An Appreciation

"What could time do to a frame that houses a heart bubbling with youth and friendliness? What do years mean to a man whose minutes are atoms of activity; whose hours are kind thoughts; whose days are full of unselfishness; whose months mark accomplishments?"

JAMES LEROY SMITH

"Few men can point to fifty years of such conspicuous and distinguished service in the cause of education."

ADMINISTRATIVE

The function of
All Education is to maintain and develop Civilization, that is, to prevent Human Society from going back and to help it go forward.
Never was the need for Education so great as at the present time.

The purposes of organization are:

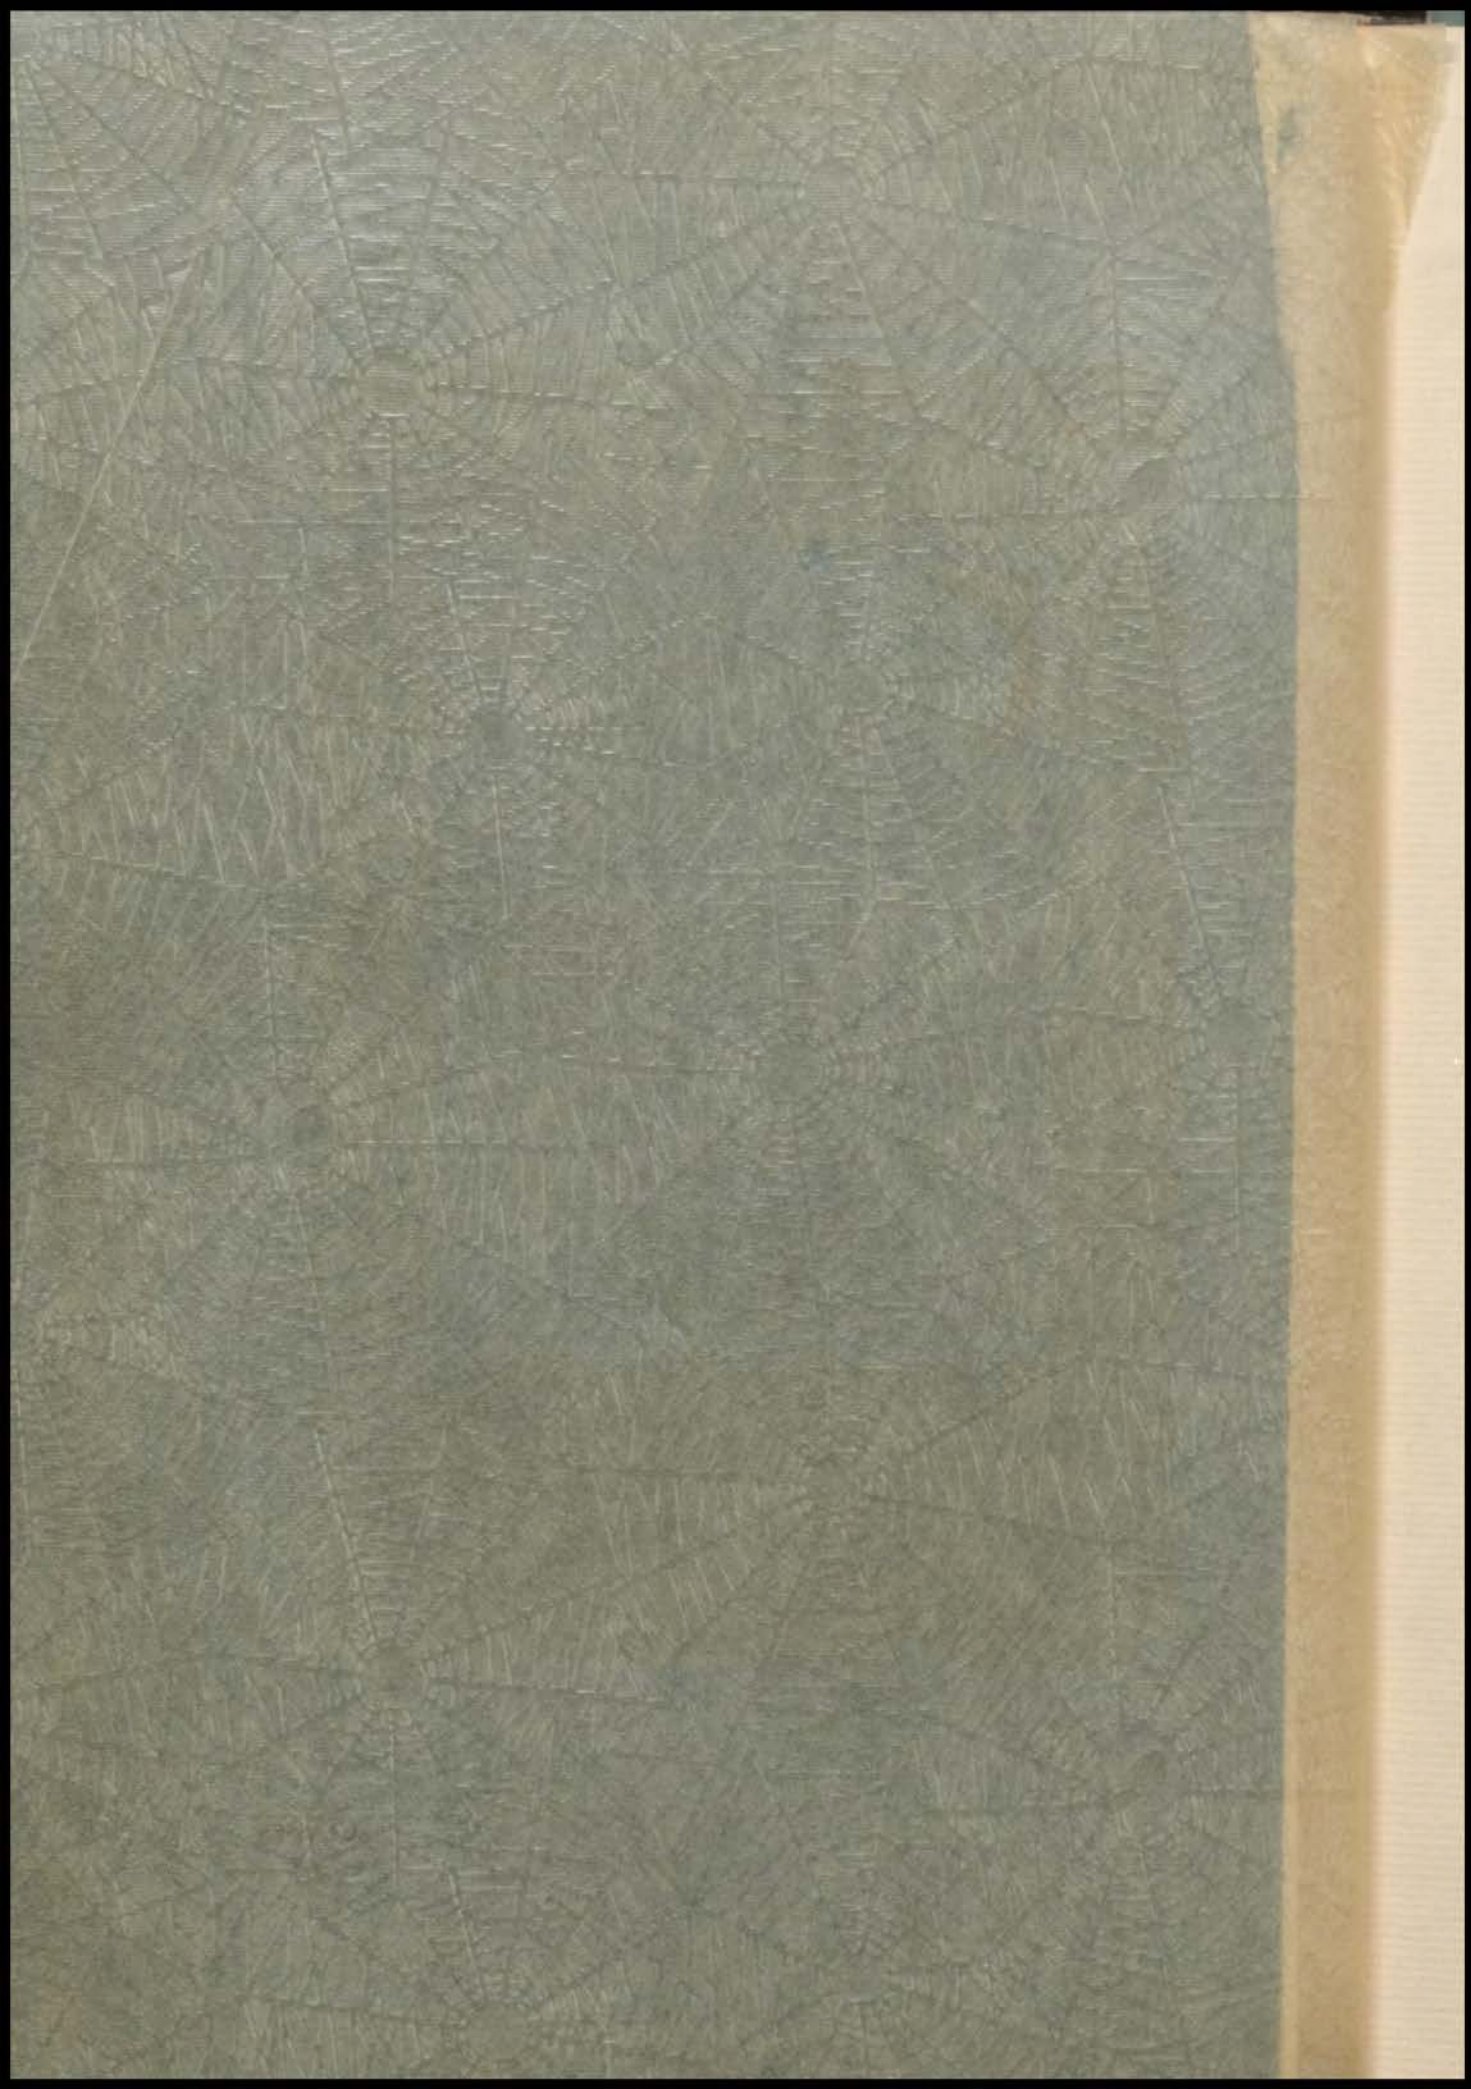

To raise the standard of home life. To develop better trained parenthood.
 To bring into relations the home and the school, that parent and teacher may co-operate intelligently in the education of the child.

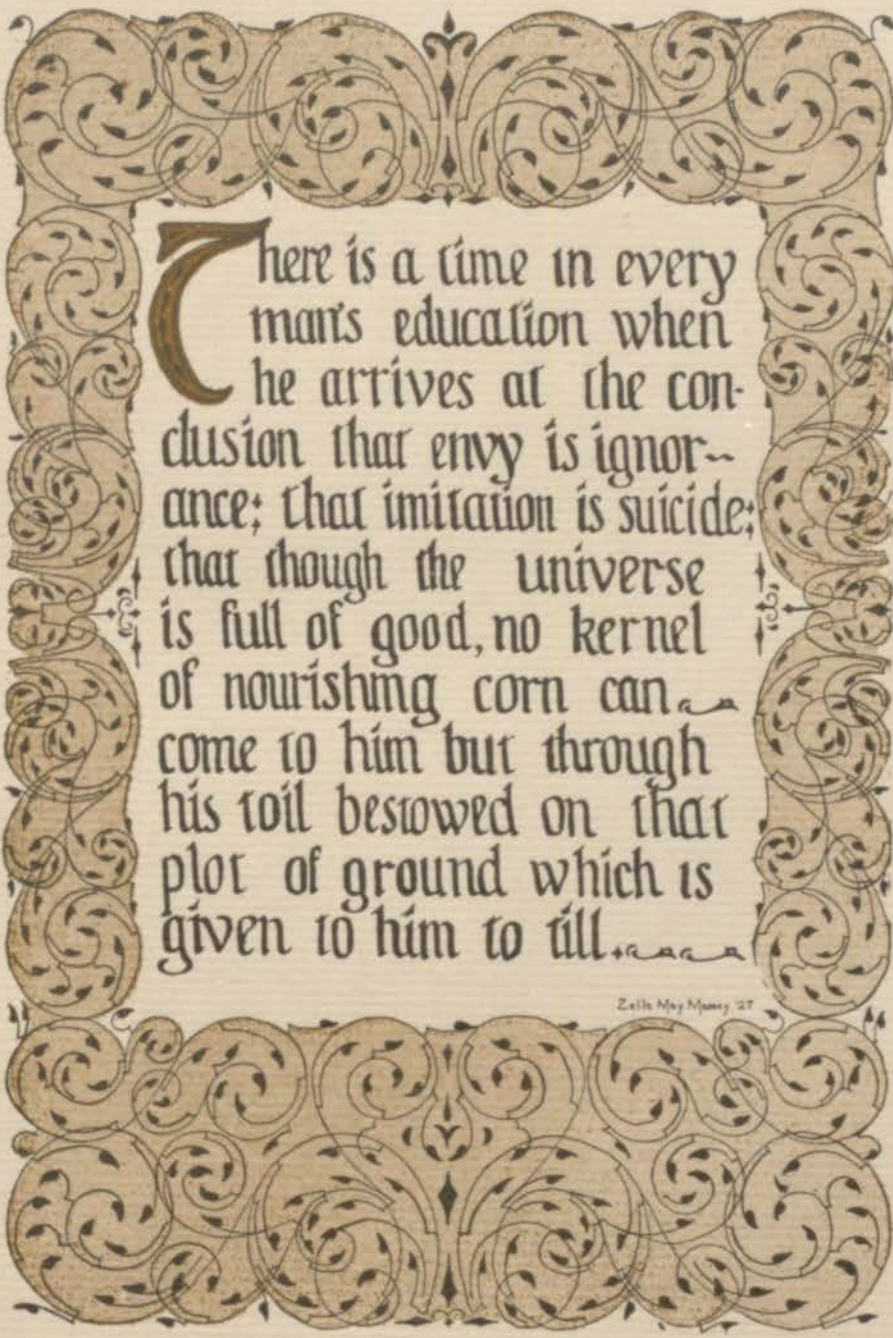

To surround the childhood of the whole world with that loving, wise care in the impressionable years of life, that will develop good citizens instead of law-breakers and criminals, and to carry the mother-love and mother thought into all that concerns or touches childhood in Home, School, Church, State or Legislation.

To carry the mother-love and mother thought into all that concerns or touches childhood in Home, School, Church, State or Legislation.

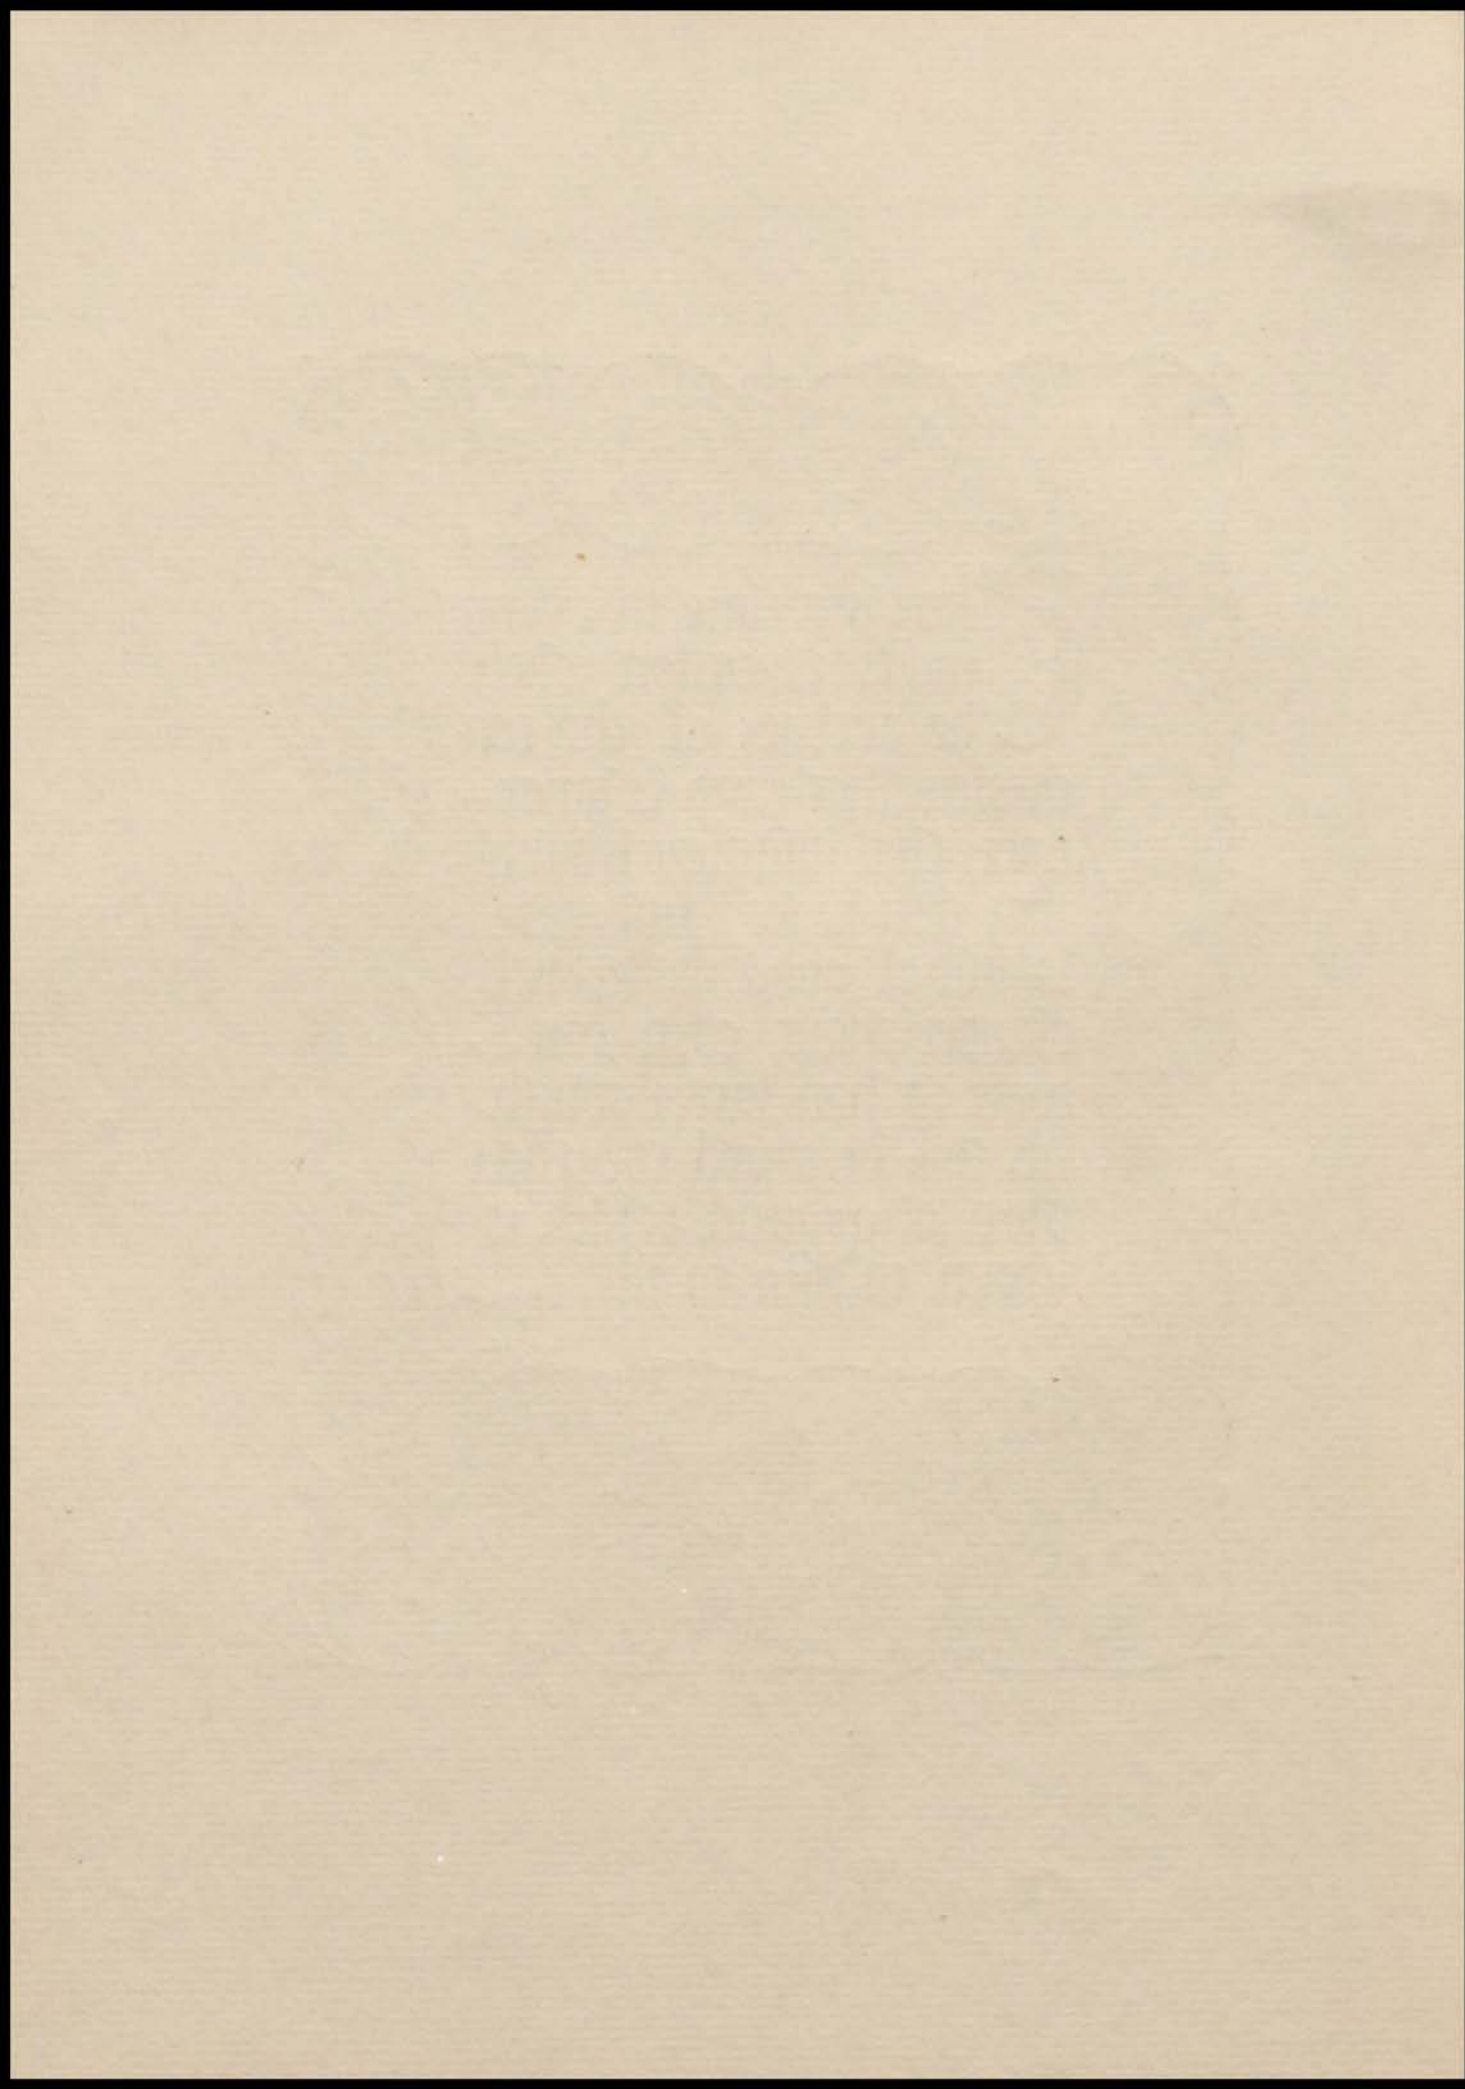

CLASSES

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conclusion that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that though the universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given to him to till.

WE, the Class of '27, have striven during our four years to be ever obedient to the laws and true to the spirit of the school that now means more to us than any other.

May the guiding candle of school loyalty first lit by the Class of '14 continue to be kept bright by each succeeding class as we have held the standard of the Purple and White on high above all others.

THE Juniors of today are the Seniors of tomorrow. We came as little "Sophies," were dubbed "Freshies" by the Seniors; but we have, through never-tiring loyalty and hard work, won our place in the clean-slatted pages of Northeast history. Counted among our number are many who have meant much toward making Northeast what it is today.

As we grasp the torch of glory from the Senior Class to carry on for one more year, we straighten our shoulders and bear our burden with determination.

GARDNER

A friend is he who sets his heart
upon us, is happy with us, and delights in us, and does for us what we want,
is willing and fully engaged to do all he can for us, on whom we can rely in all cases.

Boys' Debate

THE boys' debate teams lost both affirmative and negative decisions this year. The debates were held February 16; the affirmative against Paseo at Paseo High School and the negative at home against Manual High School.

The teams are as follows: Affirmative—William Young, James Wood, Russell Ryan and Billy Sanborn, alternate. Negative—Kenneth Jordan, Robert Victor, Robert Thomas and Fred McGeary, alternate.

The question debated was: Resolved, That the Philippine Islands be given their immediate independence.

Both teams worked exceptionally hard this year and a new plan of study and practice was adopted. The boys were always ready to respond and cross questioning was done to pick out the flaws in the arguments.

However, contrary to the custom of former years, no speeches were memorized but were given with a great degree of perfection due to the thorough knowledge of the subject debated. Therefore the teams in opposition might have had more polished oratory and speeches well rounded as far as sentence structure was concerned, but certainly could not have been better prepared.

The work of Mr. Hibbs and the faculty members who assisted him are to be complimented upon the fine work the boys displayed both in preparation of, and administrating the debate.

Girls' Debate

BOTH the affirmative and negative team deserve much credit although the negative was the only one to emerge victorious. The debates were held the afternoon of February the ninth, at the Paseo and Northeast High Schools.

The affirmative team, composed of Mary E. Riepma, Rose Shapiro, Frances Zang and Margaret Johnston as alternate, put up a strong argument for the adoption of the five-day week plan by large industrial plants of United States. In spite of their efforts they lost by a two to one decision.

Mary Elizabeth in the opening debate explained how the plan would benefit the working man. As second speaker, Rose emphasized the economic value of the plan, and last, Frances presented the logical step. The girls then gave very effective rebuttals. Margaret Johnston as alternate did all in her power to aid the speakers.

The negative debate team composed of Opal Judd, Maxine Yaple, Laura Judd and Frances Long as alternate, made a splendid showing and were victorious with a three to nothing decision.

Opal Judd opened the debate dwelling on the economical impracticability of the plan. As second speaker Maxine presented strong arguments as to the plan being inadaptable to most American industries. Laura closed the debate, showing that American industries were not yet ready for the five-day week plan. Frances Long was very helpful to the girls.

Miss Burton, the coach who took the responsibility of coaching the girls, is to be highly praised.

Oration

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

First Place in Oration by Laura Judd

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, author, huntsman, fighter, peacemaker, executive, and statesman, was first and always an American.

He was supreme, not for deeds which history will record, but for the reactions to his soul of millions now alive and millions yet to walk the land he loved.

We, as Americans, are glad that he was an aristocrat; yet we rejoice still more because he was a true democrat. He overcame the handicap of wealth. Making no distinction of race, color, creed, politics, or social standing, he was the equal and friend of them all.

What rendered him dear in the hearts of the people was his courage and honesty. In every estimate, it was his courage and honesty that counted most. Yet, these sterling virtues could not have memorialized him if he had not possessed that plainest, most divine of gifts, common sense.

His childhood was full of pain and suffering; nevertheless, his early days were happy ones because he dominated his misfortune from the beginning. Roosevelt's determination to gain health, and his zeal in carrying out that purpose, won for him in after life a sturdy, rugged physique. His was not the ideal figure for romance, far from that—but those massive shoulders had the poise and alertness of a thoroughbred; that voice a mighty thunder; and those eyes the eagle's vision.

Yet, he not only developed his body, but also a toughness of moral fiber which served him well when great tasks and temptations confronted him in every stage of his career.

Roosevelt was not a living example of what a man may do with talents; he was a living proof of what a man can do despite the lack of them. Out of a weak child, he made a powerful man; out of half blindness, he made a keen vision; out of a liking for authorship, he made a distinguished writer; out of a voice and a manner never meant for oratory, he made a speaker; out of a sense of duty, he made a soldier; and from these innate qualities, he became a governor, a vice-president, and, at the age of 42, the twenty-sixth Chief Executive of the United States.

Though our feet can never climb to the summit of his mountain of achievement, our eyes can follow him from peak to peak, and render him homage.

Had he left us no other legacy, we would still be rich in the memory of his home. The increasing love with which he regarded his own family is a beacon to light a jazz-mad world chafing at divine laws. At the death of his youngest son, people said he was hard, when, after the cable came, he went up-state to face the convention. They never knew his heart; only his old servant, and his ancient pony knew as he wept for his son, his youngest boy, who, on the fields of France, in death gave immortal life to the father's ideal!

Theodore Roosevelt was a great warrior of the body; he was a mightier warrior of the soul. He was afraid neither to live nor to die. And when, the night of January 5, 1919, the hand of death touched him as he slept, it but released him to further high adventure, to great final explorations. And for us, his fellow Americans, new sacredness is attached to the rich legacy of wisdom which he left us. As we gaze on his pictures, above our desks or upon our walls, even in death we know those eagle's eyes still seek new trails towards far-off shining goals.

His life was a chord of many notes, blending in noble harmony. Its music will never be silenced.

Oration

We have memorials to Roosevelt, noble things of marble; but let us not forget that the one memorial he would have wished cannot be built of tangible material, but must be made of thoughts and deeds. The one thing he would ask of us is that we be foresighted, prompt, practical, honest, resolute, and courageous; that we, in ourselves, make his spirit live!

Ex-Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts voices the true sentiments of a whole nation when he says:

'He roused America to a higher and finer conception of national spirit. He led his fellow-countrymen to new heights of sacrifice and public duty. It will make us the better able to carry the burden of today if we recall the life and service of this rugged American. The memory of Theodore Roosevelt is a priceless heritage and a mighty inspiration!'

Poem

THE LITTLE GRAY HOUSES

First Place in Poem by Vera Brubaker

IT'S an ugly place, the world says, all these Little weather-beaten houses, dropping their tired heads
 As though they had sought, all day long,
 A better place, and finding none, have but Paused here to rest and reconsider.
 From uninterested eyes, the little houses
 Watch the world go by. Their chimneys,
 Once so bright and new, slump in dejection
 O'er the roofs. All the little houses seem
 So tired, so sad.

The sun, he is pitiless. He exposes
 All their little homely weaknesses—
 The ragged children 'round the door—
 Fathers and mothers, tired and bedraggled,
 Begrimed with unlovely fingers of labor,
 Returning from their place of toil—
 Even the tired little houses seem to wear
 Frowns on their old wrinkled faces—
 In the uncompromising glare of
 The noonday sun.

But the night, the lovely night,
 What a comforting mantle she flings
 On those old and drooping shoulders!
 With an understanding heart
 She heals their scars with her loving Magic, and fills their hearts with Confidence, till lo! Upon the spot
 Where before the homely houses stood
 There radiates a myriad of light
 That transfigures the scene to one of loveliness.

The little gray houses are rested now,
 And these bright smiles are for those
 Who, pitying, can forgive, and loving,
 Will forget.

Short Story

TIT FOR TAT

First Place in Short Story by Mary Elizabeth Riepma

MIRRED in the mud—in that soft, oozing, clinging mud that is so characteristic of an Ozark road on a rainy day! And a rainy day it was! A misty drizzle was softly falling from heavy, lead-colored clouds, soaking and penetrating all it touched. It was a silver drizzle, forming a slanted, translucent curtain which dimmed the jagged outline of the distant hills. On every side were sharp, deep valleys and sudden, jutting hills, all green with scrub oak trees and coarse, tangled bushes. Nearby on a small patch of cleared ground, dotted with a myriad of stones, straggled several cornstalks with the rain trickling down them, stark and bare, in submissive solitude, resigned to their fate. A solitary cow was standing desolately beneath one of the dripping trees, little rivulets of water running off his steaming hide. A rail fence sagged crazily along the side of the road. On one of the log rails perched a sparrow in utter misery, his head drawn beneath his sodden coat. At the side of the road a little stream of dirty water was tumbling and curling about itself, like a miniature whirlpool and rapid.

The rain continued to come down in misty sheets.

Mrs. Stuart, looking wearily through the mist-veiled window of the sedan in which she was sitting, sighed heavily.

"John, dear," she hesitatingly inquired of her husband, "is it simply impossible to get the car out?"

"Yes, I'm afraid it is. I guess the car will have to stick right here until this mud dries up a bit," answered Mr. Stuart, discouragedly.

"But, John," replied his wife in consternation, "it's almost dark now, and goodness knows we can't stay in the car all night."

Mr. Stuart was poring over a road map. Suddenly he brightened.

"Say," he rejoined, "according to this map we're only about a half a mile from the Poplar Hollow postoffice. Maybe we could get shelter there for the night."

The suggestion seemed the only way out of their dilemma, so Mr. and Mrs. Stuart prepared to venture forth through the oozing mud in search of the postoffice.

The Poplar Hollow postoffice was typical of the Ozark country. It was a small, weather-beaten shack, made gray and dilapidated by the passing years. It boasted a front porch, the floor of which sagged dejectedly at one corner. The porch roof, slanting downward, sagged likewise. From the edge of this roof hung lifelessly a jaded sign, feebly exploiting the almost obliterated letters, "Post Office." The door of the postoffice stood open. In the gray light of the fading day, a crude box, separated into pigeon holes and standing on a tottering table, was discernible. A few stamps, pieces of string and scraps of tobacco were scattered on the table.

A door led from the postoffice to a living room where the postmaster, Uncle Matt, and his wife Mandy were sitting. The crude room was but dimly lit by the small kerosene lamp, whose wavering flame cast saucy shadows on the cracked and stained walls. Mrs. Matthew, a woman whose careworn, yet kindly face showed a lifetime of patient toil, was knitting beside the rough, wooden table on which the lamp was set. In one corner of the room Uncle Matt, a simple but proud mountaineer, was sitting. Propped up against one wall was an ancient horse-hair sofa whose dull black surface was frequently broken by sharp tufts of hair peeping out. Leaning in a corner, near the sofa, was a curious piece of furniture. It was wonderfully wrought from three hickory sticks fashioned in the shape of a teepee, inside of which rose a series of cylindrical, graduating shelves. On each shelf was a confusion of bright pebbles, picture postcards and pressed flowers. Several crude pictures hung on the wall, all generally alike except one, a faded water-color of a young girl, presumably of the early forties. She was an attractive girl with laughing blue eyes and a laughing red mouth. A profusion of bright yellow ringlets covered her forehead and a scarlet ribbon from which dangled a gold locket circled her throat. The girl seemed to be musingly smiling at the Matthews, who were seriously discussing a coming party at Sand Ridge.

"Yes, Elmiry," said Uncle Matt, "hit's been powerful bad tiddy, but I 'low hit'll dry up in time fer us'uns t' go t' th' party this week."

"Wa'al Matt," hesitated Elmira, "I don't reckon hit matters a heap sight, 'cause, Matt, I've mighty near determined not t' go t' that 'ar party, nohow."

Elmira finished quietly and continued her knitting. Her husband looked at her aghast.

"Wa'al, I gonies!" he stammered, "why, Elmiry, you ain't aimin' t' miss th' party, air you?"

Elmira looked up from her knitting and pursed her lips contemplatively.

"Wa'al, Matt, 'pears hit's like this," she said in a matter-of-fact, yet slightly sorrowful tone, "I ain't got ary dress t' wear 'cept that ol' calico that ever'body's seed me a-wearin' fer nigh onto ten years, an' I 'low I ain't goin' to ary other party with that dress on again."

To all outward appearances, Mrs. Matthew was natural, but within her was surging a fierce resentment. For five years—for five years—she had had to wear the same calico dress to every social and church meeting the mountaineer folk had held, while her friends had appeared in new calicoes. But there was no money for new things for her, for Matt was growing old and it was getting harder and harder for him to coax the yearly corn crop from the sterile Ozark soil, covered so numerously with rocks and stones. Ah, well! thought Elmira, perhaps next spring—

Steps sounded on the porch. Uncle Matt arose slowly. It must be Aunt Jennie from over to Bull Creek come to get her mail.

Mrs. Matthew followed her husband into the postoffice. Two very wet and bedraggled figures met their astonished gaze. Elmira met the occasion:

"Why, law sakes!" she ejaculated, "come right in."

Mr. Stuart replied, "We're sorry to bother you, but my car got stuck in the mud down the road and, as it was getting dark, my wife and I came up here to see if we could get shelter for the night. We were trying to reach Rocky Beach, where we intend to spend our summer vacation."

"Wa'al," interrupted Mr. Matthew, "we 'ud be right smart glad t' he'p you."

At the Matthews' bidding, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart went into the living room that they might rest and dry themselves. Upon entering, Mrs. Stuart gasped inwardly. Such a room! Such crude, queer furniture! Mrs. Stuart, a devoted member of the Antique Lovers' Club, saw at once the quaintness and beauty of the mountaineers' home. To her mind, so full of the lore, art and value of old things, this room was charming!

Placing her glasses on her high nose, Mrs. Stuart walked entranced to the picture of the laughing girl. Looking closely at it she murmured in astonished tones, "How beautiful! Why—it's—it's a real 'Curry and Ives'!"

Mrs. Matthew, standing nearby, laughed softly. "Law sakes!" she said, looking upon Mrs. Stuart as a mother does a child admiring a piece of shiny glass, "Law sakes! that thing! My grandma' toted hit here from Illinois. Nothin' but a piece o' junk!"

Short Story

Mrs. Stuart walked mechanically away from the picture. The picture—a genuine "Curry and Ives"! Why, they were worth a hundred dollars apiece in the city. If she could only have it to hang in her parlor! It would be the envy of all the club members. But how could she get it without arousing the suspicion of this man and his wife?

Mrs. Matthew looked kindly at the "city lady," whose brows were so close-knit in thought. "Law sakes, was she still thinking about that worthless picture?"

Later in the evening, Mrs. Stuart ventured to remark about the picture.

"My, you know," she said uneasily, "you know, I've formed such an attraction for that picture—don't you—er—don't you think you could sell it for three dollars?"

Elmira jumped. Three dollars! And then a vision sweeter than any she had ever known enveloped her. It was the vision of a new calico dress. Three dollars! What she had wished for so long was about to be realized. What happiness!

"Why—sure, we'll sell hit—won't we, Matt?" she stammered.

In Mrs. Stuart's heart, also, happiness was supreme. In a few more words the bargain was closed. Now to have the club meet at her house!

The following morning broke sunny and bright. The distant hills, flooded with bright sunlight, were outlined in brilliant green glory against the clear blue horizon. In the distance, a pale wisp of smoke was rising from the rough stone chimney of a log cabin.

The mud was gradually drying up. The Stuarts, waving goodbye to their newly-made friends, were headed slowly toward Rocky Beach. Mrs. Stuart heaved a high of contentment.

"John," she said, "I'm tickled to death to get that picture, but still, way down in my heart, I'm not a little conscious-stricken about driving such a good bargain with those poor folks. My conscience tells me I really shouldn't have done it, but, as the old saying goes, "What they don't know won't hurt them."

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew stood at the top of the hill, waving goodbye to the Stuarts. Elmira felt again of the three precious dollars in her apron pocket.

"Mat," she said blissfully, "'pears like I'll go t' that party after all. Still, Matt, my conscience ain't feelin' powerful peart. I reckon as how the good Lord's tellin' me 'bout the sinful way I took all that money off o' those pore city folks fer that ol' picther."

"Huh," snorted Uncle Matt, disdainfully, "don't you feel bad, Elmira, what them folks hain't got th' sense t' know ain't goin' t' hurt 'em ary, nohow."

Essay

First Place in Essay by Cherry Miller

IDEALS

IN Hawthorne's tale, "The Great Stone Face," there is presented to us in story form the influence of the ideal in the life of man. The point of the story is obvious and it contains a great truth, namely, that the individual comes to resemble his ideal. Some, we are told, think of greatness in terms of money; some in terms of battles, some associate it with high officials of the state, while some measure it by success in the field of letters; a few, however, as did the boy Ernest, find it only in the charm and beauty of noble character.

Every Ernest has his Great Stone Face—every youth his ideal. Youth, we are told, is the time of dreams and visions. In the infancy of the race dreams and visions become the fiction of myth and legend. They are woven into those legendary characters that have come down to us from the dim past and tell us of the hopes and aspirations of man when he was just emerging from darkness into the light of civilization.

It is not our purpose to rummage among the creations of the distant past in search of influences that molded the lives of our ancestors, but rather to observe the influences that concern this generation.

The first gleam of admiration, the first reaction to a generous deed marks the first milestone in the cycle of life. The earliest ideals are embodied in concrete personalities. A favorite teacher, a boon companion, a man of physical courage, a woman of grace and charm may unconsciously adorn a niche in this boy's or that girl's Hall of Fame. Fine it would be if all whose images are found in this fantastic gallery were worthy of the high honor accorded them. But it is a strange mottly. By the side of a Washington hangs the portrait of a Jack Dempsey or a Babe Ruth or "The Raggedy Man" in indiscriminate heterogeneity.

Ideals are changing things and each individual passes through numerous transitions. It is a far call from the ideal embodied in the man of combat—"the town tough," who bullies the neighborhood—to the ideal embodied in the life of a great statesman, a great poet or a master artist. It would be interesting, indeed, if the biographer of some hero who had impressed himself upon the national conscience could trace in his biography of that hero the devious ways through which the ideal had evolved from its humble origin in the heart and soul of a prankish youth to its full consummation in the high resolve of a man of genius.

Lincoln, in early manhood, resolved that he would one day be president of the United States. Through the struggling years of poverty and adversity he clung to the hope of receiving at the hands of the people the greatest gift the nation could bestow. A great orator, upon being asked what course he would pursue if he were given a chance to live his life over again, replied that he would live as he had lived. In the evening of his life he remained true to the ideal which had guided him to success and greatness. Victor Hugo in early life was wont to say, "Chateaubriand or nothing." Hugo's father was an officer under Napoleon; the son became the leader of the Romantic School in French literature. What an antithesis!

It is not to be inferred that all who have missed fame have done so because of a lack of worthy ambitions. Our poor world has its full quota of men and women of shattered dreams. But they had their dreams, and it is better to have dreamed and lost than not to have dreamed at all. Ideals are their own compensation and their own reward. They bring comfort and strength in hours of adversity. "I had rather be right than president," is the expression of an ideal that satisfied.

It is not necessary to be rich and powerful in order to be successful. It is some consolation to feel that there have been more worthy people than there have been great people. High objectives may be the common heritage of men and women. Even for the average person, for you and for me, it is well to reach high, to lift the eyes above the horizon. Ideals make for happiness. They give beauty and worth to life. Why is it that I enjoy this thing or that thing? Why do I like Jack London? It is not wholly because of the fascination in "The Call of the Wild" or the style of the author. There is a subjective thing in the reader that puts beauty and charm in the story. The same is true in regard to the things we wear, the houses in which we live, the conversations we have with our friends. In short, we get out of our environment something of what we put into that environment, and what we put into it is determined by the mental sphere in which we live and have our being.

The spirit of the times exercises a potent influence on the trend of thought. In this materialistic age, when pleasure and vain show are uppermost in the popular mind, it is not easy to grapple firmly to worth-while things. Yet this fact urges the importance of self-restraint and the acquisition of ideals that embody permanent values. Honesty, frugality and intensity of purpose are needs of the people always. Ideals should incorporate those qualities which make for service and lasting happiness.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to define the methods by which attitudes of mind are found. Doubtless they are passed on from one to another, from father to child, from teacher to pupil, from author to reader. But this is but a part of the process. The individual must go far beyond mere receptivity. We have only one life and we must live it; others cannot live it for us. We must be what the world makes us plus ourselves. As education is a life process so the acquisition of ideals never terminates. Inactivity is a death blow to growth. Constant change and improvement is the law of progress. The great principles of truth and right which have been found to be for the good of mankind, must be retained. Religious and moral laws constitute inevitable needs. An ideal does not become worthless because of its antiquity of origin. The individual must weigh and consider at all times.

A selective process is always at work as we pass from one experience to another. Sometimes a blind fatality seems to overhang the individual in his choice and there are times when it is necessary for him to grope his way alone. It is easy to follow the crowd, but the crowd is not always right. It requires courage to take a stand against sentiment. The highest of all ideals are those which guide man when the odds are against him, when moral success means financial and social ruin, and it takes a brave heart to weather the storms of opposition, even in a just cause; and the difference between a servile follower and a determined leader is a difference in ideals and ideals alone.

Life has various meanings; to some it is a blessing, to others a curse. Some are born to sit in the lap of luxury, to others poverty and misery are apportioned. But most of us travel a middle course and find much that is good. We go through life our different ways, each plying his special task, while over him and for him shines his ideal. It is the Great Stone Face smiling to him from the mountainside.

BOOK PLATES

Since for fourteen years Prof. E. D. Phillips has had his Senior English literature pupils design book-plates for Northeast Annual, it may be considered a permanent feature of the Commencement issue of our school's magazine.

One motive for this artistic feature is to correlate the literature and art departments with each other. Another motive is to stimulate our pupils to cultivate their artistic talents, and to equip themselves practically to meet the commercial demands for posters, and newspapers and magazine illustrations, as well as to develop the artistic instinct for arts and craft work.

Too much praise cannot be given to Miss Harriette H. Cocks, head of the department of arts and design, for the lively interest and invaluable aid that she has given to the pupils of Mr. Phillips' classes who have volunteered to design book-plates.

As a further reward, the winners are given the cuts free, in addition to printing the designs in the "Annual."

So far, we have found no original book-plates among our "Exchanges"

CORDRY

William Young was awarded the bronze medal for his essay which won third place in the Sons of the Revolution Annual contest. His subject was, "Difficulties and Accomplishments of the Congress of Confederation from the Signing of the Treaty of Peace in Paris, September 3, 1783, to the Inauguration of Washington as President, April 30, 1789." William also represented Northeast High in the Annual Star Oratorical Contest and was presented with ten dollars by The Star.

Harold Cordry, '29, won a fifty dollar scholarship offered by the Federal Art School of Minneapolis. This entitles him to a year in the Federal Art School. This is the first time a Northeast pupil has so distinguished himself.

THE MISSOURI INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET

Again has Northeast shown herself supreme in the realm of school activities: representatives of the school captured eleven medals, three gold, five silver, and three bronze. The meet, sponsored by the University of Missouri, was attended by thirty Noreasters. The gold medal winners from Northeast were: Louis Swinken in elementary French, David Freedkin in violin, Jack Auld in track.

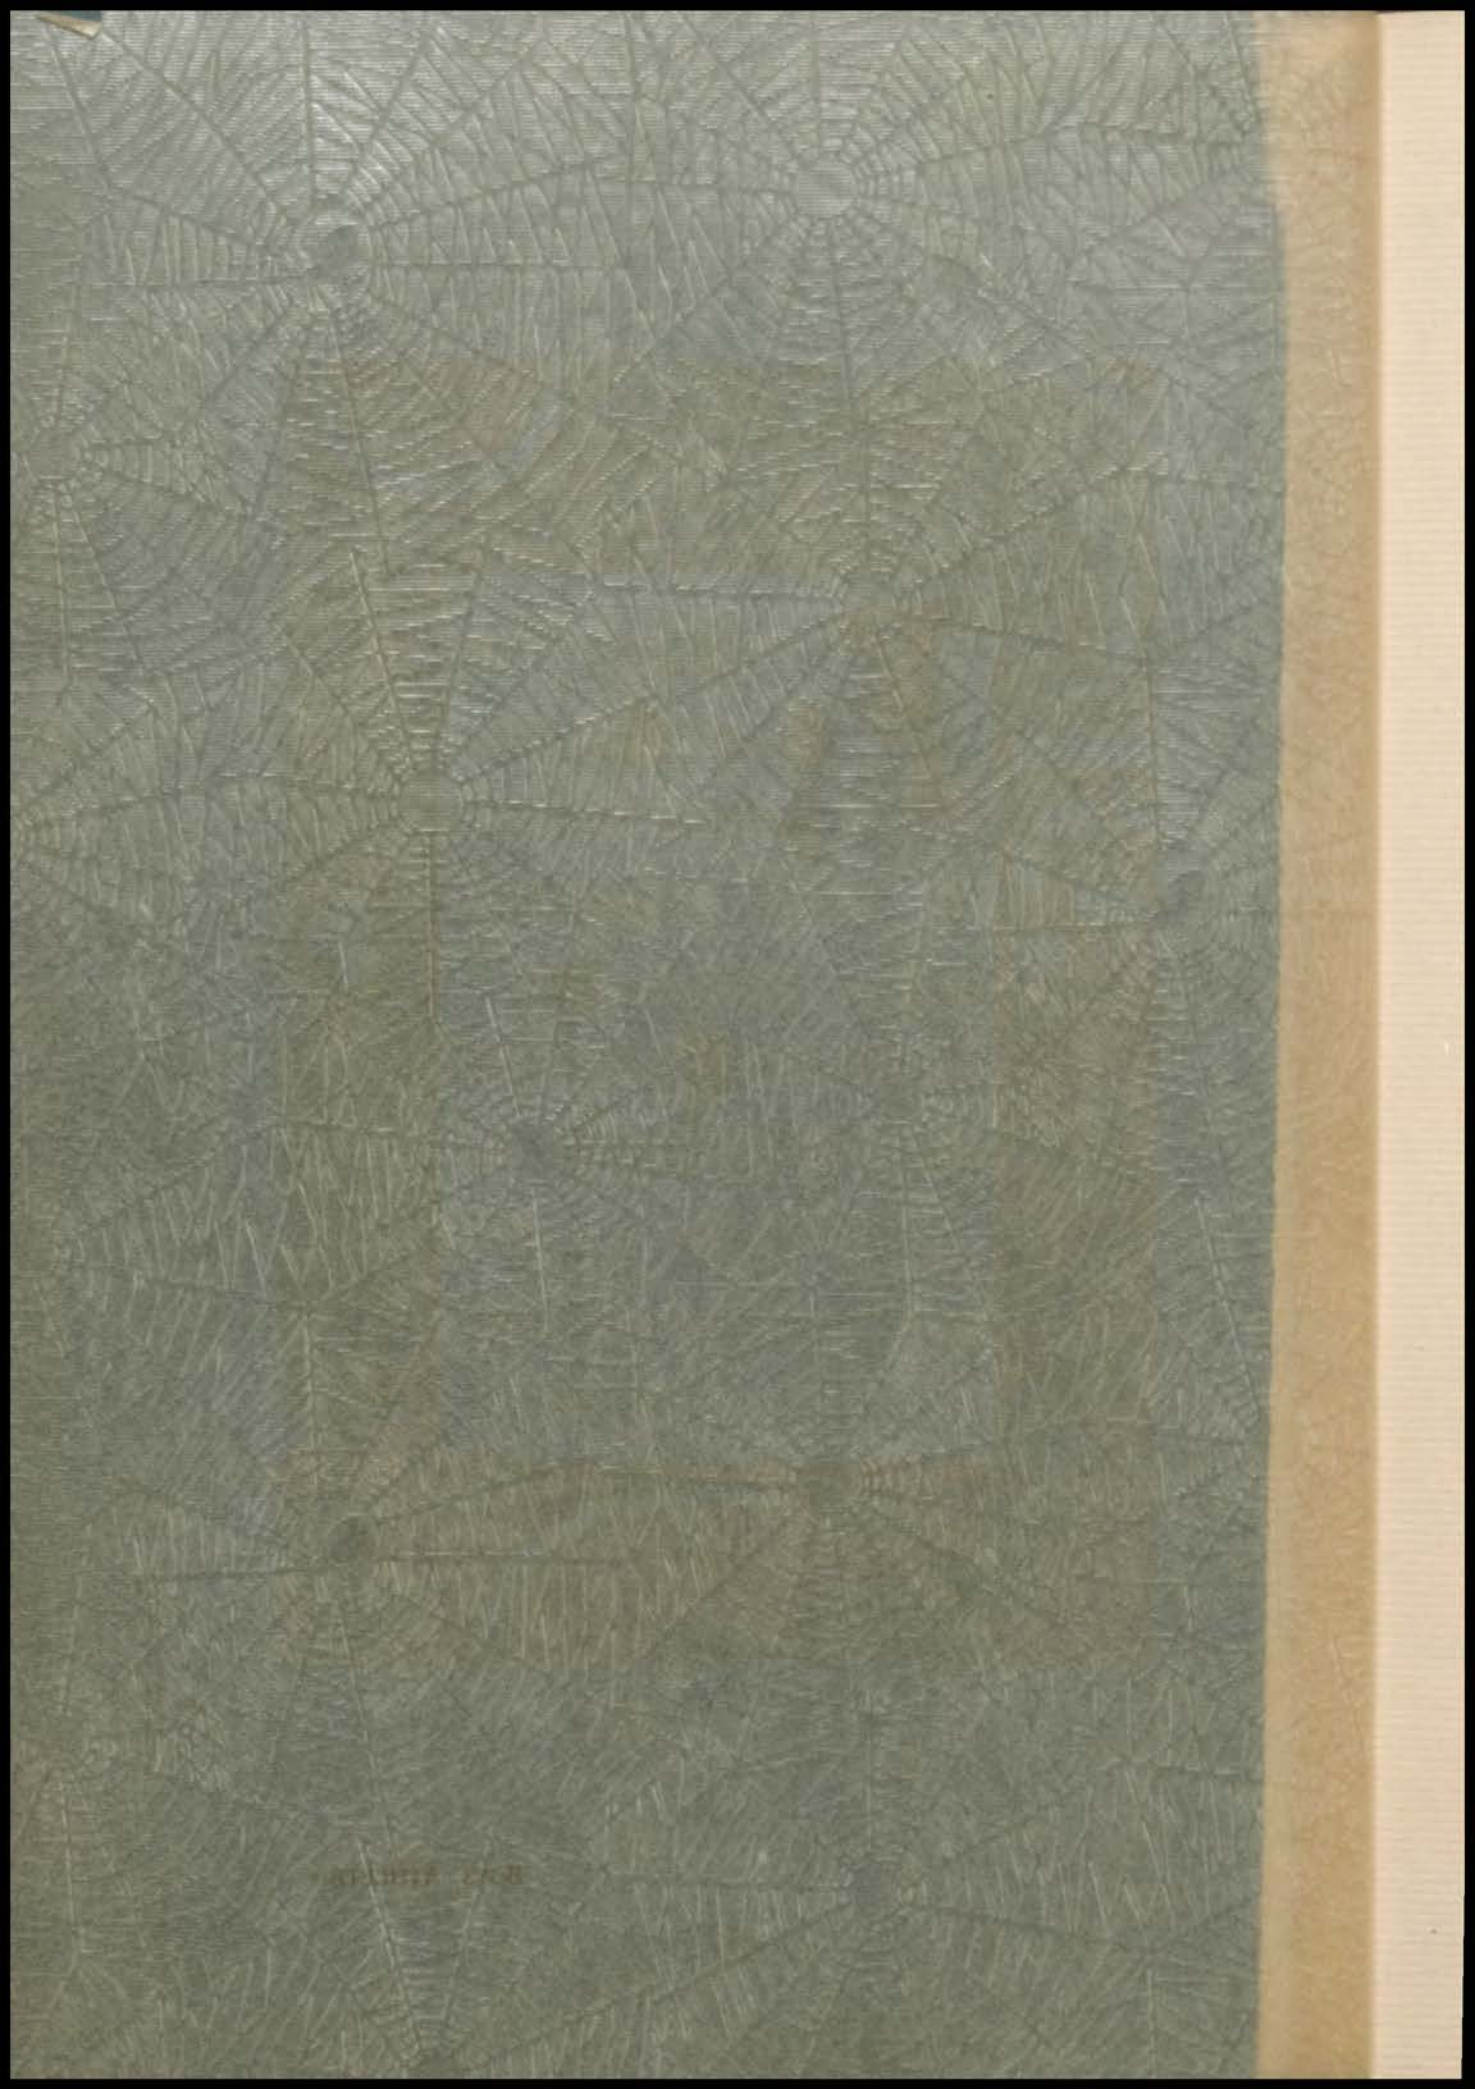

Zella Stanley, representing the art department won two silver medals, the other silver medal winners were: Kathleen Bridges in advanced French, Ernest Fritchie in pole vault, Joe Brewer in shot put.

The bronze medal winners were: William DeRubertis in 'cello, Laura Judd in advanced Spanish, Albert Dorsett in track in 220-yard dash.

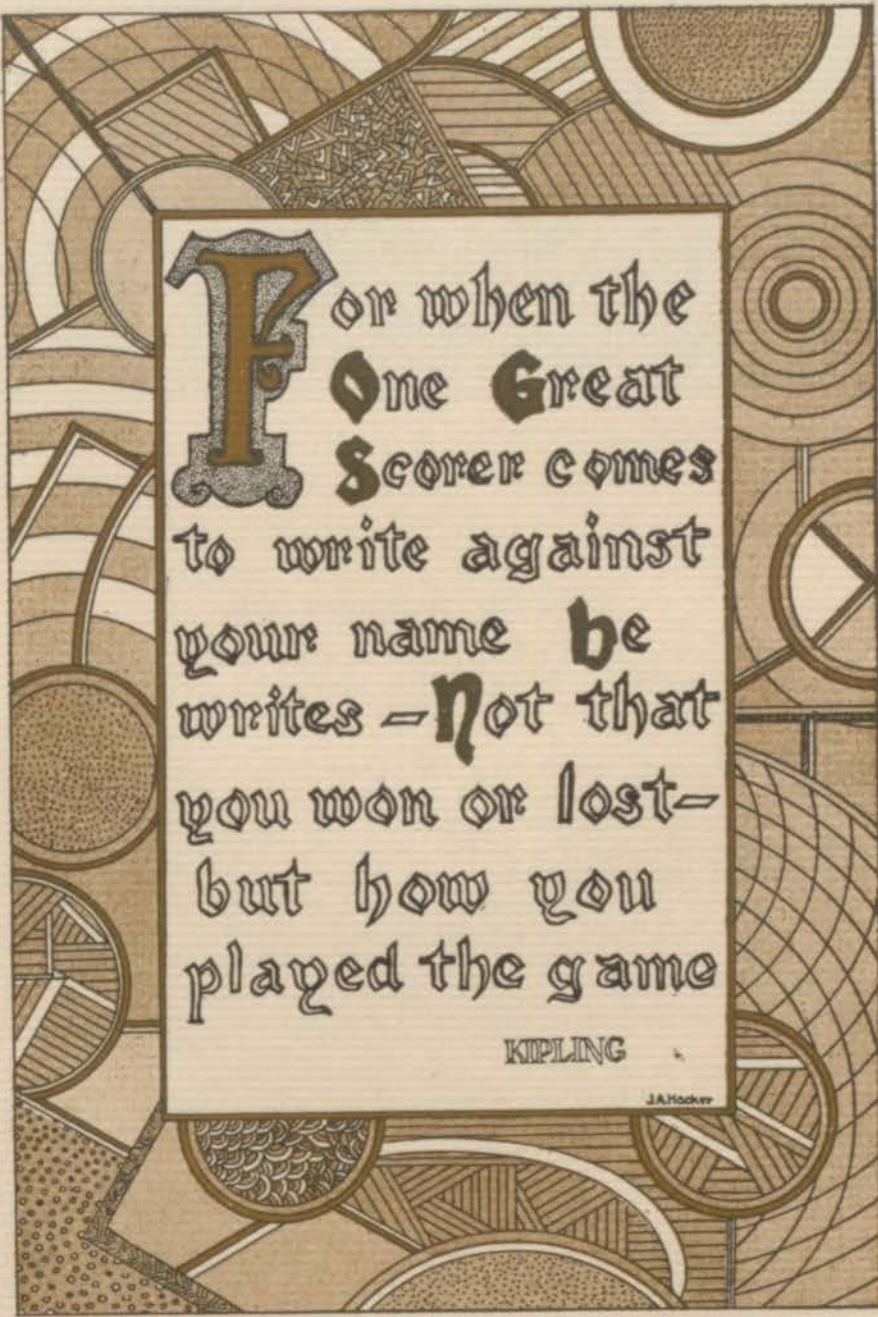

The relay, which divided the meet, was won by three feet by Central who gained a total of nineteen points. Northeast came second with sixteen points.

The Northeast Courier placed first in the Newspaper Contest and the Special Issue of the paper also placed first in the Literary Magazine Contest.

THE ATHLETIC OFFICERS

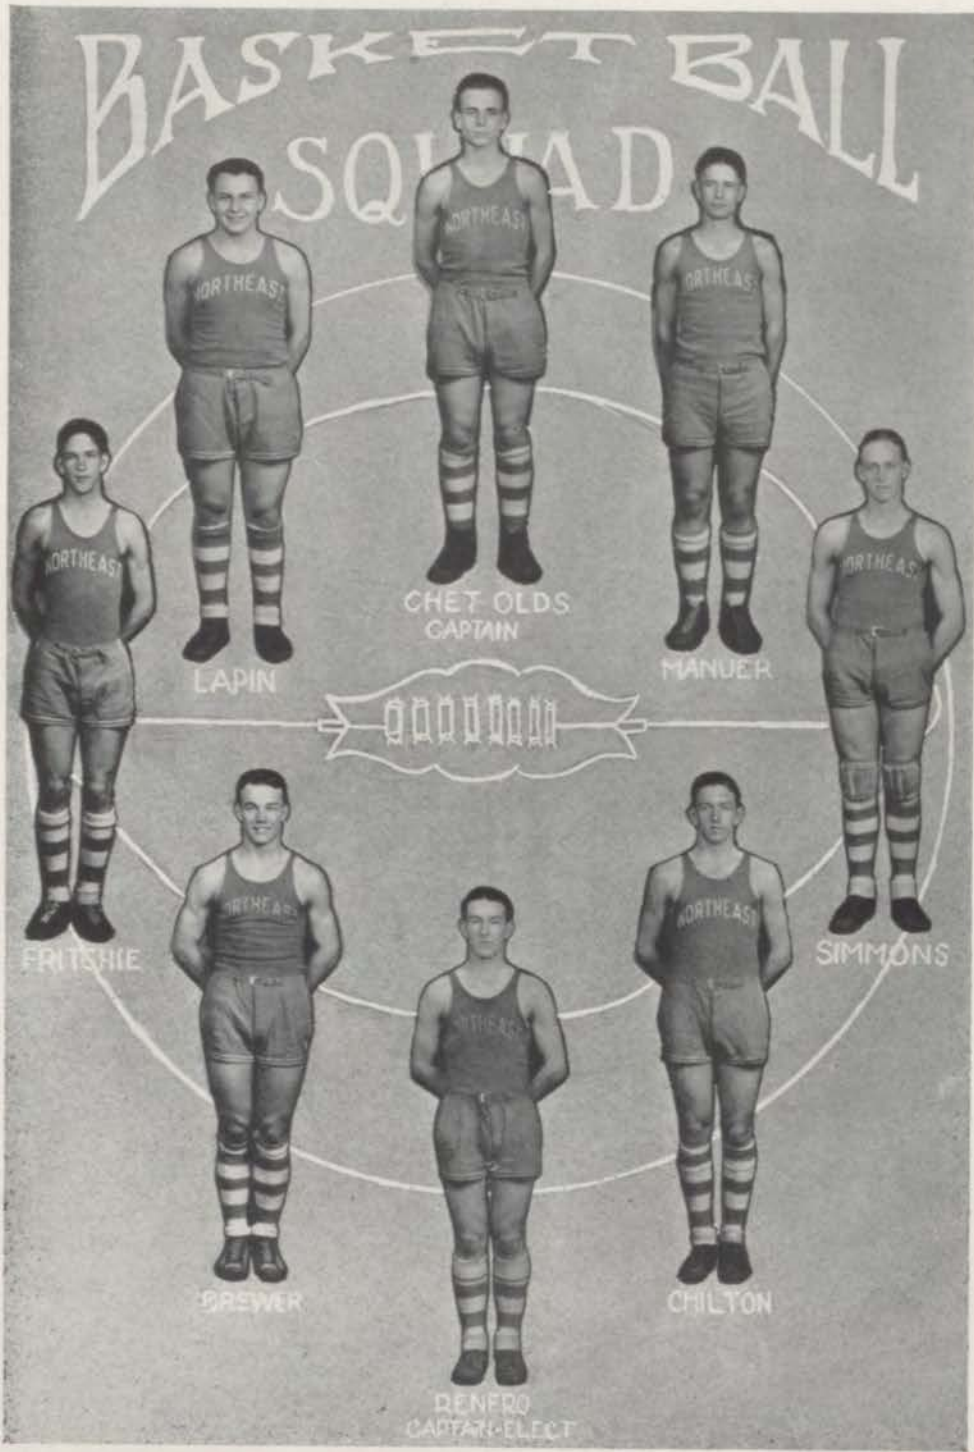

This year finds Northeast the possessor of a string of victories of which any school might be justly proud. But back of it are the athletic officers whose training and assistance has led the teams through a season of unusual success.

Little can be added in the praise of the consistent work of Coach Reeves Peters, for his accomplishments stand as a better tribute than of the words that might be written about him. Mr. Peters has earned a place in the hearts of the athletes that he has trained and coached because of his sincere desire to develop each boy to his full capacity and because of the interest that he has taken in each individual. Each year Mr. Peters begins with practically no letter men, but by hard work and persistent effort the end of the season usually finds a team developed to the championship rank.

To Mr. G. W. Davis we are much indebted for his splendid management of the sports. Throughout the year he contributed his time in doing his share to bring honor to Northeast.

Northeast has benefited by the addition of Mr. M. E. Davis, who came here this year and who did his part in coaching the second team and developing new material for next year.

Mr. Pickens, whose service in the past made him valuable in spring and fall football training, has completed another successful year in helping develop champions for Northeast.

Again, it is proved that "history repeats itself." Following what is almost a Northeast tradition, the Purple and White quintet began the season with only one letter man, gathering speed and strength as it progressed, until by the time the final gun was fired the proteges of Coach Reeves Peters were in splendid condition. True to form, Northeast usually played a game that upset the predictions and the opposing teams found themselves the victims of miscalculations. Not many fans who witnessed the sixth game will forget the last thrilling moments of the game when Northeast overcame a big lead and battled Westport to a victory of 36 to 34.

Basket Ball

Occupying the position of second place in the city tournament, the team journeyed to Columbia, Mo., where they annexed the state title in a manner little short of marvelous. It was the most representative state tournament ever held, due to the fact that all of the eight sections of Missouri were represented there by two teams each. Critics, after seeing the quintet in action for the first time, declared that Northeast was due to win. The boys fulfilled the prediction to the letter, bringing back a silver basket ball of regulation size as the award of first place.

It might be well to mention that the boys obeyed all regulations, which kept them at their best, permitting them to set a pace that made them the serious rivals of the best teams entered in the meet. There are times when we all live through white-haired moments and it is certain that Mr. Peters shared his when a free-throw point entered the tournament in favor of Northeast.

NATIONAL (Consolation) TOURNAMENT SCORE

Northeast	28	Deerfield Shields, Ill.	24
Northeast	23	Aberdeen, S. D.	15
Northeast	23	Durant, Okla.	16
Northeast	25	Gilbert, Ariz.	24
Northeast	24	Athens, Texas	23

Close on the heels of the state victory followed the entry in the National Tournament at Chicago, Ill. The team, accompanied by Coach Peters and Mr. G. W. Davis as manager, went to Chicago, where they were entered with the best teams of forty-four states.

Northeast, unfortunate in the first drawings, was defeated by Dover, Ohio, by a score of 21 to 17. The first game seemed to be filled with luck that frowned on the Petersmen and brought victory to their opponents by a series of free-throws. Their spirit unbroken and their determination strengthened by their early defeat, the boys then entered the consolation tournament where every man found his stride and was the star in each game. Throughout the consolation games they played a better game of basket ball than at any time in the past. Northeast is now the possessor of a gold basket ball trophy, the result of excellent coaching, team co-operation, courage and a real determination to win. Even with the National Tournament over, the boys still continued to obey all regulations, proving that they had not attempted a temporary "flash," but that they were real champions in every sense of the word.

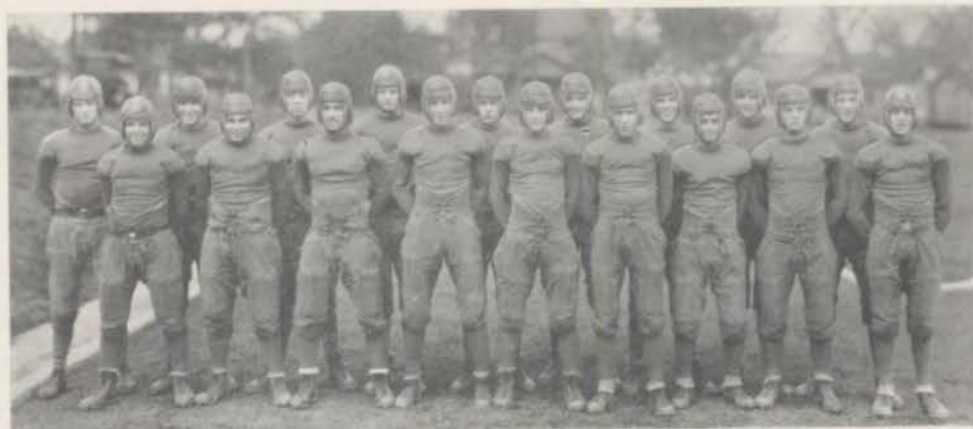

From the beginning of a "one letter man team" to the winning of the National (Consolation) Tournament is the story that speaks louder than words. Chester Olds (captain), guard; Burnell Chilton, forward; Jacob Lapin, guard; Joseph Brewer, center; Ernest Fritchie, forward, guard, center; Wilson Simmons, center; Earl Renfro, forward; Tony Manuer, guard, composed the team that achieved greater fame in basket ball than any in the history of Northeast.

The season was concluded after playing twenty-one games with a total score of 516 to 437. Northeast won 16 and lost 5.

The prospects for next year are indeed bright and another championship year is assured. Earl Renfro, Chester Olds, Jake Lapin, Ernest Fritchie, Wilson Simmons, Tony Manuer, Everett Moore will all be back in the Purple lineup next year and it is certain that they will uphold the fine record made in 1927. The second team will also furnish much good material.

With only three letter men in the lineup, the season of 1926 saw Northeast make a stronger bid for the football championship than in any previous year in the history of the Purple and White.

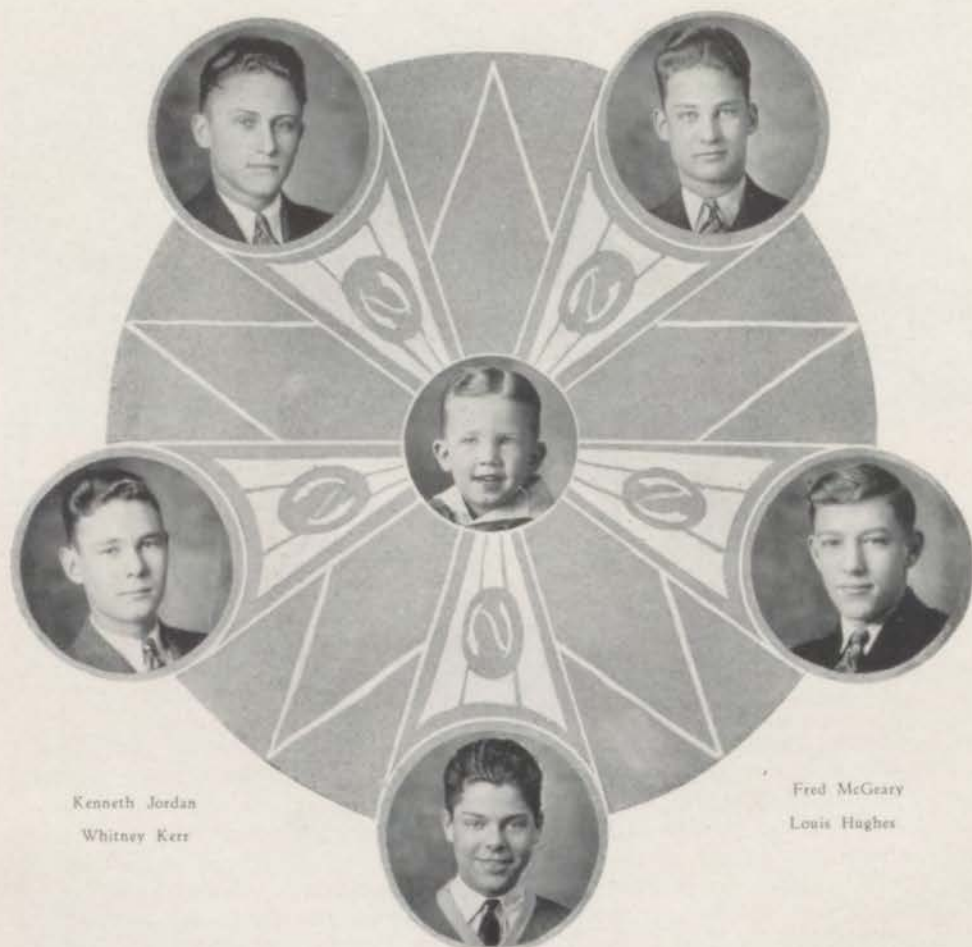

The fifth game found Northeast clashing with Central. A few yards to go in the last quarter of the game was all that kept Northeast from claiming the title. Central "held that line" and a twenty-five yard dropkick by the Centralites gave them the crown, placing Northeast second in the inter-school tilts.

Joseph Brewer, captain, backfield and all star; Ernest Fritchie, end man (all star); Fred Mosley, center (all star); Virgil Kerr, tackle (all star); Benjamin Peery, tackle (all star); Jacob Lapin, guard (all star); Herbert Reed, backfield (all star); John Wherry, end man (sub); Frank Baughman, end man (reg.); Everett Moore, halfback (reg.); Paul Wendall, halfback (sub); Wilson Simmons, guard (sub); Jack Newsome, halfback (reg.); Woodruff Fox, guard (reg.) and Millard Hill, end man (reg.), contributed to make this Northeast's biggest football year.

Even greater things are in store, for the second team under the coaching of Mr. M. E. Davis shows much promise.

Track Review

Northeast has always been favored with a track team that was a credit to the school. A great amount of tradition has been built around the achievements of the purple and white track squad and much is expected of them this year.

With Jack Auld, regarded as the best 880 man in the Missouri Valley; Meredith McDaniels, former member of the World's Record Relay Team; Al Dorsett, speedy 100 and 220 man; Joe Brewer, broad jumper and weight man; Manning Elgin, pole vaulter, and Frank Baughman, hurdler, it is expected that several new records will be written in the Northeast scorebook.

The team is showing steady improvement and next year will find a fully developed championship team.

This year the team is well represented in all events, and like every track season will be filled with many surprises, but all indications point to victory for the Purple "knights of the cinderpath."

Northeast as usual again upset the dope and took first place in the annual quadrangular meet and gained permanent possession of the Shannon Douglas gold cup and the Missouri Alumni Cup. Northeast is entitled to these cups because the track proteges of Coach Peters have won them three years.

Five first places were given to the Purple squad, three to Westport and two to Central. Northeast broke the record in the 880 yard relay and made an excellent showing and snatched first place from the hands of Central, who was scheduled to win.

NOR-EASTER

"N" Men

CHESTER OLDS

"Chet" playing his first year of basket ball showed his ability as captain of the team that won the state and national consolation tournament. As a player he distinguished himself as a guard. It was always hard for his opponents to outwit him. He will be back next year and will be a valuable asset to the team.

ERNEST FRITCHIE

Ernest fulfilled all the predictions made of him in the past. He played a fine game of basket ball all through the season, playing guard, forward and center. As an end man on the football squad his long end runs furnished some of the biggest thrills of the season. He is captain elect of next year's football squad and all indications are that he will uphold his fine record.

JOE BREWER

Joe is one of the few three letter men in Northeast. He has been an outstanding athlete since he first entered and has a well rounded athletic career in high school. He was a brilliant backfield man and captain of the all-stars. Plunging, dashing and tearing holes in the opposing line he was one of the shining lights of the squad. He played center in basket ball and has also won his letter in track. He also made the state all-star in the state tournament.

JACOB LAPIN

"Jakey," the "last of the Lapins," has been faithfully upholding the records set by his illustrious brothers who have contributed much in the past toward setting a high standard of athletics in Northeast. He made the second team all-stars in football this year and could always be depended upon to play a hard consistent game. As a guard in basket ball he managed his position remarkably well.

EARL RENFRO

This is Earl's first year in athletics in senior high school. Out because of illness in the first part of the year he made rapid advances when he once got started. On his shoulders fell the responsibility of making the final free-throw point that gave both the state and national consolation tournaments to the Purple quintet. He is captain-elect of the 1928 basket ball squad. He was also one picked as a state all-star guard in basket ball.

BURNELL CHILTON

Coming here last year, Burnell made his reputation as a fast dribbler and his side shots furnished some of the bright spots in the league games. His versatility is evidenced by the fact that in choosing the state basket ball all-stars he was placed as guard while in the city all-stars he was ranked as a forward in which he excelled throughout the season.

TONY MANUER

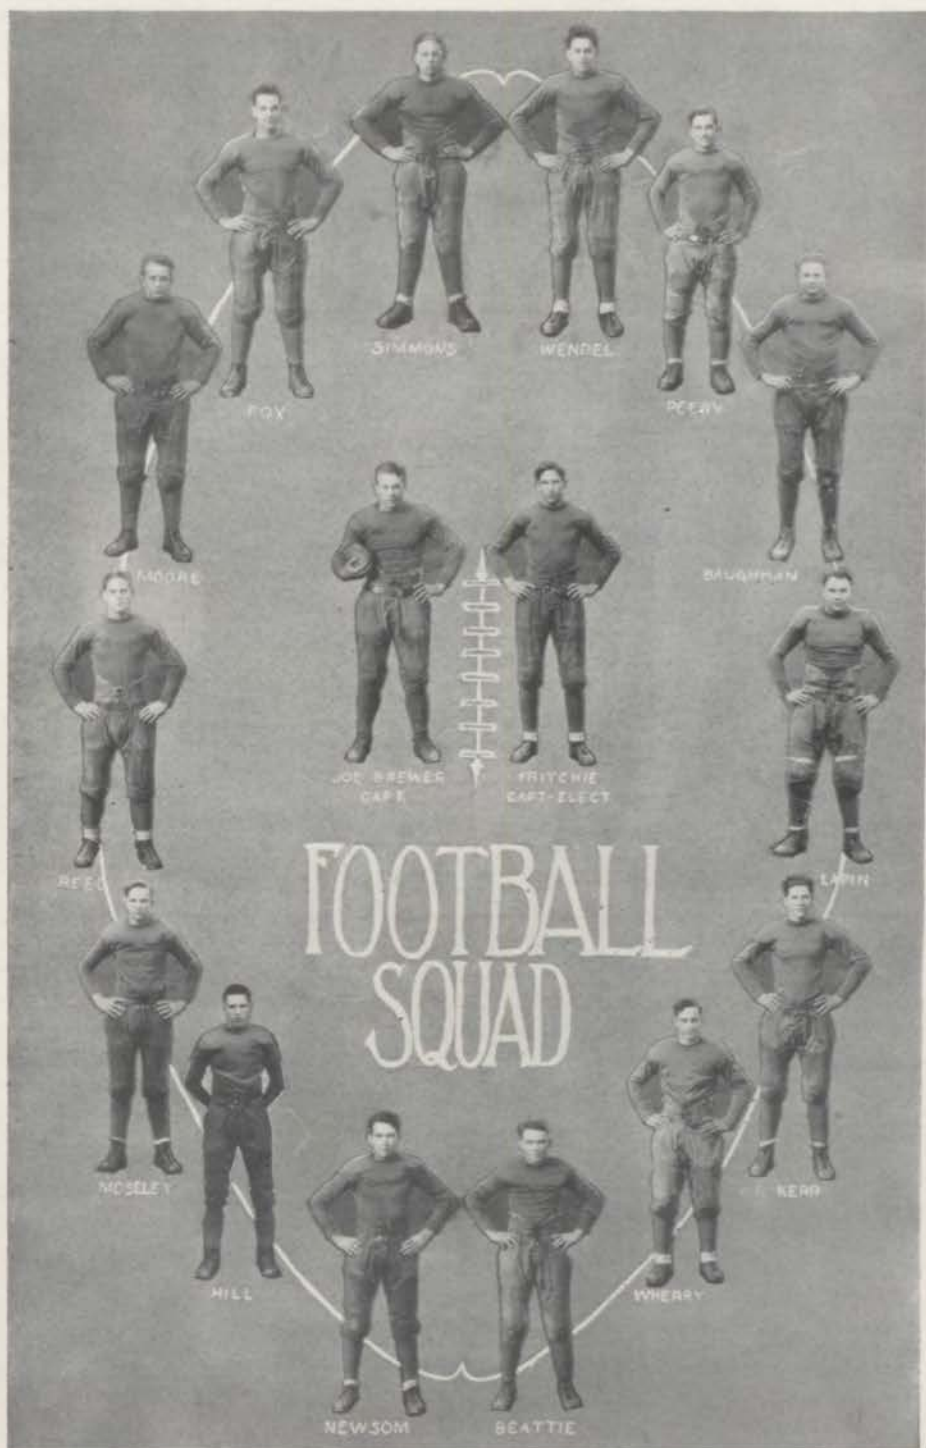

Tony played on the second team football squad and has made great strides since then. He played forward in basket ball, was one of the eight who went to Chicago. He shows much promise in track.

WILSON SIMMONS

Wilson always played a game that was marked with earnestness. In football he plied his trade as guard and in basket ball as center, and is a letter man in both branches. In track he shines as a javelin thrower and a shot-put man.

WILLIAM BEATTIE

"Bill" played guard and tackle and was good consistent line man. He was good on defense. He came up from last year's second team and made a fine showing during the 1926 football season.

FRANK BAUGHMAN

Tall, rangy and fast, Frank was an end man that provided serious competition for his opponents. He was especially good at snagging passes. He runs in the 440 and is a hurdler which has won him a letter in track.

EVERETT MOORE

A small but mighty man, Everett is generally regarded as the best safety man in the league. His uncanny passing ability kept the opposition puzzled and he could always be expected to stage some excellent plays both around and through the line. He was an exceptional tackler and he played a good game of basket ball last year, and was the team's best offense man.

VERGIL KERR

Vergil was an all-star tackle and a man of outstanding ability. He was a good offense man and handled the defense equally well. He is one of the year's letter men who graduated from the ranks of last year's second team.

JACK NEWSOME

Jack came up from the ranks of last year's second team and proved to be one of the best "interference" men in the league. As a plunging backfield man he could always be expected to tear holes in the opposing line. Shifty and quick, his fast work in any emergency made him one of the outstanding men on the squad.

HERBERT REED

"Hub" was a regular groundhog when it came to plunging after the ball. And as for speed, few if any in the league were faster on their feet than he. He could plunge the strongest defense with good results and could throw and catch passes with equal ability. He was on the second team last year in football and has won his second team letter in basket ball.

FRED MOSLEY

Fred played a consistent game of football throughout the season. He was a very good defense man and very few ever got through him in the offense. He was a hard tackler and played his position of center with skill and ease. He also made the all-stars.

PAUL WENDEL

Paul was a fast backfield man that could fill almost any position with as much ease and ability as the regular players themselves. Although light he made up for the difference in speed and accuracy. He was always dependable and was much needed during the season.

WOODRUFF FOX

"Woody" is a 160-pound guard that plays a hard game of football and who plays several positions with equal ability. He is a hard hitter and a good tackler. Whenever an emergency arose he was always ready to go in and could fill a breach in practically any part of the line. With this record behind him he is scheduled to do some big things in 1927 and 1928.

JOHN WHERRY

"Johnny," although the smallest man on the team, proved that size was no barrier to accomplishment. He always held up his position as end man in every emergency. He could take plenty of punishment and still grin. Johnny came up from last season's second team by steady and persistent effort.

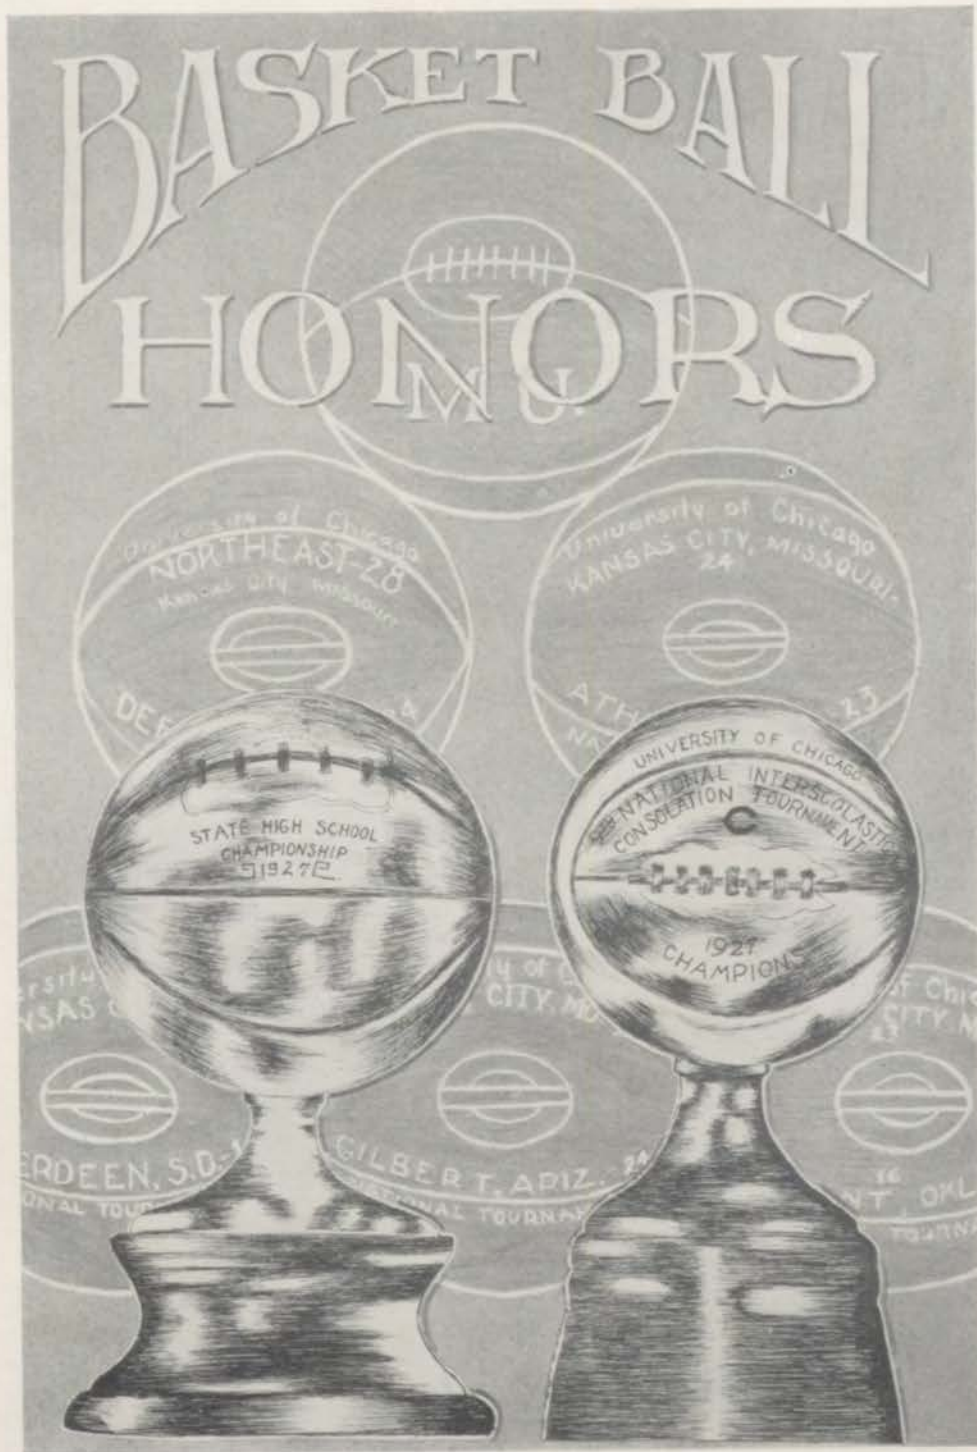

MILLARD HILL

Millard was an end man and was of the type that made him valuable to the team. In the two games he played against Sedalia and Manual his playing was of such a caliber as to insure success. But an untimely illness lost him his position and cut short what was to have been an unusually successful football year for him.

BENJAMIN PEERY

Ben, playing the position of guard on this year's squad, was ranked as an all-star. He was an exceptionally good defense man, was a hard hitter and a steady pluggler. He made holes for the offense and was one of the most dependable men on the Purple team.

JACK AULD

Jack has an enviable record in track and is a two-year letter man. He was a member of the Medley Relay team that missed the world's record by only one-tenth of a second at K. U. relays last year. He is captain of the track and is regarded as the best half-miler in the Missouri Valley. He has tied the school record for the half mile and he is expected to bring home more than his share in track victories this year.

AL DORSETT

Al is a sure point winner in track. He is a two-year letter man and was also a member of the Medley Relay team that ran at the K. U. relays last year. As a sprinter he is one of the best in the city. Great things are expected of him during this year's track season.

MEREDITH McDANIEL

"Merry" was a member of the World's Record Relay Team and is a three-year letter man in track. He was also a member of the Medley Relay team, entered at Lawrence last year. He does consistent work as a broad jumper and is entered regularly in the 100, 220 and 440. If he lives up to his past record he will help bring home several more cups during the 1927 track season.

MANNING ELGIN

Elgin is a three-year letter man in track and has a fine record as a pole vaulter and broad jumper. He is scheduled to win first in his event this year.

WALTER SIMCOX

Simcox has made a record as a high jump man and is another one of Northeast's scheduled winners. He has been active in track, winning a letter every year.

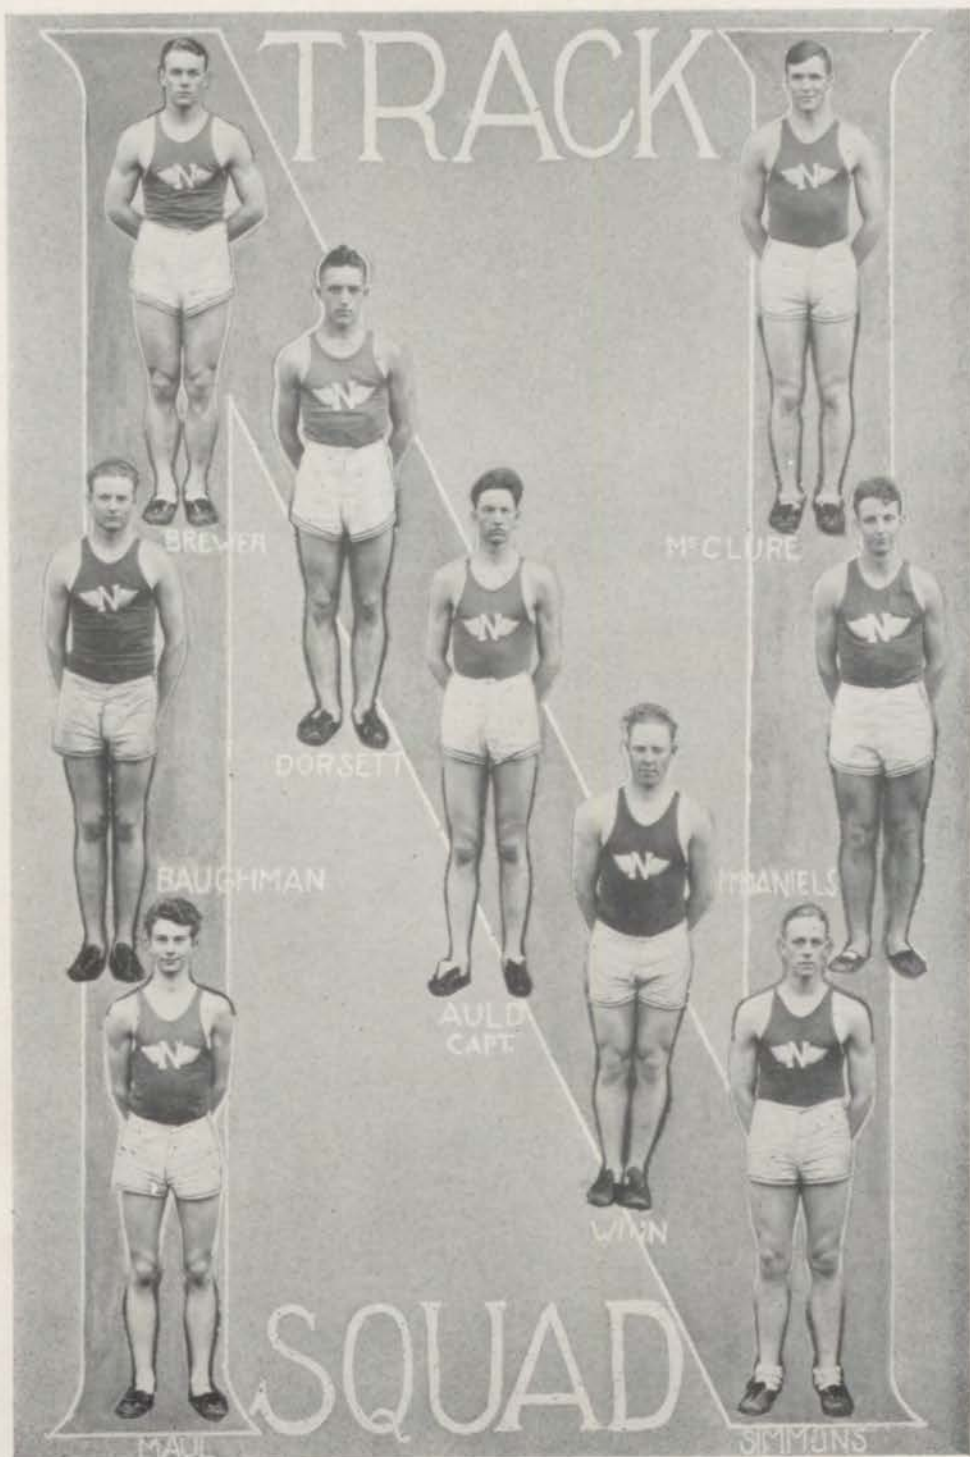

LORES McCLURE

McClure is a fast track man and was a member of indoor relay team.

ROY WYNN

Roy was a member of the indoor relay team.

The "N" Club differs from all other organizations in Northeast, in that it has no social functions and no regular meetings. The membership is composed of those who have reached the highest goal in athletics at Northeast, for they must have earned a first team letter in some inter-school athletic activity. Its influence is keenly felt throughout the school and it is a factor in promoting team co-operation and good sportsmanship. The possessor of a football or basket ball letter must have played in a majority of games or shown unusual ability at the end of the season. To win a track letter a track man must place first or second to a Northeast man in a dual meet or go to the finals in an indoor meet, state meet or quadrangular meet.

The tradition behind the club has made the "N" Club foremost among the organizations that are striving to accomplish the best things for Northeast.

The Northeast Olympic Association is an organization for girls in the department of Physical Education in Northeast High School. The object of this organization is to develop skill in certain lines of athletic endeavor and to promote the spirit of fair play and clean sportsmanship among the girls.

The point system is used. The following points are given for each sport: Hockey, 10; volley ball, 10; basket ball, 10; baseball, 10; dancing, 10; tennis, 10; badge tests, 10.

When a girl acquires 25 points in physical education work, she is automatically admitted into the association, provided her grades reach the standard set by the school.

Each year the "Olympic Club" sponsors the annual Gym Fete given by the school. This year, however, Northeast Night was substituted for the Gym Fete.

The year of 1926-27 proved to be a very successful season for tennis. While inter-scholastic competition was not held, a fine inter-class tournament was enjoyed with a greater number of entries than usual, which indicates a growing interest in this activity.

Two tournaments were played, one in the Fall and the other in the Spring. The winner of the Spring tournament is the champion of the year. The Fall tournament is played to stimulate an interest in the Spring tournament.

The past three years the championship has been won by Edith Lee McDaniel, Maxine Trenton running second in 1926. Other seniors and juniors have shown promise of becoming tennis satellites and carried the laurels through to the front rank, so that tennis could retain its place among the prominent athletics of the school.

Track

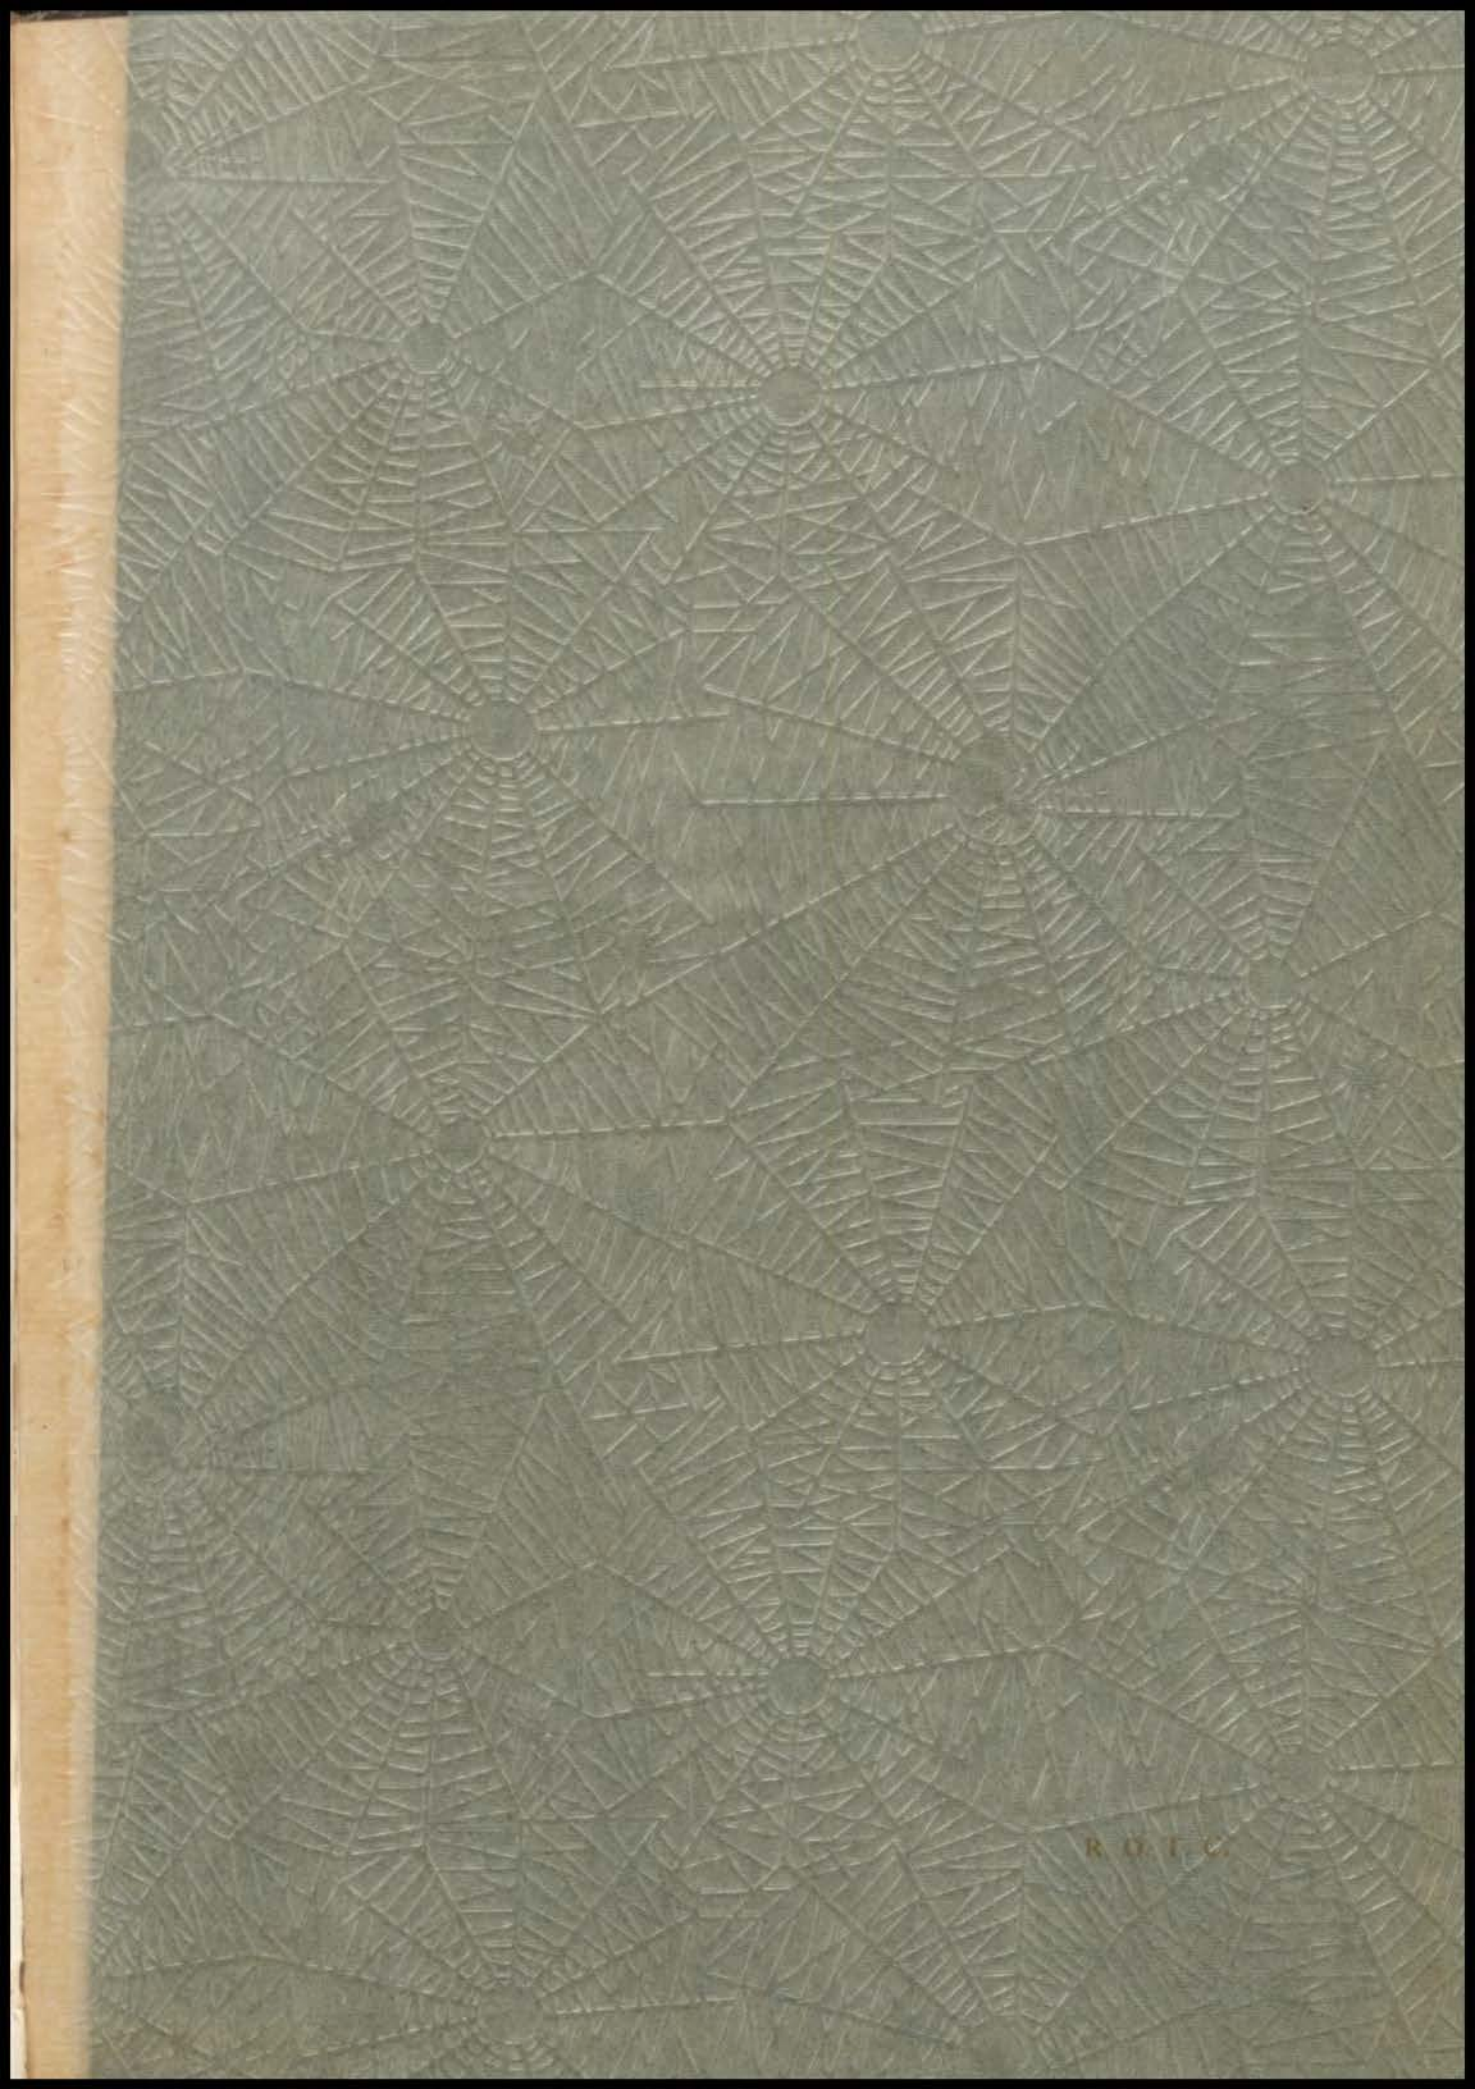

When the Annual goes to press in the Spring of 1927 the Track Meet will not have yet been held. In fact, practice for it will have hardly begun. However, a boundless amount of enthusiasm has been displayed by the girls of the track squad, who number approximately one hundred and fifty. This is the largest number of girls who have taken part in any sport this year.

The girls declare they are going to break some track records, a result which is not at all improbable, considering the interest and ability of the squad.

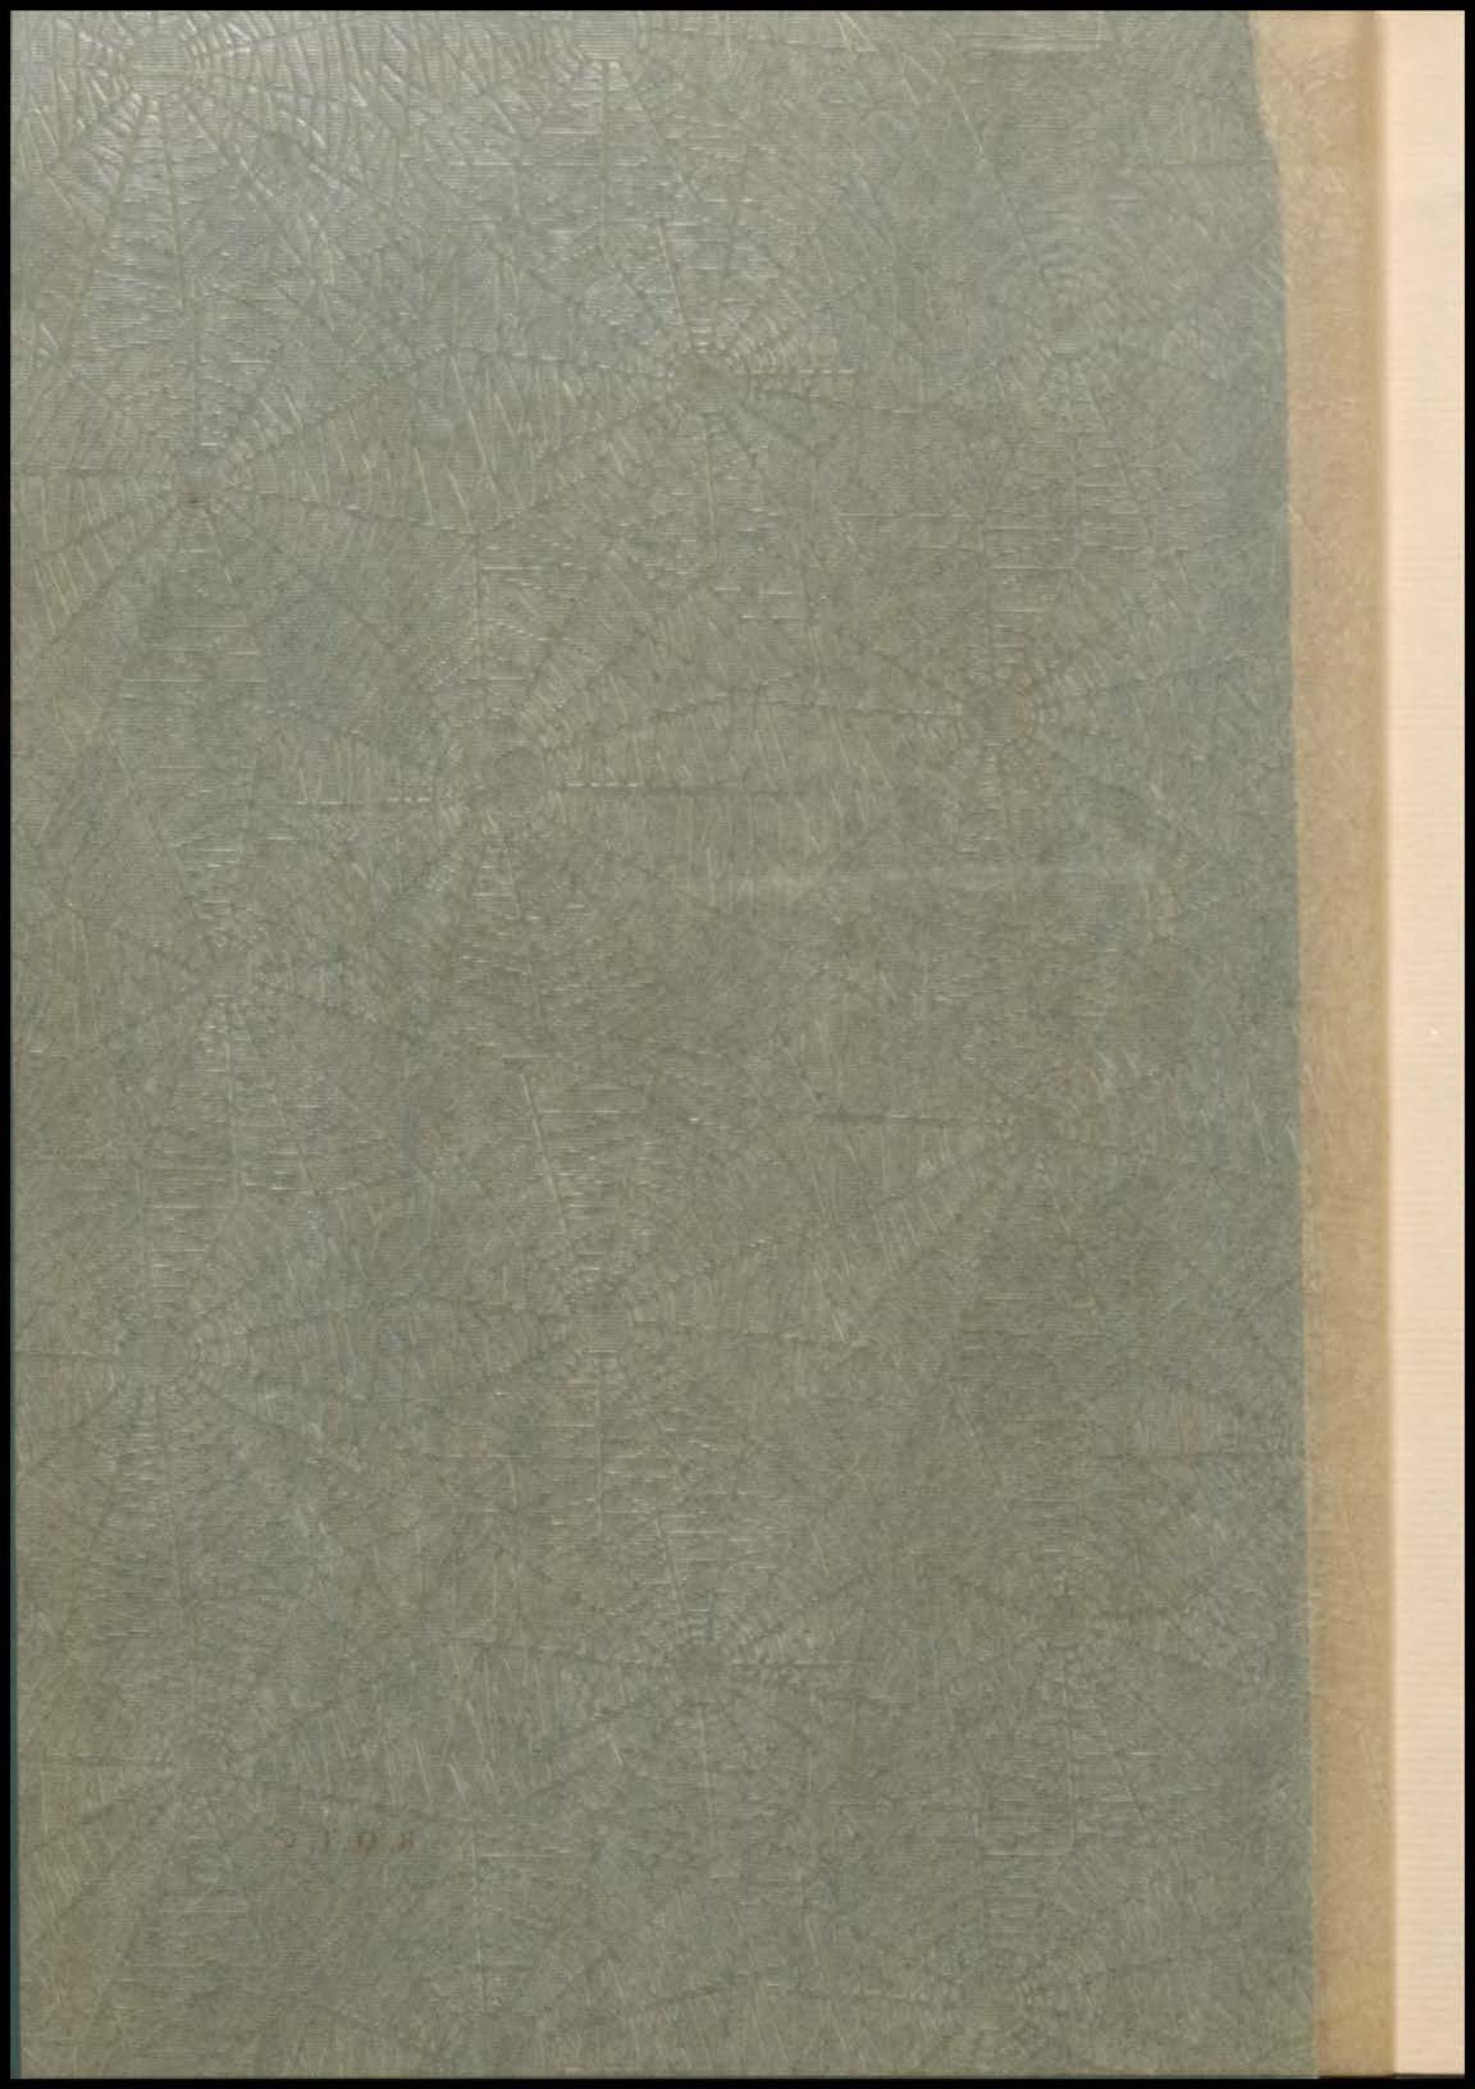

The events for competition are: Baseball throw, backward and forward basket ball throw, hop, skip and jump, running broad jump, running high jump, fifty-yard dash and relays.

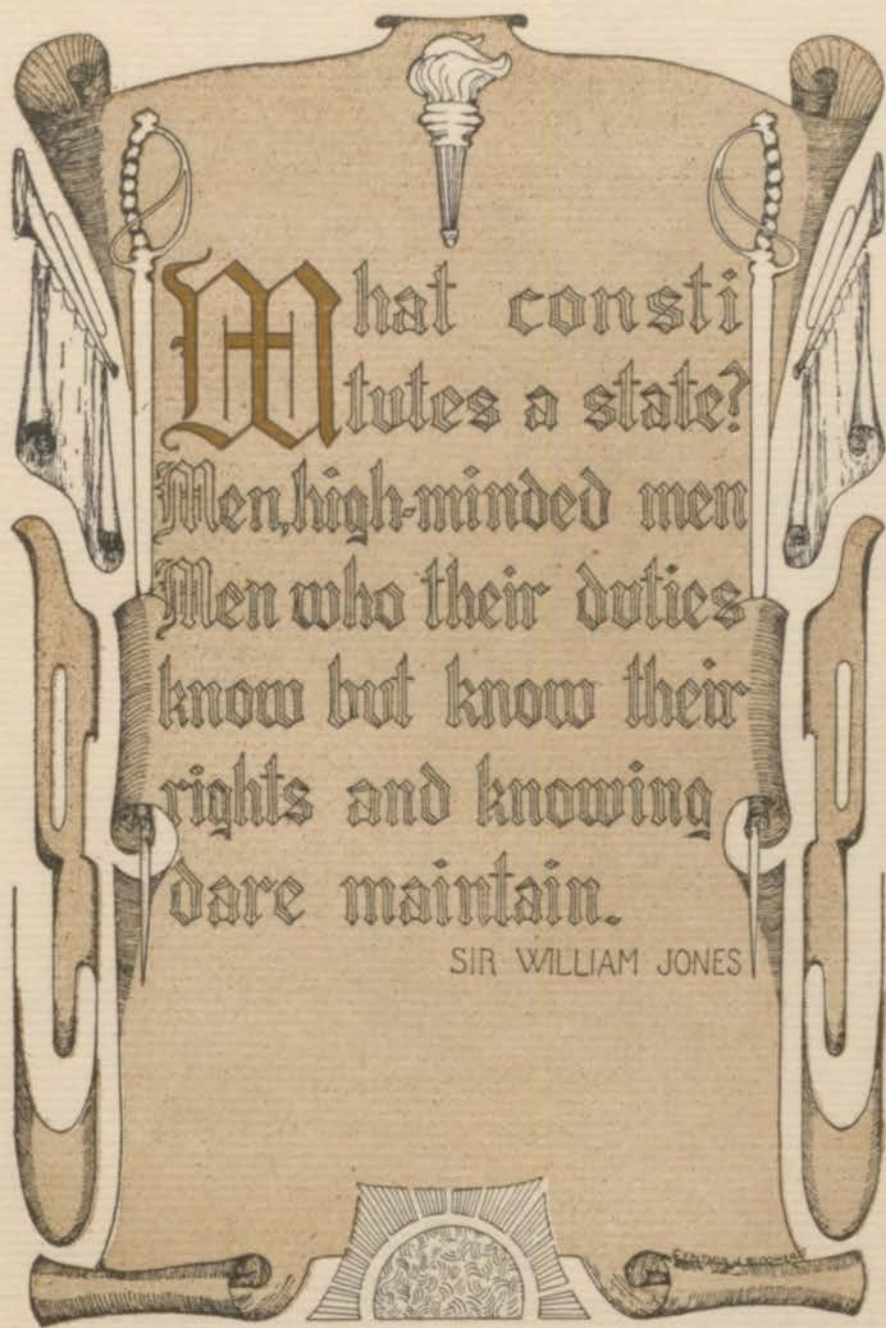

The Track Meet will be held early in May and, next to baseball, will be the last athletic event of the year.

Company A started the year in the finest of spirits, and throughout the entire year has never fallen below the highest standards. The proficiency of the individual and the ability of the leaders, bound by co-operation from all, are the reasons Company A has been so outstanding this year. Company A is a living testimony that the purpose of the R. O. T. C. is not to make war, but is to keep peace. Company A feels that it has done a great deal towards building clean, strong, citizens for the future.

COMPANY B

Company B is noted for its discipline. Early in the year, the boys of this company realized that it lay in their power to make or mar their company. They set out with determination that Company B should typify obedience. By being obedient, they have a company which is respectful, has well groomed boys, and has learned to be patient. Company B realizes that the attitude on the part of the boys is mostly the cause of its success, but it would like to show its regard for its student officers who have given their time and labor so unselfishly.

The band, under the direction of Mr. Avery the first semester, and Mr. French the second semester, has had a very successful year. There are forty-one members divided into two classes, one of 25 and the other 16. The idea of starting those interested in playing band instruments from the beginning originated with the second semester. The programs played by the band consist of standard overtures, operatic selections, semi-classics and marches. The band this year had the honor of playing for the basket ball team, who returned victorious from the Columbia meet.

The Christmas Play

THE enthusiastic applause testified that the annual Christmas play was a great success. The play "Miss Lulu Bett" was presented Friday and Saturday evenings, December 10 and 11.

The title role was portrayed exceptionally well by Thelma Ferster on Friday night and by Eloise Diels, Saturday. Dorothy Smith as the grandmother, Harold Eads as the extremely bashful young man, and Martha Piper as the very naughty, small daughter of the family created much mirth and were well received by the audience. Russell Ryan as the father displayed a great deal of histrionic ability and succeeded in making the audience dislike him thoroughly. The role of the spoiled wife was played with much effectiveness by Kathleen Bridges on Friday evening and by Lucy Seaman on Saturday evening. Paul Gaddy as the lover of Miss Lulu deserves credit for his splendid presentation of that character.

Much of the success of the play was due to the untiring efforts of the coach, Miss Helen Hobbs, who worked faithfully with the cast to produce the play. Mr. George Ellis and Mr. Verne Pickens also deserve credit for their work on the stage settings.

The play netted approximately $450.00.

The Senior Play

THE 1927 Senior play, "As You Like It," by William Shakespeare, was the outstanding and most successful event of the year. It is one of Shakespeare's lighter works and was presented in the school auditorium the nights of May 20 and 21.

The play is built around the court life of the sixteenth century. Orlando has been denied the fortune left to him by his father and is banished from his home by his brother, Sir Oliver. Meanwhile, Rosalind, whose father, Duke Senior, has been banished from court by his brother, Duke Frederick, has also been ordered to leave the court; and, disguised as a young man, accompanied by Lelia, her cousin, she leaves in search of her father.

In the second act this interesting and unusual group meet in the Forest of Arden. Phoebe, a shepherdess, falls in love with Rosalind, whose name now is Gannymede. Touchstone, the clown, falls in love with a country wench, Audrey, frightening her country lover, William. And Orlando pretends that Gannymede is his own Rosalind and makes love to this "boy." But the last act clears all by reuniting all the lovers and with the Duke Senior and Orlando regaining their stolen fortunes.

Clymans Marshall as Orlando was real throughout the play. Dorothy Teller and Kathleen Bridges as Rosalind were well liked by the audience. Dorothy Smith and Thelma Ferster furnished the comedy and acted the part to the best of their ability.

Northeast Night

HAPPY thoughts and pleasant memories were carried away from Northeast the night of February 11, by over 3,000 patrons and friends of our school, who assembled at the school "Northeast Night" to enjoy the attractions. The "Northeast Night" was given this year for the first time in three years. The success of the "Night" was remarkable for the small amount of outside publicity that the event received. Numerous expressions of pleasure from students, teachers, friends and patrons convinced all doubters that the night was indeed the most enjoyable of the school year.

One principal feature of the evening was the alumni reunion in the gymnasium. This was the first time any attempt had been made to bring the old students home again. The alumni responded splendidly to the call of Northeast and approximately five hundred attended the reunion.

The main show given in the auditorium consisted of a very humorous skit given by the dramatic art class, a short play given under the direction of Miss Burton, a review given by the R. O. T. C., an exhibition by the boys' gym classes, dancing by the girls' gym, and singing by the Boys' Glee Club, and the Treble Clef, this attraction was very enjoyable and well worth the price of admission.

These two outstanding features of the evening did not detract, however, from the clever little stunts and skits presented by the clubs and societies of the school.

In short, every student and teacher co-operated to make the evening the splendid success that it was. Much credit is due J. J. Ellis, chairman of the "Northeast Night" committee, for his work in making the "Night" one not to be forgotten soon. The other teachers of the school also deserve credit for their work in making the night a quiet, orderly, and still most enjoyable event.

Junior Prom

THE annual Junior Prom which was held the night of May 27, was indeed an event that the Juniors sincerely hope the Seniors of "27" will remember for years to come!

The decorations were very elaborate this year and added beautifully to the theme of the prom.

The committee co-operated to the best of their ability, and we take this time and place to thank each and every Senior for their hearty cooperation in making this prom a success.

JACK HALVEY, Chairman of Prom.

The wind howls and blusters around the igloos and moans through the scrubby trees. It is a cold September morn when several hundred student shake the icicles off their books, don their snowshoes and trudge slowly to a very magnificent white building located on Van Brunt, Smart, Thompson, and Chelsea, known as Northeast High School.

There is great excitement in the halls—a new principal and several new teachers greet us—there are no freshmen present—for behold a Junior High School has arisen during the short summer vacation and now stands tall and majestic against the stormy sky. But, no matter, it is with senior high that we are concerned.

Two months of school drag wearily away with no incidents of importance transpiring except that the Student Council officers for the first term are elected, editors for the annual are chosen, the football season opens, and six cheer leaders are selected.

The students accept a mixer given them and, after the Music Appreciation Club presents an assembly program and peps things up, the Mathematics and Commercial Clubs given a dance to break the monotony. Then the sleigh bells jingle merrily when the Thanksgiving holidays come and the students leave Northeast with anxious stomachs.

The welcome month of December opens appropriately with the Theta Dance, and when "Miss Lulu Bett" arrives December 10 and 11, there seems to be no end to the joyous crowd who flock through the portals of Northeast to give her a rousing reception.

After class officers are elected, the Music Appreciation Club again appears on the scene and, coupled with the Art Club, gives a dance. Then Christmas, which is such a happy time, especially in the far North—east, is preceded by the annual Debater Dance.

NOREASTER

A period of calm transpires. Then slickers make their appearance when the Clios and Bentons, again together, celebrate with a St. Pat Dance, March 18. The Music Contest occurs April 1 and the Shakes April Fool everyone by really giving a dance that same night.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-seven arrives on time and a week later the Glee Club and Treble Clef Club give a dance which inspires another mixer. The Clios and Bentons present "Station YYY" for no particular reason except to have an assembly. Out of a clear sky bursts a very dampening flow of final "Exams"; on recovery from semester grades, Major Martin Carey and Sponsor Major Ethel Dawe are selected. Then, as a diversion, the girls debate and so do the boys.

Meanwhile the basket ball season has ended and Northeast finishes second in the inter-high

After a long rest, Northeast Night is revived and in spite of the snowy atmosphere, is a success. Then the Deltas dance. The K. C. A. C. meet comes along too. Another mixer, and then the M. U. K. U. meet occurs where, amidst the ice and snow, Northeast runs away from everybody.

school tournaments—but lo and behold—our team wades to Columbia through the slush and returns champions of Missouri. Then to Chicago they wend their way and come back winners of the Consolation Tournament. Then the hills and dales ring with the noise made—school is closed, that is, no classes—a mixer with refreshments—and then—alas—three igloos are melted in the huge bonfire held that night to complete the celebration.

Then comes many thrills and heart throbs over Honor Society bids. The Alphas dance on Friday, April 8, and the R. O. T. C. Circus completes the week-end. Next everyone hops to the Cadet Hop and suffers the consequences in bed the next day, for 'tis Good Friday and the students are forced to remain in their igloos and desist from attending classes. Societies practice songs and do much hard work preparing for the "Lit" contest, April 23. More thrills and heart throbs for the contestants.

But, oh 'twas almost forgotten to record the Inter-class Combat in these memoirs. "Much ado about nothing!" And speaking of Shakespeare, the seniors present "As You Like It" and 'twas liked, in fact, 'twas raved about.

Of course, then, the Junior Prom when the gym is filled with merry hearts and joyous feet—and various decorations.

The last day for seniors arrives. Class Day,—much excitement and gathering up of belated senior pages. Then time passes by until Commencement, that never-to-be-forgotten time for every senior who receives a Purple emblazoned diploma.

What Every Student Should Know

Is William or Helen Young? Maybe both—you never can tell.
 Who did Howard Horn? We didn't know he had a car.
 What does Dick Woodman—see? Nothing but Martha Piper.
 Who does Robert North-cut? Marjorie Hamilton and "Babe" Glenn.
 Where does Dell Wade? He might try Kenneth's Jordan, Frances' Kreek, or Crosby's Waters.
 Is Hoyt Bash—ful? How about it, Lucille?
 Is Jack Noble? Ask Gladys.
 What did Dorothy Tell—er? She's usually talking to him.
 What does Bernice Lach? Not much of anything according to the later reports.
 Does Sidney Love—lace? It probably depends upon whom the lace adorns.
 Is Stanley Grace—ful? Well, he is a pretty good dancer.
 Who does John Paul Love? This is a big mystery.
 Is Betty White? We don't know. How about Robert E.?
 Where are Kathleen's Bridges? We guess she burned them behind her.
 What does Martin Carey? We wonder if it could be Rhoda's Hood.
 What about Eileene's Wallace? Why, we thought his name was Whitney or Charles.
 Where were Billy and Barbara San—born? This is too deep for us.

While waiting in the office one day for an interview with Mr. Barbee, a little sophomore had occasion to study the complicated mechanism which makes up the office clock. By careful observation, he noted that when a little thing-a-ma-jig near the bottom came around ever so often, that a whirl-i-gig at the top flopped around and around. A little doo-hickey then slid somewhere, and a watchama-callit went up and down and something else puffed. Then a something-or-other bar went up on one side and down on the other, a hickey squeaked, and the minute hand moved half an inch.

Ethel Dawe declared in the "Courier" that she was going to be a nurse when she grew up. We're sure Dell Wade would be ready to start an epidemic any time.

Wonder What a Dish in the Lunch Room Thinks About?

Life's Darkest Moment

Well, here I am, all stacked up ready for a new day. I think I'm the fourteenth one on this pile; maybe I didn't count right but it doesn't make any difference anyway. Wonder what they will put in me first. I won't have to think very long 'cause I guess we've started. Sure enough, they've put me by the potatoes again. I'm next now, gee, they're coming fast.

Slop! Wonder why somebody is always yanking me around. I wish she wouldn't walk so fast. Now she's stuck a fork in me. Well, I finally got to this table without being dropped. Now she's gone to get a drink and I suppose I have to wait here with all these potatoes on top of me 'till she comes back. I wish she'd quit talking and hurry up.

At last, she's going to start—oh, no, somebody's taken her stool. Now why—it's a good thing she found one quick. Gee, somebody shoved me and I almost went too far. Now she's jabbing around with that fork; if these potatoes were not here I sure would get hurt.

Now she's through and gone off and left me. Crash! Somebody broke a glass. Why don't they look where they are going. Wish somebody would come and pick me up. Here he comes with that big thing that rolls around. They've stacked me on top for once; this is a pretty good ride. I usually get put on the bottom. Gee, this thing sure makes a lot of noise. Oh, they're dumping me in a dishpan again. I sure do hate to get washed.

Well, I'm all stacked up again. Where are they going to take me now? Just my luck, by the soup! These two crackers aren't very heavy but this bowl weighs me down considerably. Now she's pouring soup in the bowl—hope she don't spill any on me. They sure use big spoons to eat soup.

S-l-l-op! O-o-o-hh! I thought I was gone then. Now she's spilled soup on me and got the crackers all wet, too. Why aren't people more careful of me? I don't remember what they paid for me but I guess I don't cost much.

Gee, I wish they'd put me over on the cinnamon roll table next time. That's a nice, clean place to be—I mean you don't get grease on you over there.

Well, anyway I've got one consolation, I haven't been broken yet. Wonder how that would feel? But I guess I might as well quit wondering—such is the life of a dish!

A Charming Story

The world famous snake charmer, Adam Ben Aboob looked fondly down upon his son, Adam Ben Aboob, Jr.

"My son," he said, "the time has come for your great test. I would that thou should follow in my footsteps as a charmer of snakes. Come with me and we shall see if thou art possessing of this rare talent."

So Adam Ben Aboob led ditto, jr., to a wire enclosed cage wherein several snakes were lying carelessly around. They were beautiful creatures. Their sheepish looking eyes of red, white, and blue were set neatly in their sleek, black heads.

"Watch my every movement as I charm these fair reptiles," said the famous snake charmer to his son as he entered the cage.

Aboob took a position in the middle of the cage, and made a few guttural noises out of his nose. Instantly the snakes arose and moved across the floor towards the man. One especially strong reptile jumped to Aboob's shoulder, leaned over, and kissed him affectionately on the cheek.

Aboob shoved the snakes away and then led his son into the cage.

"Now, my son," he said, "do as I did. We shall see if thou hast the ability to charm these creatures."

Aboob, Jr., advanced. He made the queer noises. No result. Then he winked at a female. The reptile, captivated, started towards him, immediately followed by her companions. Both Aboobs sighed with relief.

Then suddenly, when halfway across, the snakes stopped. They sniffed the air suspiciously with their noses. Plainly something was wrong. They took a few faltering steps and stopped again, a terrible fear was surging through their hearts. Could it be possible? They hoped not. Yet—should they take the chance? All of the snakes but one refused to take another step.

But this female, still entranced, advanced to the boy's feet. The air was tense with a strained excitement as she jumped to his shoulder. The snake squirmed as she started to kiss him. Suddenly, like a shot, the female dropped to the ground, a horrified look on her face.

The snakes rushed to the corner, cowering, all their fears realized.

Aboob had failed!

That's the insidious thing about halitosis. You yourself rarely know when you have it and even your closest friends won't tell you.

TEAMWORK

TEAMWORK on the telephone means courteous, alert cooperation just as teamwork in school or anywhere, whether in work or in play.

Three persons form this telephone "team"—(1) the person calling, (2) the operator and (3) the person called. Being sure of the number desired, speaking distinctly and responding with alacrity, results in better service.

The first requisite of good telephone service requires adequate plant and equipment well maintained, but, second to this equipment, is intelligent cooperation—teamwork—of those at both ends of the line and at the middle.

We appreciate and thank you for lending such cooperation.
