The RAIDER has never exerted a great deal of influence within the Pem-Day community. As a yearbook, it has often been considered little more than a nice, neat pictoral history of a school year, in which everyone can look up his own picture and read about his favorite activity. In recent years, this attitude towards the RAIDER has been somewhat less pronounced, but it nonetheless remains. This year, the editors of the 1973 RAIDER have attempted to go beyond the limitations of a book that is to be merely a pictoral history. We have not been concerned with having a picture of everybody somewhere in the book or with saying nice things about the athletic teams, but rather with trying to convey within the framework of yearbook the pervading attitudes and feelings that we observed during the 1972-73 school year. We have tried to make the 1973 RAIDER fair despite increasing pressures from all sides to expand or reduce coverage on many sports or activities. We have tried to make the book accurate, technically sound, and interesting. Read with enjoyment and intelligence, and keep an open mind.

Pembroke-Country Day School Volume 27

The 1973 RAIDER is dedicated to Melvin P. Bishop Jr.

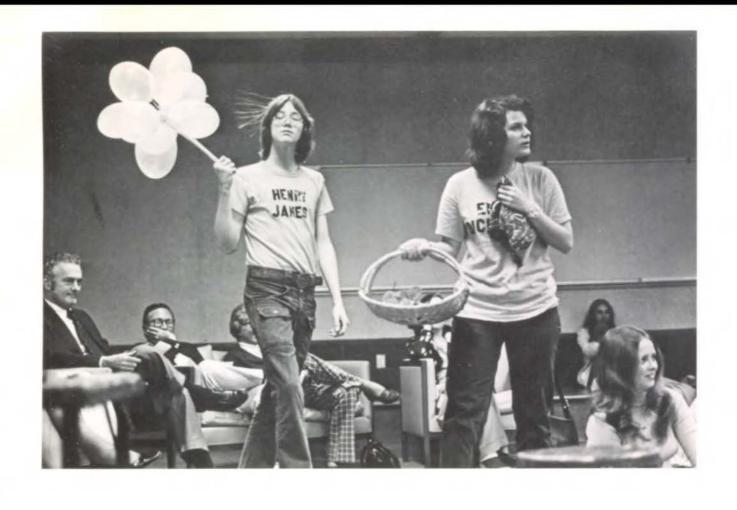

"Students at Pem-Day in 1972 have it harder than any other year of students. The increase of freedom has brought the advent of the individual. The student at Pem-Day, faced with an increase in choices of what to do and a decrease in guidelines of what to do, must make more decisions for himself. The school isn't molding him to all its specifications any more; he must choose his own."

- HILLTOP editorial, September 22, 1972

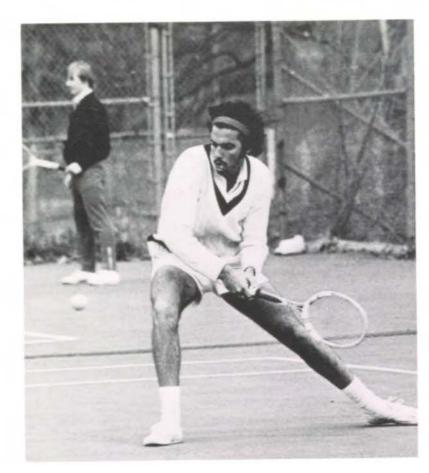

"The success of the coordination program is dependent on several factors. First, the students must fulfill their responsibilities to the program. At present, the necessity of continuous dialogue between the two schools regarding the absence of students is a time consuming, irritating process. (This is perhaps a rather personal feeling.) The teachers involved in the program have been very understanding of the difficulties of transport, scheduling, and many other factors which detract from their classroom procedure. This year has been much more successful in providing the required time for transport. Another major factor is the need to take a more realistic approach regarding the balance of classes as regards boys and girls. At present some classes are considered coordinate because of the presence of one boy and 18 girls, or one girl and 14 boys. To provide the most effective interchange in class discussion, the numbers need to be more even."

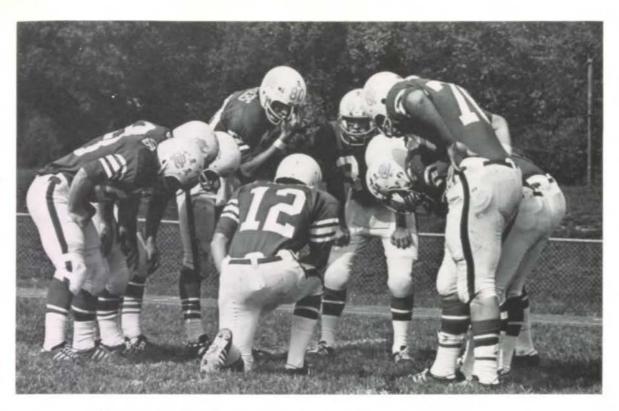

- Doug Wood, Director of Coordination

"Every coach at Pem-Day wants his team to be successful; but more important, I feel, he wants his players to give their best possible effort at all times. It is only then that a boy can gain anything from athletics. The enjoyment in athletics does not come in practice; it comes when he can see his improvement as a result of his hard work."

- Bob Hicks

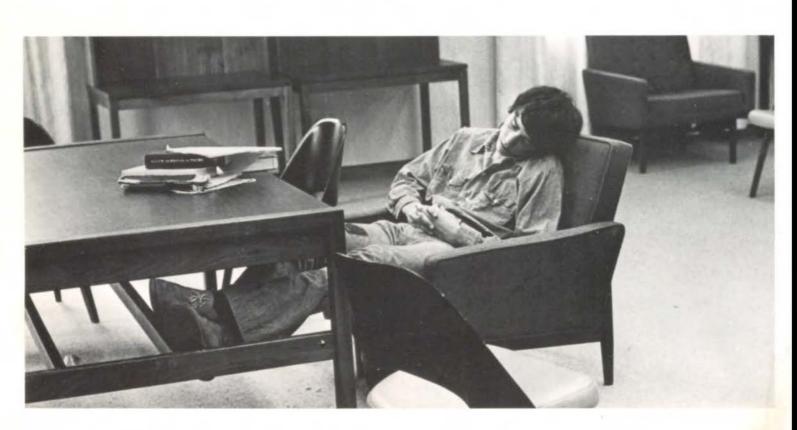

"Too much concern about achievement can breed too much pressure. Somehow we must learn to maintain the high level of achievement we have at Pem-Day without letting our efforts warp the life of the student."

- Roger Boocock

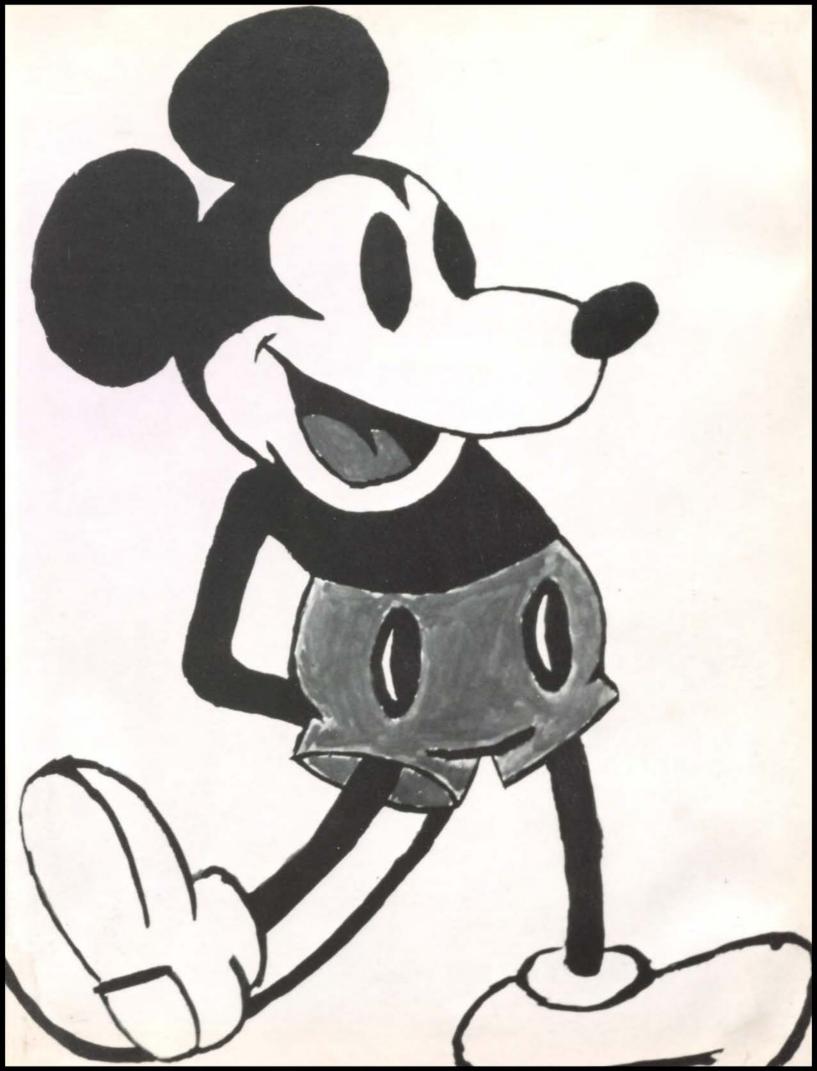

"Whatever happened to senior privileges? I didn't spend twelve years in shuffling subservience to upperclassmen just to stand on equal terms with every freshman, sophomore, and junior in the Upper School. What I had in mind was a little closer to boot-licking respect from my academic inferiors, not to mention a few genuine privileges bestowed on me and my classmates exclusively. Equality is for commies and fascists; this is America, where the big stick rules."

Roger Boocock

Roger Boocock has proven himself to be a wise choice as Pem-Day's Headmaster. In his first year as chief executive, he has done much to restore a sense of calm to the school and establish an excellent rapport with all of the students.

Boocock arrived at Pem-Day at perhaps the most ideal time in the past five years. After three years of seething student dissatisfaction, Pem-Day was calming down and returning to normalcy.

Mr. Boocock made it a point to learn names, make friends, and become involved. He at once took a genuine interest in student affairs, and was always willing to listen to suggestions and complaints.

On the administrative side, he initiated several important changes in the operation of the school. At the beginning of the year, along with Board President Morton Sosland, Boocock created a special Long Range Planning Committee consisting of students, teachers, parents, alumni, and board members. The committee studied every aspect of the Pem-Day community and presented Boocock with a comprehensive report at the end of the year.

Boocock showed himself to be an imaginative administrator with his mid-year naming of four administrators to expanded posts. Kevin Madden was named Associate Headmaster, Marvin Van Leeuwen and C. B. Leuck became Assistant Headmasters, and Ed Wucker's duties as Assistant Upper School Principal were greatly expanded to include more purely administrative concerns.

Mr. Boocock has had a good start at Pem-Day. Hopefully he will remain for several years to come.

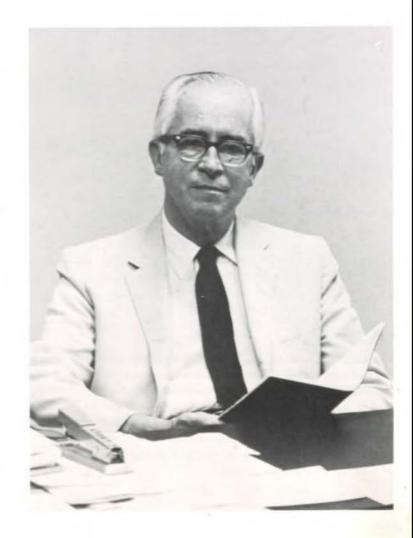

Bishop and Madden

Kevin Madden stepped down this year from his post as Interim Headmaster, and resumed his duties as Dean of Students and physics teacher at Pem-Day. As Dean of Students, he spent many hours advising puzzled students on concerns ranging from course selections to college. At the midyear, he was named Associate Headmaster, in effect retaining his status as second in command at Pem-Day, a position he has held de facto for several years.

Mel Bishop handled his job as Director of Admissions with the same flair that made him a legend with the Pem-Day Glee Club. In an attempt to bring Pem-Day's enrollment up to the elusive 500 mark, Bishop organized slide shows, picnics, meetings, tours, and scores of interviews. His efforts turned the enrollment curve upward again and raised the temperature around Pem-Day at least a few degrees. In addition to his admissions duties, Bishop once again directed the Glee Club to another successful year.

Mr. Bishop has always been considered a friend by the students throughout his career at Pem-Day. His warmth and vitality will be sincerely missed by all those who know him when he leaves Pem-Day in pursuit of a career in administration.

Leuck and Clark

Pem-Day's financiers, C. B. Leuck and Sheldon Clark, were particularly busy this year. They had to adjust their programs and procedures to a new Headmaster, and they had to cope with a deteriorating national economy. They performed well, as usual, and kept the school steadily on its feet.

Mr. Leuck, Business Manager and newly-appointed Assistant Headmaster in charge of finance, is responsible for creating a workable operating budget and making sure that its limits are not exceeded. Mr. Clark, Director of Development, looks after PemDay's fund-raising projects.

In early spring, Mr. Leuck made the difficult decision to increase Pem-Day's tuition by $100 in order to counteract the effects of inflation on the budget. He made the move at the risk of losing a few potential students.

Mr. Clark performed his financial duties, along with those related to alumni affairs, without the help of even a full-time secretary. His burden will be eased somewhat next year when Hallmark's Richard Eisenhart takes over as Director of Admissions and Public Relations.

Van Leeuwen and Wucker

The two men responsible for the day to day operation of the Upper School, Marvin Van Leeuwen and Ed Wucker, had relatively easy jobs this year. Discipline became a minor problem, and both men were free to devote more of their time to expanded administrative duties.

Marvin Van Leeuwen, in his second year as Upper School Principal, faced few of the openly hostile conflicts that plagued his first year in his post. The Senate early in the year took care of most of the rules that the Upper School needed, and with the passing of the hair and dress code controversy, Van Leewen found himself surprisingly unconfined by disciplinary duties.

In recognition of his efforts and his greater amount of time, Headmaster Roger Boocock in February appointed Van Leewen to the post of Assistant Headmaster, with the duties of overseeing the curriculum, supervising the school's entire staff, aiding in coordination, and generally polishing the operation of the Upper School. This appointment came as part of a major piece of administrative redefinition, in which Kevin Madden became Associate Headmaster and C. B. Lueck became Assistant Headmaster with the duties of heading all financial planning.

Another part of the above-mentioned shift involved Assistant Upper School Principal, Ed Wucker. For years an unpopular man at Pem-Day, Wucker this year earned the respect and friendship of virtually every Upper School student. His job changed from one of almost purely disciplinary scope to one that included many administrative matters, and Wucker once again was in charge of the Senior Projects in January. Wucker also resumed his role as advisor to the Hilltop, devoting many hours to the paper.

Next year, Mr. Wucker will remain Assistant Principal, but with expanded administrative duties concerning the every day life of the Upper School, as Principal Van Leeuwen devotes more of his time to his duties as Assistant Headmaster. With the greater trust and respect Wucker earned this year, he should have no problems in assuming additional responsibilities next year.

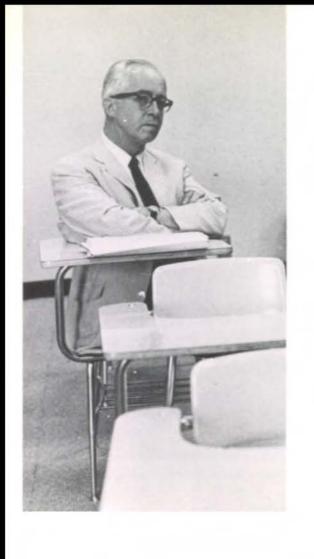

Possibly the greatest asset an independent school may have is its faculty. Only through the guidance of a competent faculty can a student hope to gain a useful and lasting awareness of the knowledge possessed by man. Intelligence cannot be taught, but without a guiding hand, the intelligence possessed by a student cannot be put to its best use.

ACTIVITIES

Student-Faculty Senate

The year began optimistically; at the first meeting, the newly reorganized Senate (having been reduced from sixty to twenty-four members) elected Ed Hicks Chairman, Preston Longino Secretary, and Rusty Jones, Twig Byers, Bob Hicks, and Pat White to the Executive Committee. In spite of scheduling problems the Senate found times to meet, and the first (and probably last) night meeting of the Senate was held in October. Termed "the most productive meeting ever" by members of the Executive Committee, the meeting lasted well into the night, despite the objections of several weary faculty members. The Senate passed a slate of legislation which was to last without serious challenge for the entire year: it revised the rules governing the operation of the Upper School, abolished the ineffective Student Activities Committee, and reinstated the Student-Faculty Discipline Committee.

The Senate was almost too effective at its first meeting; it soon found that it had nothing to do. The school was running smoothly, and a lack of complaints by students left the Senate with no issues to tackle. The Senate's only other significant action of the year was the revision of the lunchroom procedure.

Many people at Pem-Day saw the inactivity of the Senate in an optimistic light — if the Senate had no issues to handle, then the school must be in good shape. However, a closer examination finds that the Senate could have, with some initiative, had a very productive year. As one member of the Executive Committee observed, "The Senate allowed itself through its inaction to be first bypassed, then almost completely ignored by both the students and the administration. The Senate should have been aggressive; it could have set up the Long-Range Planning Committee or the Human Relations Committee, instead of waiting for these to be engineered by the Headmaster. As committees of this type are not strictly financial or curricular in scope, they lie within the jurisdiction of the Senate as defined by its constitution. A move of this type by the Senate this year would have put the Senate in a firm position to take over the real leadership of the Upper School."

The Senate had an unexciting year, but hopefully it will serve as an example to future Senates as to the consequences of apathy and inaction. Next year the leadership of the Senate must realize that the Senate is not meant to be simply a body that handles complaints, but one which must provide initiative for action on its own.

. . . the Senate was almost too effective at its first meeting . . .

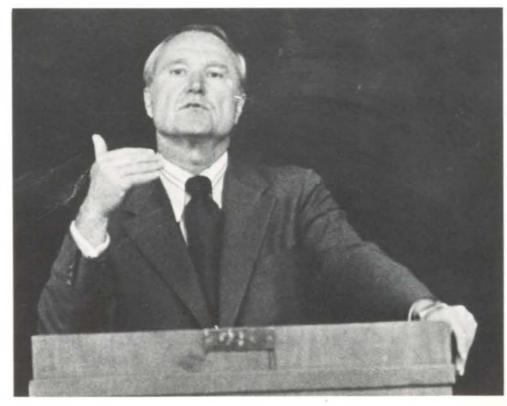

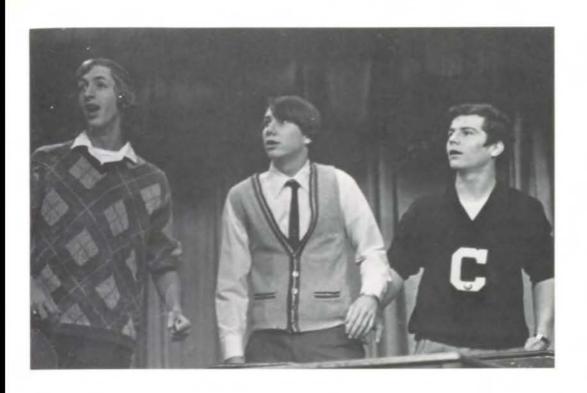

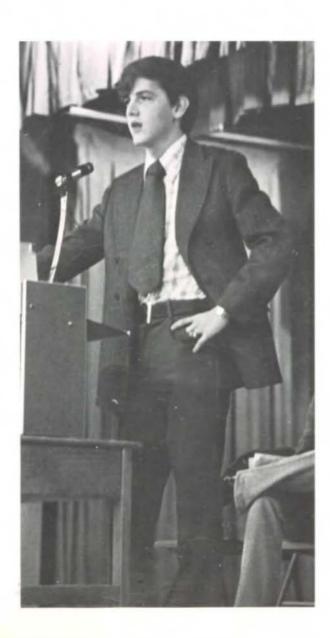

Assemblies

This year, an unusually varied and interesting slate of assemblies and guest speakers appeared at Pem-Day. Assemblies ranged from a presentation of a play by the Rockhurst Drama Club to a well-received concert by the University of Missouri-Columbia Percussion Ensemble. Speakers included U.S. Congressman Larry Wynn and columnist Cleveland Amory.

In addition, several assemblies were presented by Pem-Day students, ranging from a political debate between Rick Gibbons and Kevin Rivette to a piano recital by Steve Gittings.

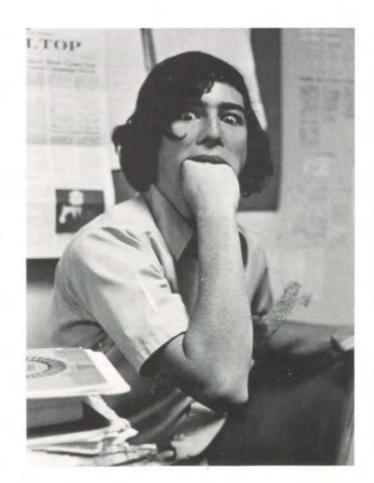

Although many excellent assemblies were offered, few students or faculty members took advantage of these opportunities for actual enrichment, preferring to use assembly periods to play ping-pong or catch up on homework.

A number of innovations were introduced as the year progressed. A record seventeen issues were published, along with the traditional parody issue, the Hillflop. The typography was redesigned in order to provide a livelier physical appearance, and numerous photographs served both artistic and informative functions within each issue. For the first time, the staff did the actual paste-up of each issue, and the circulation was increased immensely. In addition, several new features were added, including a regular column by faculty members, Campus Critic and Hilltop Past, the Concert Review, and David Owen's humor column, Lost in the Ozone Again.

The Hilltop's business affairs were handled with unprecedented success by junior Jamie Barickman, who managed to keep the paper on its feet while financing regular staff luncheons, two staff parties, and padded expense accounts for the editors.

At the end of the year, Editor Twig Byers and his staff received important recognition from the National Scholastic Press Association. The Hilltop was awarded that organization's highest rating, placing it in the "All-American" category. All things considered, the 1972-73 Hilltop was an exceptionally fine publication.

The Hilltop

The 1972-73 Glee Club will be remembered at Pem-Day as the last in the series of musical groups to serve under the direction of Mel Bishop. Highlighted by the tremendously successful production of West Side Story, the year was one of the best ever for the Glee

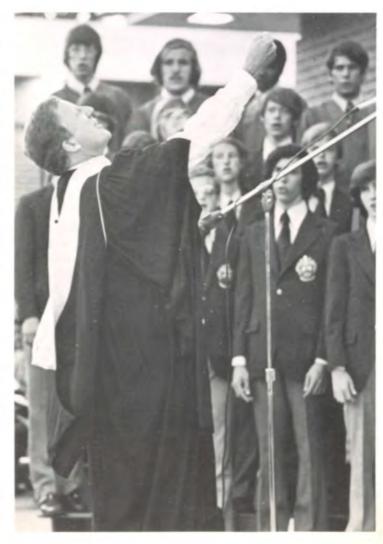

Led by Bishop and the officer corps consisting of Cliff Jones, Carl Edwards, Gordon Atkinson, Mike Simmons, Rusty Jones, Walt Dietrich, and Bill Hornbeck, the Glee Club proved that it could retain its tight, well-organized sound even with its expanded size. With the inclusion of freshmen in the Glee Club this year, the ranks swelled to over ninety voices.

The warblers performed at all of the traditional events, including Bravos, the Christmas Program, the Messiah, and the Plaza Lighting Ceremony. In addition, the Glee Club performed almost weekly at churches, clubs, and schools throughout the Kansas City area. The year was capped with a highly successful trip to Minneapolis in May.

The hit of the year was the spring production of Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story. Over three months of feverish rehearsal paid off as the show overwhelmed its audiences on the two nights prior to spring vacation.

Immediately after the show, the Glee Club began preparations for the tri-school performance of Hayden's The Creation, directed by Dan Hathaway. Performed in the Nelson Gallery, the concert was described as magnificent by almost everyone who attended.

The two smaller groups within the Glee Club, the Singers and the Pem-Day-Sunset Madrigals, also had very satisfying seasons. The Singers kept up their tradition of excellence while performing for numerous luncheons, banquets, and schools. The Madrigals, directed by Dan Hathaway, performed an unusually heavy schedule, including appearances at the Pem-Day Christmas Program and Bravos. The Mads climaxed their year with the presentation of John Carlo Menotti's The Unicorn, the Gorgon, and the Manticore, a madrigal operetta performed in the Pem-Day courtyard in May with a spe-62 cial troupe of dancers and mimers.

American Field Service

From any point of view, 1973 was a successful year for the American Field Service Committee. Headed by President Tom Rieger, Vice-President Cliff Jones, Secretary-Treasurer Frank Dean, and Faculty Advisor Gilbert Reynolds, the committee busied itself with fund raising and looking after Pem-Day's foreign exchange student from Norway, Jorgen Karlsen.

Jorgen was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. James Townley and their sons, Allen and J.P. Jorgen adapted quickly and easily to Kansas City and Pem-Day, and soon became a valuable addition to the school community. He added a new dimension to the Glee Club and aided the soccer team with his outstanding play, which brought him All-Metro recognition.

Jorgen spent one week at Liberty High School in the spring as part of the AFS short term stay program, which was initiated last year. Gavin Thomas, an Australian exchange student attending Harrison-ville High School, spent one week at Pem-Day in April.

For the second year in a row, two Pem-Day juniors, Blair Johnson and Jim Smith were selected to participate in the 1973 Americans Abroad Summer Program, attended in 1972 by Frank Dean and Cliff Jones.

One of the strongest points of Pem-Day's academic program is the independent study option that has been in effect for the past two years. This past year juniors and seniors were for the first time permitted to take four or, in some instances, only three courses in one semester, with an independent project in some area fulfilling their fourth or fifth course requirement.

Project subjects ranged from architectural design, computer science, and photography to teaching in the Lower School and managing phys-ed classes. Students devoted up to four hours a week officially to their projects, but most actually spent many more.

Pem-Day's independent study must be praised as one of the most valuable facets of the curriculum; Pem-Day upperclassmen have a program before them which matches the independent study programs of many of the nation's leading universities, and it is hoped that many students will continue to take advantage of this unique opportunity to learn in a somewhat less than traditional manner.

Senior Projects

Senior Projects once again proved to be a valuable addition to the Pem-Day curriculum. A number of interesting, well-planned projects resulted from the period, even though a number of seniors decided to spend January in mini-courses or the shadow program.

Project topics were as varied as the mini-courses. Seniors studied Fourier Waveform Analysis, law, creative writing, veterinary medicine, violin, Italian, and a number of other subjects. Several of the seniors continued their study throughout the remainder of the year.

Unlike other years, no special presentation was held. Director Ed Wucker felt that there were too few projects to make a show worthwhile. Interested students were, however, allowed to place exhibits in the halls during the weeks that followed the completion of the period.

At the end of the year, project head Wucker announced the three outstanding projects of the period. Recognized were David Hunter and Greg Morgan for their work in a computer project, Cary Groner for his work in the dramatic arts, and Steve Gittings for his work in music.

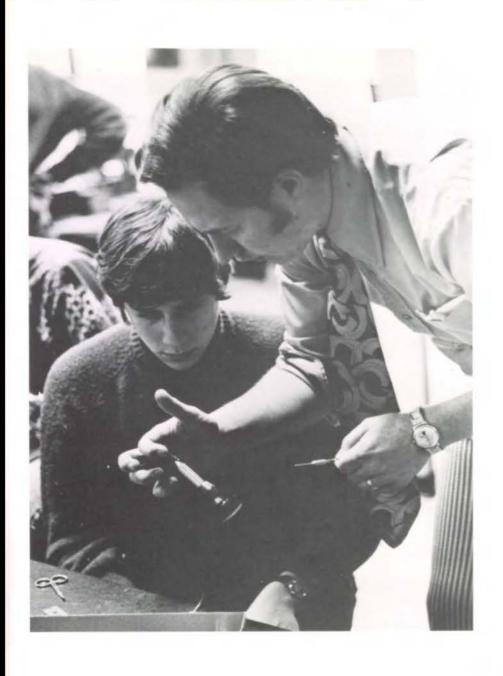

Mini-Courses

The popular mini-course program entered its second season this year, offering Upper Schoolers a number of interesting ways to spend their January independent study period. Seniors were allowed to enroll in the seminars for the first time, and many of them chose to take that option over the traditional Senior Projects.

Courses offered included sculpture, chess, drawing, auto mechanics, Oriental cooking, photography, and many others. Three courses, the Beatles, wilderness camping, and Hilltopian journalism, were taught by students.

Following Mr. Boocock's suggestion, a Shadow Program was added to the January curriculum. Interested students were allowed to "shadow" local business men and women by accompanying them on their daily rounds at the office. Both students and parents were enthusiastic about the new program and it will hopefully remain a part of the January experience for a long time to come.

With a strong core of returning starters, the 1972 Raider football team was expected to be a winner. The players themselves were quite confident of a conference championship and of qualifying for state competition.

The Raiders surprised no one by rolling over Belton in their first game by a convincing 28-0 score. After this performance, the Big Red found itself ranked ninth in the area by the Kansas City Star, and the team went into the next game even more confident of an excellent season. However, in their second game against Hogan, the Raiders failed to do anything but go through the motions and were lucky to lose only by one point, 7-6.

Unfortunately, the Raiders' performances continued to fluctuate in a similar fashion throughout the year. The Big Red rebounded from the loss to Hogan by smothering Kansas City West, 56-6, but then lost quite convincingly the following week to Codasco. The Raiders fought back and put together their longest winning streak of the year by winning consecutive victories over John Burroughs and St. Joseph-Shawnee.

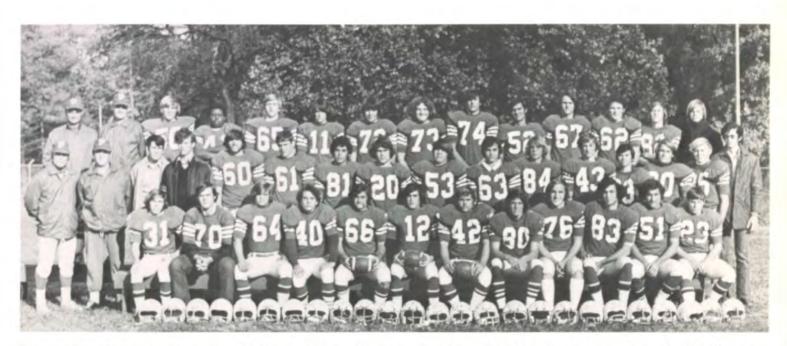

The victory over St. Joe was the only conference game the Raiders won. Coming into the game, St. Joe was the defending Kansas AA football champion and has won 28 games in a row. Led by the outstanding play of the defensive line, the Raiders dominated the game and won 7-6.

The squad lost their remaining two conference games to Lillis and St. Pius X. It was widely felt that if the Raiders' effort in these two games had even approached that displayed against St. Joe that they would have walked away with these games.

The highpoint of the year was unquestionably the victory over the Missouri Class AAA football champion, Chillicothe. The Big Red, despite being a definite underdog going into the game, put together their best effort of the season to come from behind in the fourth quarter to win 14-7.

The Raiders closed out the season with a 25-8 victory over Fort Osage. By the end of the season the squad had established itself as a powerful offensive team, a mediocre defensive team, and a sporadic winner. Many records were broken, but everyone on the team will remember this as the year in which they could have, but didn't.

The 1972-73 basketball season was very satisfying for all concerned. Optimism was sparse early in the season; Co-Captain Rick Ballou was benched with an injury, and prospects were not bright. The roundballers surprised almost everyone, however, by winning six of their first ten games on their way to a respectable 14-5 record and the sixth spot on the Kansas City Star's high school basketball top ten list.

The squad played well in the first half of the season. None of the four losses incurred were by more than four points, and the combined point spread of the four games was ten points.

The roundballers finished their regular season by reeling off eight straight victories. The Raiders amazed all their opponents with their skillful play and dominated every game, winning four of them by more than twenty points. Included in the string were victories over such traditional rivals as Rockhurst and Southwest, and the highlight of the season, the 73-45 grudge victory over Barstow.

The team entered the regional tournament with their sights set on a showdown with the area's top ranked team, Manual, in the finals. Despite the Raiders' determined optimism, the match never materialized as the Pem-Day squad lost in the first round to Lillis.

The Raiders were led all year long by the captains, Rick Ballou, who controlled the team's offense, and forward Ted Greene. Greene averaged 23 points a game and received honorable mention status on the Star's All-Metro team.

. . . not only one of the most successful years for Pem-Day athletics, but also one of the most sedate. Despite excellent records by virtually every team, few of Pem-Day's athletes adopted the big-headed attitudes that in past years have polarized Pem-Day so severely between the "jocks" and the non-athletes. Whether this year's peace was caused by the security of successful seasons or by a genuine acceptance of athletes by non-athletes, and vice-versa, can only be determined by time. If an era of genuine reconciliation has indeed come to Pem-Day, it can mean only continued success, both on the field and within the confines of the Upper School building.

The 1972-73 soccer season was successful by most standards but was disappointing to most of the players. The squad compiled a 10-4-2 record overall and finished third in the Metro Soccer League, but the team failed to accomplish either of its pre-season goals: the league championship which had just barely been lost the previous year and a return trip to St. Louis in post-season District play.

The year began well, with 24 juniors and seniors comprising the varsity squad, the team had more experienced depth than ever before. Led by co-captains Rob Busler and Tom Deacy, the team started strongly, winning three and tying one of their first five games. The team did not fare so well in the middle of the season, however, and its record slumped after losses to Rockhurst and Sedalia-Smith Cotton.

After the Christmas break, the booters came back strongly, defeating first Hogan, then Rockhurst, but then they were defeated in a key game with Hogan and the league title went to Smith-Cotton with Rockhurst taking second. In District competition, the team, crippled by injuries to three key starters, lost to Rockhurst 3-1 in the first round and was eliminated from the tournament.

The year, as reflected in the statistics, was very successful. Pem-Day placed six players on the three All-Metro teams; Rob Busler and Allen Townley were voted to the first team, Steve Stoops and Bill Hornbeck to the second team, and Jack Rees and Jorgen Karlsen received honorable mention.

The soccer team scored more goals (40) and allowed fewer (11) than any soccer team in Pem-Day's history. In addition, Steve Stoops was the league's leading scorer and set a new scoring record, with 10 goals on the season.

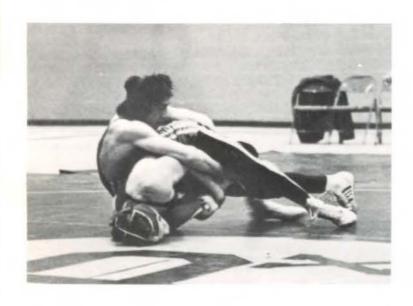

"The entire idea of amateur athletics must be brought back into proper perspective. They are for the participants. They are not for the professional teams, the alumni, or any pressure groups that want only to win at any cost. Too many innocent and dedicated people suffer because of that attitude."

The varsity wrestling team, coached by Pat White, had a fairly successful season, placing four wrestlers in the regional tournament, sending one to state, and compiling a 6-3 dual match record.

Paced by standouts Jim Thompson, Tom Willoughby, Ted Mac-Laughlin, Fred Bartlett, and Co-Captains Lou Pack and Charlie Bailey, the squad won their first five matches by wide margins. After one loss to O'Hara, the grapplers gave their finest performances of the year, scoring an upset victory over St. Louis Country Day and placing second in the Platte City Invitational meet.

The districts and regionals were disappointing to the Raiders. Hoping for a district win, the squad managed to take only one first place and two seconds, and finished fourth. Six wrestlers advanced to the regionals, but only Pack managed to secure himself a berth at state by finishing second. At the state tournament, Pack met early opposition from the eventual third and first place winners and could capture only fifth place.

Despite the loss of several seniors, the squad should be as strong as ever next year, and Coach White is looking forward to another successful season.

Cross-Country

For the first time in several years, Pem-Day fielded a varsity cross-country team. The program was organized by a group of students who wanted an alternative fall sport to football. Dennis All, Lower School math and science teacher, agreed to coach the team. The squad, if not long on talent, was a very close-knit, spirited group.

In Coach All's words, "Most of the school didn't take the crosscountry program seriously, but for those who did, it was a great individual experience. Considering the difficulty that we had in building a squad and the fact that it was our first year, we had a good season."

The program was a definite success for the participants in spite of the poor support that it received. In addition, the cross-country program should be a boost to the spring track program.

"With a four game winning streak to its credit, the 1973 Pem-Day baseball squad has had a very bright start to its season in winning six out of the squad's first nine contests . . . Coach Peter Kritzer has put together one of the most promising squads in recent Pem-Day history . . . "

- The HILLTOP, April 13, 1973

The 1973 Raider baseball team departed from the long-standing Pem-Day tradition of losing baseball seasons. Not only did they have a winning season, 16-9 overall, but then went on to win districts, regionals, and state.

Competing exclusively against teams from larger schools, the Raiders fashioned a very respectable 8-9 record in the Border League. Then, much to everyone's surprise, the baseballers reeled off eight straight victories in district, regional, and state tournament play, finally defeating Illmo-Scott City in the last round of the State Baseball Tournament to capture Pem-Day's first state championship in any sport since 1957.

Four players were named to the first team of the Border League All-Star list; Bob Flappan, Al Golad, Jim Flappan, and Don Petrie. In addition, five players were honored with spots on the All-State squads. Al Golad was named to the first team, Matt Dennis and Jim Flappan were named to the second team, and Bob Flappan and Don Petrie were named to the honorable mention list.

With almost the exact same squad returning that had won conferences and district titles in 1972, the 1973 track squad was expected to be good, and it was.

During the regular season competition, the team captured all of the meets that it entered, except for the Knights of Columbus Relays, which were lost primarily because the state champion half-mile relay team was competing in the Kansas University Relays on the same day.

In post-season competition, the Raiders went on to take the Catholic-Prep Conference Championship, the District Title, and second place in the State Track Meet, missing first by only two points.

Outstanding contributions to the team were made by the half-mile relay team (Hank Deaver, Jamie Allain, Bill Hornbuckle, and Chris Wetherill) and triple-jumper, Gib Keller, both taking first in the State Track Meet.

Tennis

Under the strong leadership of coach Hill Hughes, the varsity tennis team had a very successful season, losing only two of nine regular season contests. Six of these seven victories were 9-0 sweeps, and in one of the losses the Raiders actually won more sets than their opponents did in the 4-5 decision.

The racketmen then went on to win Pem-Day's sixth straight District Title on the strength of their performance in the doubles competition. The Raiders had won the tournament even before the finals had started, since both of the Raiders doubles entries made it into the finals, and hence into the state tournament. For the record, Mike Rees and Jim Zarr defeated Tom Rieger and Brad Smith in the district finals 6-1, 6-3.

In the State Tennis Tournament, Rees' and Zarr's second place doubles finish was good enough to earn Pem-Day a third place finish. Their only loss was to the team of Keith Hickey and Steve Bennet of Springfield, in a very disputed 6-3, 6-4 match.

Most of the team attributed their success to Coach Hughes' on-thecourt guidance and his ability to mold the six individuals into a team. With only two seniors leaving the team, the prospects for the future look very bright.

Although not displaying the abundance of talent and success of the other three spring sports, the 1973 golf squad did exhibit a willingness to work and a dedication to the sport which eventually earned them a fine dual match record and very respectable finishes in tournament play. At the season's close, the golfers held an 8-3-1 match record, and had finished in at least the top half of the three tournaments in which they had played.

The Raiders opened the year by dropping a dual match against Center, but then bounced back to win their next three contests in a row.

In their next outings, the squad forged victories over Center, Miege, and Raytown, while dropping close matches to St. Pius and Van Horn and tying Rockhurst. In addition, Pem-Day downed a tough Codasco squad in St. Louis. In tournament play the team was somewhat more disappointing. Pem-Day took second in the Shawnee Mission Northwest tourney, but finished ninth in the Shawnee Mission Invitational. The Raiders missed becoming the fourth Pem-Day spring team to go to state by finishing a disappointing ninth in the rain-delayed Districts.

The standout on the team was senior Rob Busler, whose excellent play all year culminated with a fine 70 in St. Louis. Joining Busler this year were seniors Bill Lyons, and Gordon Atkinson, juniors Jim MacLaughlin, Joel Eisemann, and Joe Casper, sophomores Jim Quinn and David Zimmer, and freshman John Shelden.

Varsity golf coach Pat White was generally pleased by the accomplishments of this year's squad. Although this was not the most successful of White's teams, he stated that the 1973 golf team was the most cooperative, dedicated, and hard-working team that he had ever coached.

Pem-Day's Science Fair this year was the most successful ever. Thirty boys won first place ribbons in the Pem-Day fair, and fifty went on to enter their exhibits in the Kansas City Science Fair. Of these, twenty-one won First Place Grand Awards, four won Third Place Grand Awards, and seven received special awards.

Senior David Hunter won a First Place Grand Award and special awards from the Air Force and the Kansas City Star for his project, "Fourier Waveform Analysis." Hunter was the first Pem-Day senior to enter the competition.

In addition, teacher Barry White won a special award from the Sigma Xi Club of UMKC in recognition of his outstanding contributions to science instruction.

Ryan and Ballou

The men responsible for the operation of the Lower and Middle Schools successfully survived another hectic year overseeing the curriculums, calming the faculty, and counseling the students of the Lower and Middle Schools.

As Principal of the Lower School, Robert Ballou is responsible for providing leadership for the younger boys at Pem-Day. Ballou combines a rare professional touch with a genuine interest in each boy to see that each lower schooler receives as much from his early education as possible.

James Ryan has been Principal of the Middle School for eight years, and his experience has proved to be invaluable in dealing with the many problems that face him every day. Responsible for all extracurricular activities in the Middle School as well as the curriculum and the faculty, Ryan has proven himself to be a man of complete dedication to his job.

Under the dedicated leadership of these two men, Pem-Day boys have received valuable preparation for their higher education for years. Next year, the Lower School will be under the guidance of Barry White, as Ballou is completing his stay at Pem-Day this year. He is moving to New Haven, Connecticut, to continue his teaching career.

The students lived outside and used their surroundings to provide the subject matter for their studies. According to instructor Barry White, the school was an "educational program of nature, in nature."

Students investigated map making, pond life, natural history, creative writing, fossils, and drama. They also spent one day touring a dairy farm.

Between classes, the sixth graders fished, paddled canoes, or just wandered around the wooded sections of the camp. At night, they watched films and held informal campfire discussions.

The fifth grade participated in a similar three-day program at Allendale in the spring, which was also highly successful.

". . . the senate can make all the rules it wants to; but if the students don't cooperate as a whole, then it won't work at all. It's my feeling that, usually, two or three students are very sincere, while the other students just don't care. "To be respected we have to respect ourselves. To have a good idea of who we are and where we are going and what's really important to us. What do we believe in? What do we think is right? I maintain that unless we have answered these questions for ourselves, however tentative these answers may be, and unless we make an honest effort to live up to our highest expectations, we will not really be able to respect ourselves, others will not be able to respect us, and real friendship will be impossible.

If Pem-Day has helped you answer some of these questions for yourself and has shown you examples of open, honest, and caring human beings and perhaps even allowed you the privilege of real friendship, then your experience here has indeed been worthwhile."

- Marvin Van Leeuwen

"How should the Pem-Day boy dress? You must remember that you have an image to keep up. Blue jeans are just about the only way to go in the pants department. They give you the unique look of the intellectual liberal and make you practically indistinguishable from any other high school student in the country. A controversial novel carried conspicuously in the back pocket is a nice touch. Your hair is an equally important part of the image, and it should fall recklessly over your ears and just below the collar. Not too long, because that would make you a freak; and not too short, because that would make you a straight, which, in some circles, is considered even worse. Remember that you are an individual and should look just like everybody else."

- David Owen

Once upon a time (May 24, 1973) the Class of 1973 decided to hold a ditch day. The Seniors made elaborate and secret preparations, and successfully made their way to Lake Lotawana for a day of fun and frolic. Alas, the fates (and Mr. Boocock) declared that ditch day was not to be, and in tribute to that day of half-success, we offer this song:

The Boo*

The Boo, he leads a jolly life; He's fought with seniors all his life. He thinks he must enforce his rules, To get the seniors back in school.

And when, the Boo can't get things done, He sends Marv out to spoil our fun. Out to the lake he found his way, And boy did he sure spoil our day.

But we, had bought ourselves some beer, And we just couldn't bring it here. And so we guzzled it like fools, And then we came right back to school.

But one o'clock rolled round too fast; By then, the seniors were all gassed. And at assembly they were rude, And boy did that spoil Roger's mood.

So when, you next pull off a ditch, You know, that Boocock he will bitch. He'll send Marv out so very quick, That it will almost make you sick.

^{*}sung to the tune of the Yale Glee Club song, "The Pope." Semi-original lyrics by Gordon Atkinson, Steve Gittings, and Rich Wiles.

YOUR HUNT IS OVER

A Fox is sleek. It's a smart sports sedan with excellent performance and acceleration in its class, along with interior roominess and lots of luggage space.

It maneuvers nimbly and easily with rackand-pinion steering. Stops in its tracks with the help of radial tires and power-front disc brakes. And doesn't eat much, getting you over 20 miles to the gallon.

It's a creature of comfort, complete with individual reclining front seats. Flow-through ventilation. Plush carpeting. And lots, lots more.

So if you're hunting for sports car precision and sedan comfort, visit our showroom. The Fox is waiting for you to put it through its paces.

The 1973 RAIDER was conceived in optimism, developed in pain, and finally delivered into the world in an atmosphere of frustration, bitterness, disappointment, and relief. After a brief flurry of work and planning early in the year, the RAIDER editors settled down to a long winter vacation. Work piled up; picture taking was behind, we had no copy, the ads were unfinished. Finally, about the end of April, the RAIDER got off the ground. Class pictures were taken, copy was written, and a cover was finally decided upon. However, the RAIDER ran out of time. Through an enormous amount of work by three editors, the book was half completed by the June 16 final deadline. Then disaster struck; both RAIDER photographers and the business manager left the country, reducing the working staff to a total of one (sometimes two or three). I soon found myself spending five and six nights each week trying to put together a book that would be worth reading. As I watched the days slip by rapidly and the number of completed pages grow at an agonizingly slow rate, my attitude vacillated between despair and anger, both at myself and at my staff for procrastinating as long as we did.

At this point I received help from an unexpected source. Although I lacked a staff, I found that I had friends who were willing to lend me a hand. With the invaluable help of many people, but especially Jamie Barickman, Peggy Bunting, Betsy Shaver, Lindsay Larrabee, and Carl Edwards, the remainder of the book was finished within two weeks.

Since I will be gone when Jim Smith returns from Chile, I would like to leave him with these words: Surround yourself with a staff chosen not necessarily because of talent, but because of dedication. Deadlines have always been treated as jokes by RAIDER staffs, but I have learned the hard way that it is absolutely necessary that the deadlines you set up be followed. Being the Editor of the RAIDER is a dirty, thankless job; you'll receive none of the recognition or influence that goes with the HILLTOP'S top spots. Teachers will gripe at you for interrupting class to take class pictures, coaches will accuse you of deliberately leaving out their seventh grade team for arbitrary reasons, and your staff will cop out on you as soon as the summer begins. Good luck Jim, you'll need it.

As Editor of the 1973 RAIDER, I take full responsibility for everything that appears in this yearbook. I feel strongly that it is a book worth reading; a lot has gone into it. As you read this RAIDER, keep in mind that it contains history, but its outlook is toward the future. Maybe you'll learn something.

Good luck next year,

Editor-in-Chief, 1973 RAIDER
