wishes them success in their journey through life.

Early in the year, the cadets of Company "D" showed a great interest in their work, co-operating in every way with their officers and instructors, and leaving no stone unturned in making the company the envy of the battalion.

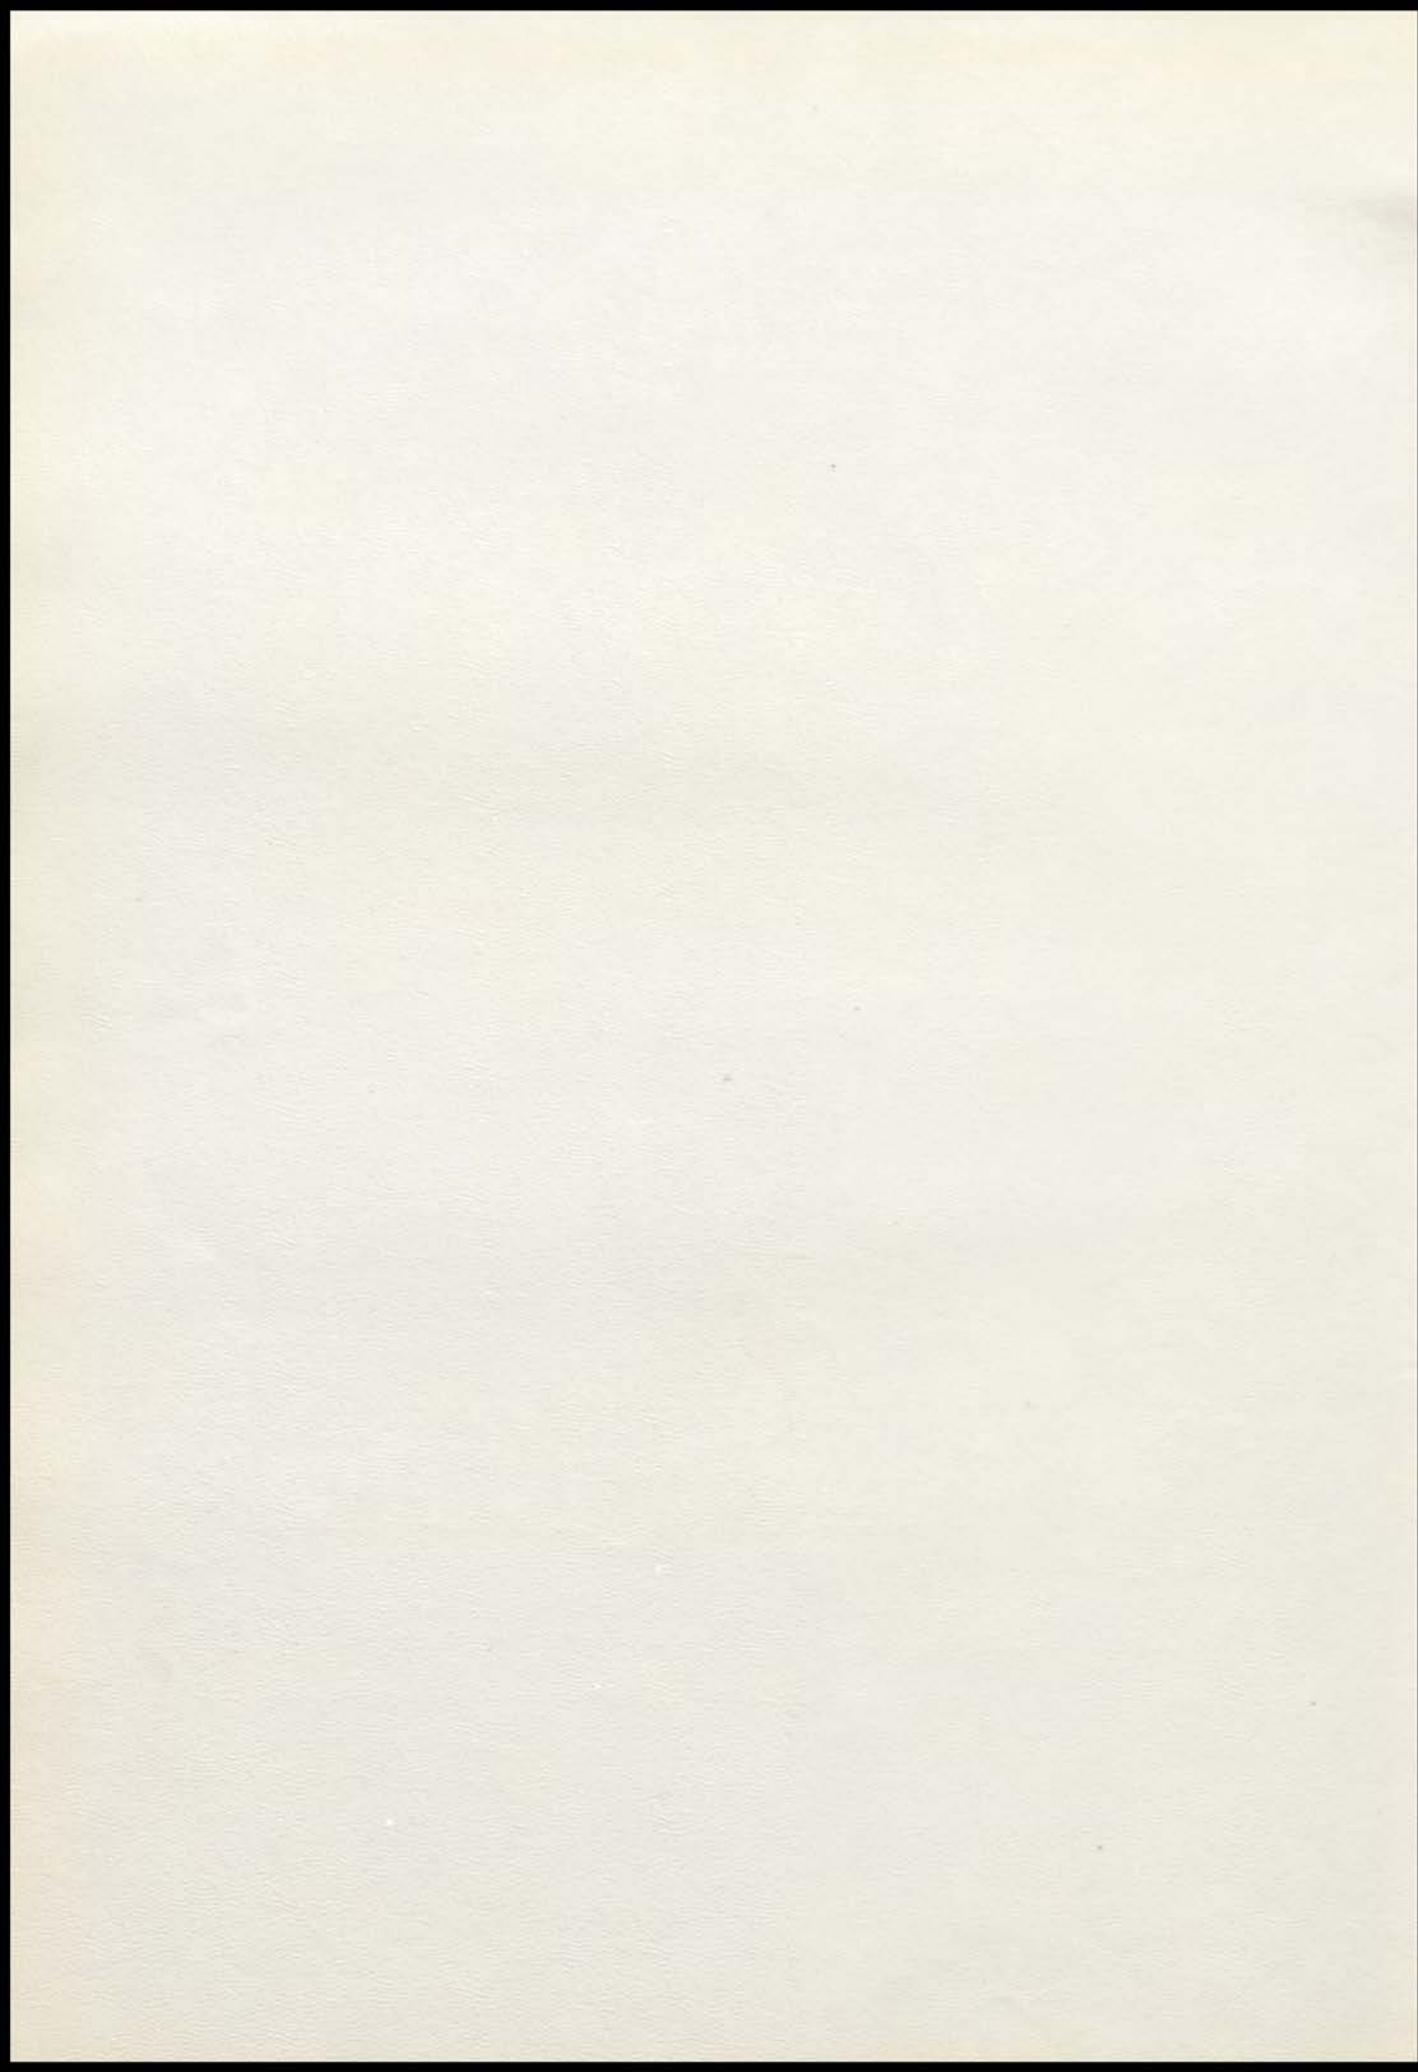

Company "D" has been honored with representation not only in the silent platoon but in the crack squad as well.

It is with great reluctance that we must part, but our sorrow of parting is lessened by the pleasure of knowing that success will surely be achieved if the great spirit shown by the men this year will be continued through life.

BOYS' ATHLETICS

Athletic Officers

GEORGE W. DAVIS

REEVES PETERS

VERNE PICKENS.

The Northeast athletic officers are completing another successful year in athletics, a successful year not merely in the matter of victories, but one of building strong, healthy, and high minded young men.

Of Coach Peters too much cannot be said. He was constantly striving to attain the best in his men, and his work has not been in vain. His football and basketball teams, both of which had to be built around too few lettermen, came off with a goodly share of the victories, and his track team, with the same situation, swept everything in its wake.

Mr. Davis has also done his share of the work. His management of Northeast athletics has always been of the best, but this year he took on an added burden and managed the entire basketball league to the satisfaction of all. Northeast is indebted to him for his work.

Assistant Coach Pickens has endeared himself to the hearts of all football men. Each fall and spring he has constantly worked with the second team men, and some of Northeast's best gridiron stars can trace their development to him. He was constantly on the lookout for new material. His influence will always be felt while he assists in Purple athletics.

The Northeast "N" club is organized to take the lead in advancing the school spirit and sportsmanship of those men who try out for the school athletic teams. It has done much in achieving this purpose in recent years, and its influence has been felt throughout the school.

The "N" club has no social functions, nor regular meetings such as characterize the other organizations of Northeast, but it has a tradition behind it, and any boy would deem it an honor to have the privilege of wearing its insignia.

The club is composed solely of boys who have earned a first team letter in some one of the branches of inter-scholastic athletics.

A winner of a football or a basketball letter must have played a majority of the quarters during the season of the sport, or must have proved to have exceptional ability at the end of the season. Tennis letters are awarded to those men who advance as far as the semi-finals in the annual inter-scholastic tournament. Track men must place first or second to a Northeast man in a dual meet, or go to the finals in an indoor meet, quadrangular meet, or state meet, to win the coveted insignia.

The 1925 Football Squad.

Although starting the season with only two letter men in the line-up, Northeast was able to finish third in a league composed of some of the finest gridiron teams in the middle west. In the first league game of the season, the Purple upset the proverbial dope and battled Westport, the title holders, to a 7-0 score in a game that was tendered with all the thrills of a real pigskin battle.

In every game played, the Petersmen provided the fans with exhibitions of excellent football, and more than once the not-too-secure places of Westport and Manual, who resided in first and second place, were in jeopardy.

Harvey Orrison, diminutive center and defensive safety, played a great game throughout the season, and was the direct cause, with a thrilling 95-yard run through a maze of Central tacklers, of winning the next to the last game of the season, with third place at stake.

Joe Chartrand, speedy tackle, and Clarence Hale, hefty guard, were the shining lights of an inexperienced line that at times rivaled the rock of Gibraltar.

In the backfield, Joe Brewer and Nelson Hayden cavorted to the best advantage, and were responsible for the largest part of the yardage gained during the season.

1926 BASKETBALL SQUAD

Bottom Row—Faris Davis, Joe Brewer, Elmer Dickhout, Virgil Jones (capt), Harvey Orison, William Dunn, Everett Moore, Jacob Lapin, Harold Van Dyke.

The basketball team started the season facing the same situation that the football men did, that of only a few letter men, and it finished as did the football team, third in a league of exceptional teams.

In the first game of the season, Westport, the league leaders were handed the scare of their young lives, and were able to win the game with only a two-point margin. On their second engagement, the Petersmen won the game in a thrilling five-minute play-off. It might not be out of place to say in this connection that the Blue and Gold proteges of Coach Edwards annexed the state championship and went to the third round in the national tournament.

Nelson Hayden and Virgil Jones, the diminutive captain, proved to be the satellites of the team, Nelson placing on the all-city team. Hayden was one of the high point men of the season and was responsible in no small degree for the victory over Westport. Jones' playing was characterized by a steadiness throughout the season, and he showed excellent generalship in the management of his team.

Results of the 1925 Track Season

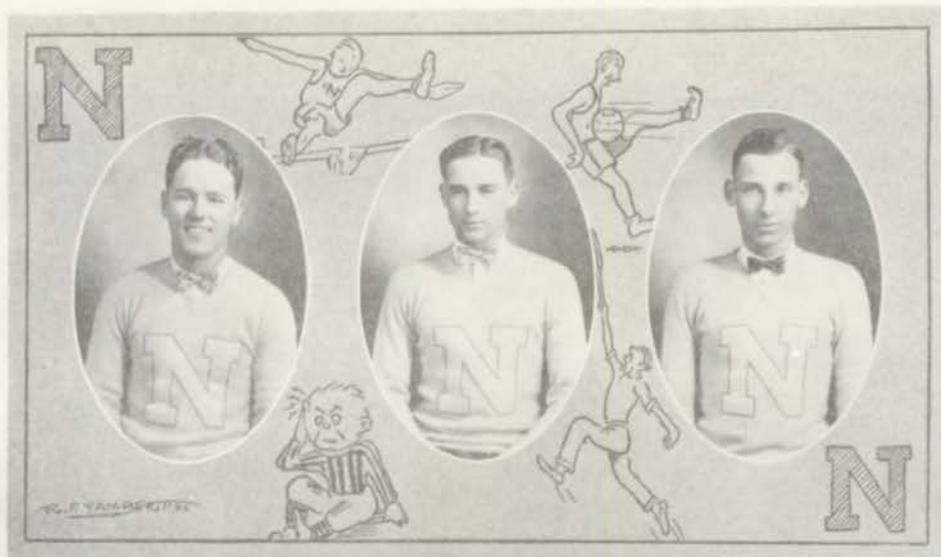

Last year's string of track victories was not complete when the Annual went to press. That string is so impressive, that it was thought best to record them here:

Won: 3rd consecutive K. C. A. C. indoor meet; 3rd M. U. vs. K. U. indoor meet; 3rd Missouri Valley indoor meet; 3rd dual meet with Manual; 3rd dual meet with Westport; 3rd State meet; 3rd quadrangular (city) meet; most of the relays at the Kansas relays, the Drake relays, the Missouri Valley relays, and at Manhattan. At the Kansas relays, two K. U. records were set up, in the mile relay and in the 880-yard relay. The time for the mile was 3:32.5, and for the 880, 1:32.2. At the Drake relays three records were broken. In the 440-yard relay a time of :42.3 was set up. In the 880-yard relay, the tracksters stepped off the distance in 1:32.8, and in the mile relay the time was 3:30.5. Two state records were also broken, in the 880-yard relay in the 440-yard dash, the former time being 1:32.9, and the latter being timed at 51.2. A world's record was broken at the Kansas relays when the speed men stepped off the distance in the 880-yard relay in 1:32.2.

During the season the track team, under the leadership of captain Miles Henley won seventeen silver and gold loving cups to place in the school's trophy cases!

The Captains

MAX HENRY

Max was a real football captain, performing his duty at all times in the back-field and keeping the morale of his team always at the highest possible ebb, when at times everything seemed to be against it.

Of his fighting spirit, too much cannot be said, for he was always willing to assume his share of the burden. Despite his lack of size, he was entirely fearless, and was a consistent ground-gainer. His success cannot be questioned.

VIRGIL JONES

"Jonesy" also lacked the size of his charges, but this fact did not keep him from being one of the stars in the inter-scholastic basketball league.

He was a clever floor man, and could always be depended upon for a goal at the proper time. Yet he never tried to "grandstand"; his play was always for the good of the team.

With three years of excellent achievement behind him, "Jonesy" can certainly be said to have been successful in his high school career.

LEONARD SMITH

Leonard is a track man of the first degree, and was certainly the ideal man for the captaincy.

He was never of the brilliant type of athlete, for everything he achieved was the product of an infinite amount of hard work. To Coach Peters credit must go for having the foresight to make a track star of him, yet the bulk of the credit should be given "Smitty" for his patience and hard work.

The "N" Men

CLARENCE HALE

Hale was one of the leading guards of the city on the football squad, and was also one of the cinder satellites of his school.

As a track star his merit had been proven prior to this year, but his gridiron record had to be made, and he did the job up right.

In the hurdles his ability was especially noticed and it was he who came out in front for his school more than once.

He leaves an enviable record.

ROBERT ROSS

Ross was one of the few letter men coach had to depend upon to pile up points in meets, yet he did his share and his success is not to be questioned.

This year completes his second year of successful work on the track squad.

In his first year he was more than successful on the cinder track and in the indoor meets, and already this year he is carrying to completion his string of victories.

NELSON HAYDEN

Nelson is finishing his first and only year in Northeast athletics.

He was the only man on the purple team to make the all-star in basketball, he was one of the leading back-field stars in the football league, and everything points to a season of successful track work for him.

In the thrilling game with the Westport basketeers, his playing stood out of all the players on the floor, and his place on the all-star was cinched by his performance.

The "N" Men

EVERETT MOORE

Moore is a junior who has played his first year of basketball, still he played the season as a regular.

He was a speedy floor man, and was one of the high scorers of his team.

His playing is characterized by his steadiness and by his accurate eye for the basket. He will be one of the stars of his team and perhaps of the league next year.

HARVEY ORRISON

Harvey was the star of the football season with a sensational 90-yard run for a touchdown.

He was also a basketball letterman and a track man.

He was one of the smallest athletes out, yet was one of the best.

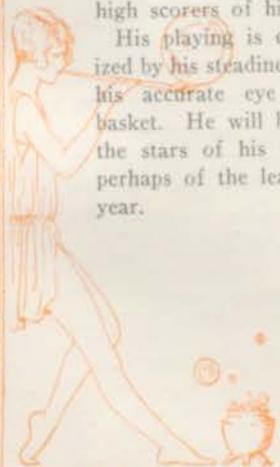

His gameness against overwhelming odds has at all times placed him in the lead of athletes of his size, and it can be said that he has done much for North-east in his interim.

JACK AULD

Jack is at work in his first year of track, and shows promise of being one of the leading half-milers in the Missouri Valley.

At the Kansas relays he won the medley relay for his school on sheer pluck, when everyone thought he was done.

With such spirit as this Jack can be counted on to help a great deal next season.

The "N" Men

WILSON SIMMONS

Simmons is one of the stars, and mainstays of the phenomenal Purple track team. The fact that he is only a junior with two years of track to his credit is synonymous of his success.

His continued success next year is assured.

He won his letters by tossing the javelin, winning over other athletes of the city, and he proved to be the surprise of the day.

MEREDITH McDANIEL

"Merry" can always be depended on to pile up some points in a track meet for his school. He has years of speed work to his credit, having been on a world's record relay team in 1924.

"Merry" has worked hard to further his athletic ability, and he has succeeded in no small way.

With another year to add to his victories he and the school should profit greatly.

FRANK WOOLRIDGE

Frank is a plodder, and an appreciation of his work can only be written by a teammate who had the good fortune to play with him side by side on the seconds.

He was never more than a sub, because of an injury to his arm the first of the season, yet his spirit was always good.

That such a man is privileged to wear the Northeast letter is to place the standards of athletics on a higher plane and to serve as a stimulus for those who follow.

The "N" Men

JOE CHARTRAND

Joe was a hard tackler, was the possesor of an excellent spirit, and was a good enough gridiron man to be chosen on the second all-city team.

He would have been a two-year letter man if an injury received while practicing had not shortened his career, but in his one year he has carried his load valiantly and done his part of the burden.

AL MORRIS

Al was one of the few three year letter men of the season. He was a brainy quarter back, a steady guard, and a consistent point man in track.

In the thrilling game when the Northeast basketballers defeated Westport, it was Al's brilliant guarding which kept the marksmen of the South Side school from hitting the goal.

He has certainly done his part to further the athletic fame of Northeast.

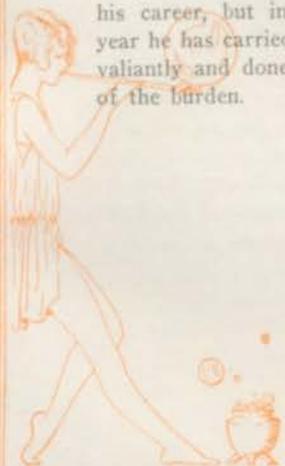

SCOTT HARRISON

"Beef" started the season as a sub, but his work was so excellent he finished as a regular.

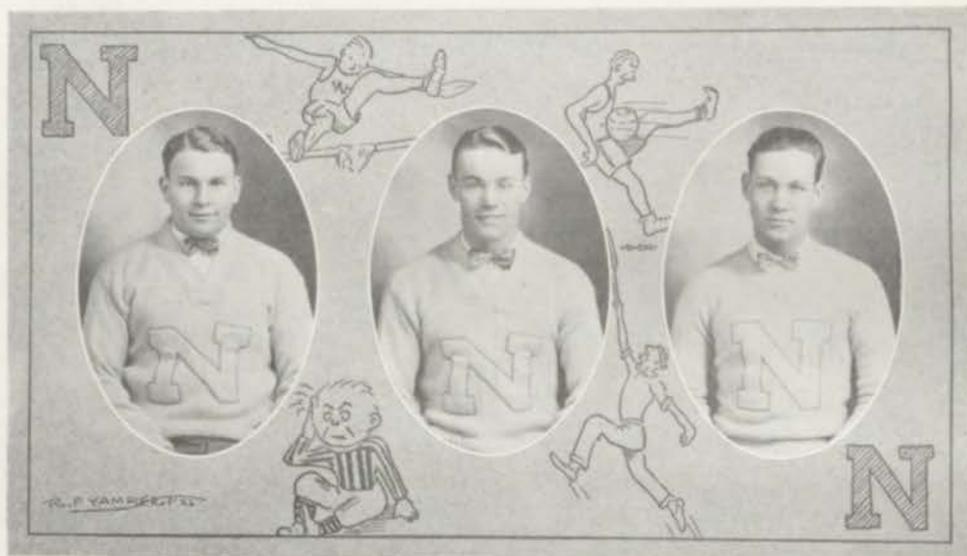

His play was the feature of the second team until he got a regular berth on the "varsity" after which he held up his side of the line with persistence.

His size and his playing ability have helped him a great deal, but it was his pluck which made him stand out at all times.

His success next season is assured.

The "N" Men

JACOB LAPIN

"Jakey" was a hard hitting guard on the football team, and was a bear for punishment.

He is at all times the hard working type of athlete, willing to do what the coach says, and if he follows in the footsteps of his illustrious brothers, who for four years kept purple athletics on a high plane, he will have succeeded in his task.

JOE BREWER

Joe was a shining light of a sometimes brilliant backfield, and was one of the leading point men on the basketball league.

He will be one of the leading Purple athletes next season.

In track he has also done his part in furthering his athletic fame and he can be counted as one of the best of the purple athletes.

WILLIAM DUNN

Bill was one of the fastest ends in the local league and was rewarded with a place on the second all-star.

He was also a basketball letterman, with a successful record.

The fact that he earned a berth on the second all-star without a bit of previous football experience is a fair barometer of the type of athlete he is.

The "N" Men

ELMER DICKHOUT

Dickhout is completing his second year in Northeast athletics. He is a fast and shifty football player, being especially good on the offense.

In basketball he is also a valuable cog in the Northeast machine. He is possessed of a natural athletic ability, which stands him in good stead on the court.

In track he has also proved his worth. More than once he has added some few points that were needed to help in winning some meet.

WALTER SIMCOX

Simcox is one of Northeast's most valuable track men. He has performed only two years for the Purple, but in that short time he has firmly demonstrated his ability.

His speciality is high jumping, and in this branch of the cinder track art, he is past master in Kansas City high school athletics.

With Walter back to strengthen the squad, Northeast should again prove her supremacy in track next year.

GLENN JONES

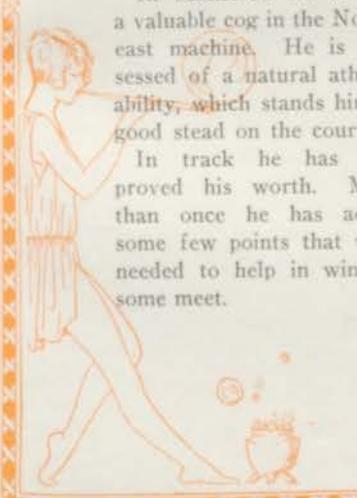

Glenn won his letter in basketball this year, thereby emulating his illustrious brother, Virgil, Northeast's diminutive captain.

Like his brother, Virgil, is a great team man, playing always for the good of the team rather than himself.

He is strong on shooting baskets, being in the scoring column of his team in practically every game.

His specialty is guarding, however, and he has proved his ability in that line.

Next year his influence will be keenly felt.

The "N" Men

ERNEST FRITCHIE

Ernest stood out well as an end on the football team, plied his trade to such an advantage on the second basketball team that he was rated as one of the stars, and is now engaged in track. He has always plodded in athletics, and in this his first year of regular work, he has been very successful. He should be a valuable cog next year.

WELBOURNE MOISE

Moise won his letter this year on the cinders, but that doesn't mean that he isn't an all-around athlete. He was counted as a regular on the football squad and was in a fair way to win his letter when an untimely sickness cut short his career.

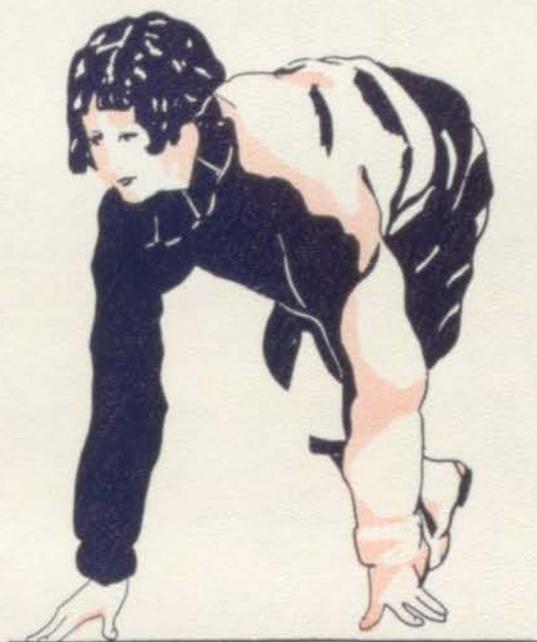

He leaves the school with a fine record behind him.

ALBERT DORSETT

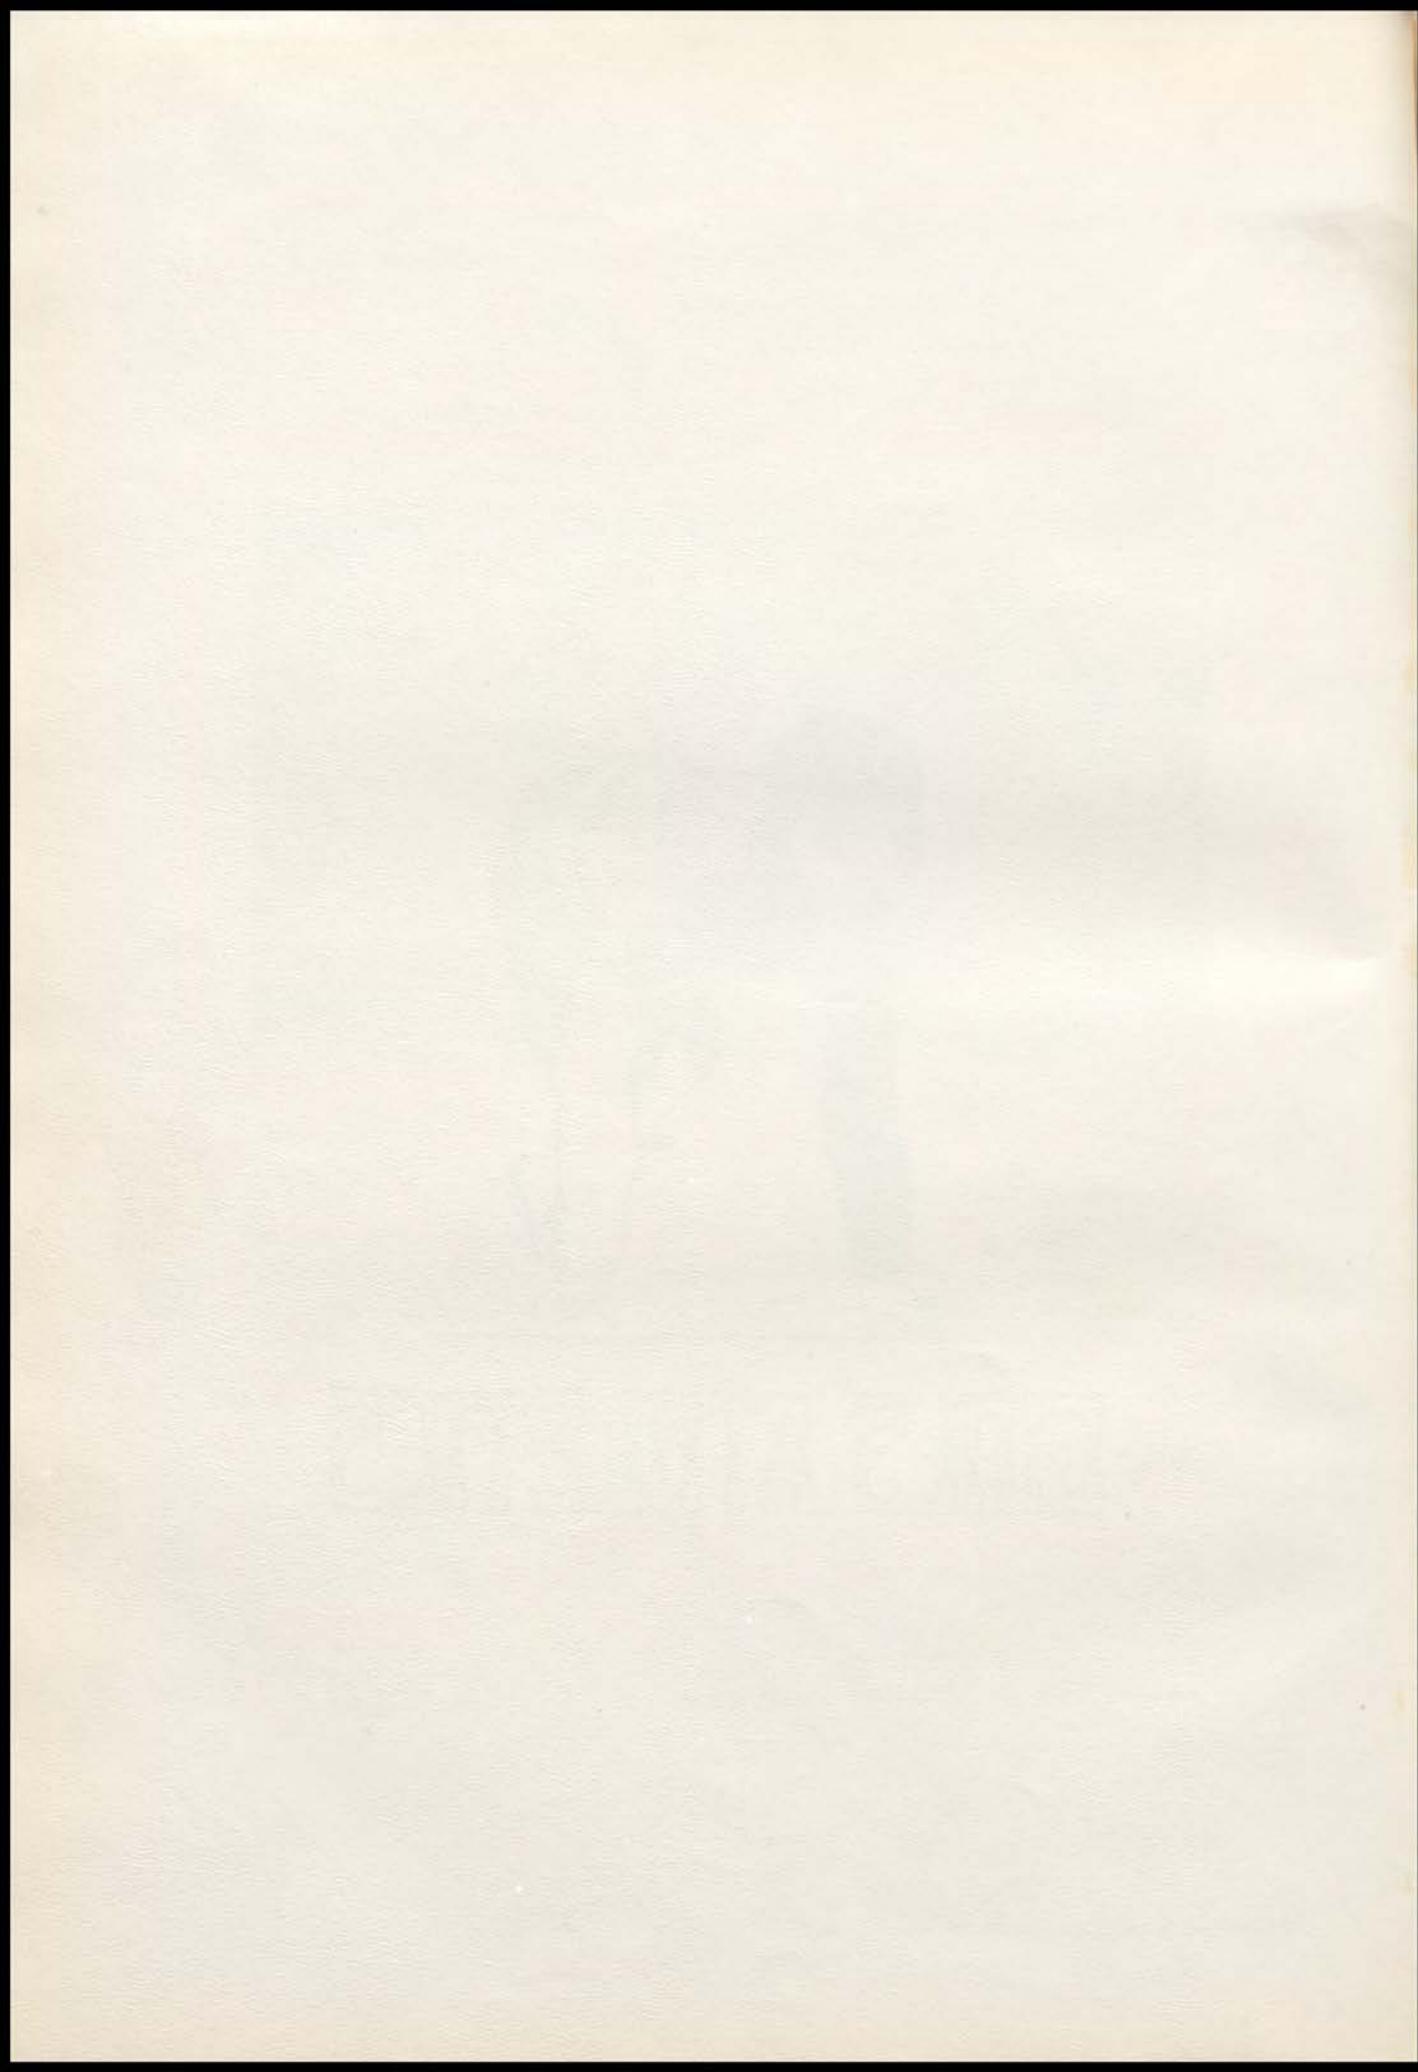

Al also won his letter this year in track. He has been a consistent point winner for the purple, and has aided in putting Northeast nearer the winning column in more than one meet.

He should be an outstanding member of the track team next year.

The Northeast Olympic Association is an athletic organization for girls whose purpose is to uphold the interest in athletics and to set standards for good sportmanship. It is the most democratic organization in the school. We use the point system—when a girl has made twenty-five points in athletics, she is automatically admitted to membership. To maintain her membership in the association she must prove herself a good sportsman and be always ready to serve. She must also make two and one half athletics' points each month.

Points are given for the following; ten for hockey, basketball, baseball, track, tennis, swimming, E in dancing, E in gym Junior and Senior years, state letter, and badge tests—One point is given for every ten miles of hiking done.

This year the girls have established a new high record which can be very profitably followed in future.

Top Row—Martha Hardin, Leola Shawhan, Frances Thurmond
Second Row—Mary Glenn, Maxine Trenton, Florene Turner.

This being the last year of interscholastic tennis for girls, Northeast decided to have it end in her favor. She began by having a preliminary school tournament in the spring. Out of, approximately, thirty entries, a team was picked to represent Northeast in her last fight for tennis championship.

The team consisted of Marion Young, singles; Florene Turner and Leola Shawhan, doubles; and Martha Hardin, mixed doubles. Frances Thurmond played second singles and Maxine Trenton and Mary Glenn second doubles.

Northeast won in both girl's singles and girl's doubles. Every member of her first team except one came out a winner. The three girls who won a Tennis N are Florene Turner, Leola Shawhan, and Marian Young.

We are very glad that we can offer Northeast this victorious record in her last year of Girl's Inter-scholastic Tennis.

Some people are born great and some have greatness thrust upon them, but the girls who come out for track belong in neither of these two groups. They achieve greatness.

The gym girls have responded enthusiastically to the call for track girls. Every morning they have access to the gymnasium, and use it to advantage. Some practice running, jumping, throwing baseballs and basketballs so that they may honor their class and themselves.

If you observe closely you can see that the girls who are out for track are not eating pastries or candies, in order that they may keep physically fit.

In the past years the following track records have been made: 60-yd. dash 8.2 sec., Blanche Burbarger, 1925; 75-yd. dash 8.6 sec., Charlotte Harper, 1923; 50-yd. relay, 39.9 sec. Ruth Burke Audry Otts, M. Gebhart and Frances Hurst, 1925; running broad jump—14 ft., 2 in., M. Inglebee, 1922; basketball throw forward—45, Mildred Moore, 1925; basketball throw, 175 ft., Edith Lee McDaniel, 1925. A great part of these honors are due to Miss Heibel and Miss Stewart, who have instructed and coached each individual and team.

Through hard and consistent training, the following girls have made this year's 1926 track squad.

The Girls' basketball season opened the first of December and closed the last of March. The first three games of the series proved to be practice games and the latter three afforded close competition. A very unusual and remarkable point concerning the senior team was the fact that throughout the games they didn't fail in scoring thirty points. The seniors defeated the juniors in the closing game of the series making them the champions of 1926.

The hockey season for this year was a great success. About seventy-five girls came out to be loyal to their class and enjoy the hockey spirit. The competition between the three classes afforded great excitement for the girls and the spectators also. The extreme loyalty of the players was shown when they faced a snow storm to play their game. At the end of the season the Juniors and Seniors were tied for first place, the scores of the games having to be counted to distinguish the victors. The Juniors won by a score of nine to eight. The captains were: Dorothy Worrell, senior; Dorothy Ferris, junior; Betty Johnson, sophomore.

The girls' 1926 baseball season opened the first of March with a representation of approximately twenty girls on each squad, from which the final teams were chosen.

At every practice the girls showed marked improvement, which went to prove that this year's champions did not win their title without superior playing and teamwork.

One day a week was set aside for the purpose of playing off these inter-class games, which afforded much interest and rivalry on the part of each team.

THE SENIOR PLAY

The senior play, "Green Stockings," an English comedy by A. E. W. Mason, was presented in the auditorium the nights of May 14 and 15 with great success.

The story is woven around the Faraday family, consisting of four daughters, one who is married; one, engaged; one, a widow; and the last, single. This, seeming a disgrace in the eyes of the family, the latter is forced to wear green stockings at each of her sister's weddings. Her father is determined that she shall not wear green stockings a third time and makes the youngest sister wait until after Celia's marriage before her own marriage. To help matters out Celia invents a lover, a soldier, and is then treated quite differently by the entire family.

However Celia's Colonel Smith, her fictitious lover, actually "turns up," embarrassing her by a horde of questions and finally claiming her as his long hoped-for sweetheart.

Because the number of girls in the dramatic art class is twice that of the boys Miss Hobbs doubled the cast of girls.

Ellen Woolridge as Aunt Ida, the sole confidante of Celia, posed as the sister-in-law to her own brother Frank Woolridge who took the part of William Faraday, the father of the girls. Lyle Killingsworth, as Robert Tarver, acted his part as a would-be politician very cleverly. William Misselwitz as Jimmie Raleigh the English fop was exceedingly funny and clever; he acted his part with unusual talent.

Marian Crutcher and Kathleen Burns both acted very well and put themselves into the character of Celia with great adaptability. Mercedes Rey and Dorothy Ryder played as the younger sister, the one waiting to be married and disclosed at the last all the family secrets to the eager ears of Colonel Smith.

Christmas Play

"Come Out of The Kitchen," a modern comedy, which was presented in the auditorium, the night of December 11 and 12, was the first of its kind ever attempted in our school; but if the 2,500 people who witnessed it is a sign of its success then success may be accorded.

The story is woven around the Dangerfield family. Upon reaching Virginia, the children lease their Mansion to a wealthy northerner, Burton Crane, and his guests. He expected a staff of servants on his arrival, so with no word to their father, who was in Europe because of ill health, of their intentions, the Dangerfield children donned cap and aprons and assumed their respective positions. When Mr. Crane arrived with his guests, the Falkners, they were in full action. The situations arising from the state of affairs provoked the audience to mirth many times.

Nathaniel Soderberg, as Mr. Crane, and Marian Crutcher as Mrs. Falkner, put themselves thoroughly into their parts which were played with ease. Lyle Killingsworth was exceptional for his stage presence and Mercedes Rey as Olivia Dangerfield, who took the part of the cook, characterized the Irish work girl type quite charmingly. Kathleen Bridges as the negro mammy perhaps had the most difficult part, but did justice both to herself and the play. The Kitchen scene of the play was delightfully done.

The play was under the direction of Miss Hobbs, and Mr. Pinkney had charge of the lighting effects. Approximately $400 was made on the play.

Delphian Play

"Thursday Night" a comedy of married life was presented in assembly January 29 by the Delphian Literary Society.

A young couple and two visiting mothers-in-law furnished the humorous situation. Zelpha Land and Laura Sargent were very adeptly cast as the mothers-in-law and they characterized their parts well. Reva Foster and Edward Baehr played the roles of the young couple.

The scene was in the kitchen of the young couple. It was a realistic setting, and the homely kitchen duties made the acting natural.

Alpha-Debater Play

The Alphas and Debaters presented a Booth Tarkington play "The Trysting Place" in assembly, March 19,

The scene of a hotel where several couples met, and thinking it entirely secluded, talked matters of personal interest. But hidden, were two unintentional eavesdroppers.

A youth in love formed the most of the laugh-provoking comedy and the audience fully appreciated the cleverness and skillful playing of it all.

Later comes the Class Day,
Enough said.
Much enjoyment from Senior Play Comedy.

Our Award Day comes next
For all honors won. We

View with delight our Annual.
Indeed and next is Commencement.
The Seniors bid farewell.
On time goes and thus
Reveals the end of another
Year.

EASTER

Activity Leaders' Chorus.

Oh follow the fleeting honor point
Over the world and back
Till your face grows red and your collar wilts
And your temper begins to crack;
Follow the wraith of the ballot-slip
Though the eats at your place grow cold
For a class pin awaits at the end of the term,
And the race is still to the bold.

Dorothy Teller
Sat in the cellar
Studying her debate;
When asked what she's doing,
She said, "I'm pursuing
A course that'll win sure as fate."

"B. H. S. C."
We ask anxiously,
"How does your society grow?"
"We cram and we stuff
When of food there's enough
And that makes us larger you know."

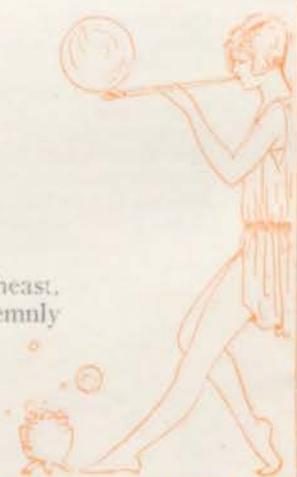

Wee Virgil Jones
Ran through the hall
Up the floor and down the floor
After the ball,
Guarding his opponents,
Throwing at the goal.
"Is old Jonsey everywhere?"
"He sure is, That's his role."

Committee be nimble!
Committee be quick!
Give us a mixer,—
Or we'll be sick.

When you have a sub,
And the lesson's tough,
And your hopes begin to sour,—
Hark to the notice the office sends
"Assembly called third hour."

To every red haired student in Northeast,
This space in the 1926 Annual is solemnly dedicated.

May Youth flame on forever.

RECREATION HOUR

Tit—What do Katz and Owls have that no other drug stores have?
 Tat—Alphas and Thetas.

Charles Grote (in club meeting) "We will now go to—Has anyone anything to say before we go?"

Teacher: "In what shape is the world?"
 Willie: "It's in a heck of a shape."

Mr. Lovejoy: "In all the world there are not as many people, counting black, yellow, red, white,—"

Bright Stude: "and green."

* Mr. Davis (in chemistry class, asking the meanings of Latin words) "James Caskey, what is duco?"

Jimmie: "Duco is a kind of automobile finish."

She: "Will you promise me something?"

He: "Yes, what is it?"

She: "I want you to quit shooting dice."

He: "Why?"

She: "Well, those little things have as much right to live as you have."

THE VALUE OF COURTESY AND SERVICE

No class of young people more fully appreciate the value of courtesy and service on the part of our organization than the high school students. You ride the street cars and the buses daily and we realize that you are quick to note any special acts of courtesy on the part of a car crew or a bus operator.

Good sportsmanship is as much to be found in every day business as it is on the gridiron, the basketball court or the athletic field. High school students have a reputation as good sportsmen and especially is this true in our own high schools. We all like to win, of course, but that is not always possible and so our good sportsmanship shines out the brightest when we lose with a smile and shake the hands of the victors in a true spirit of good fellowship. As you go out into the world rubbing elbows with all classes and sorts of people, you will find that this same spirit, this same fine sportsmanship you learned in high school, will bring you success and happiness.

The employees of The Kansas City Railways are teammates in a great game, a game of serving the people of Greater Kansas City—not only transporting them but giving them efficient, courteous service. Victory in this game means winning the goodwill and friendship of our customers, and among our thousands of customers are the high school students.

We hope that our efforts to please you have been successful.

Among our more than 3,300 employees are many graduates of the Northeast High School. No doubt some members of your 1926 class will join our organization in the near future. Then you will even more appreciate the value of courtesy and service.

KAYSEER

The Acid Test

QUALITY
PRINTING
at PRICES
that
PLEASE

PERFORMANCE is the acid test that proves or disproves one's claims of ability. Last year we quoted prices and made Quality and Service claims that secured the contract for printing the 1925 KAYSEER. In the "acid test" those claims proved one hundred percent true. As a natural result, our school annual business for this year shows an enormous increase. And the "acid test," on a larger scale, has again proven our every claim.

This school annual, and other work produced in our modern plant, constitute the best proof we can offer of our ability to produce "Quality Printing at Prices that please." For prices on printing of any kind,

TEAMWORK

Teamwork on the telephone means courteous, alert cooperation just as teamwork in school or anywhere, whether in work or in play.

Three persons form this telephone "team"—(1) the person calling, (2) the operator and (3) the person called. When all are sure of the number desired, speak distinctly and respond with alacrity, better service results.

The vast complication of electrified machinery is, of course, the first requisite of telephone service, but, second to this equipment, is intelligent cooperation—teamwork—of those at both ends of the telephone line and at the middle.

We appreciate and thank you for lending such cooperation.

TOMBSTONE

Here lies the wife of Benjamin Brown—
Ben tried to give her the best in town;
Bought her a radio—limousine—
Vacuum cleaner and washing machine.
Yet here she lies—an early victim—
And “washdayits” is the doctor’s dictum.
She spent o’er the “wash” one year in seven
And now she’s dead and gone to heaven.

Everyone has in his or her life met with disaster.

Caesar faded at Rome's downfall. Elaine fell so hard for Lancelot that she never got up. And even our own little cheer leaders took their tumble at the games when they tried to perch on their megaphones.
