The road of life . . . It seems like a new adventure awaits us around every bend . . . But how many of us wonder where the road will lead?

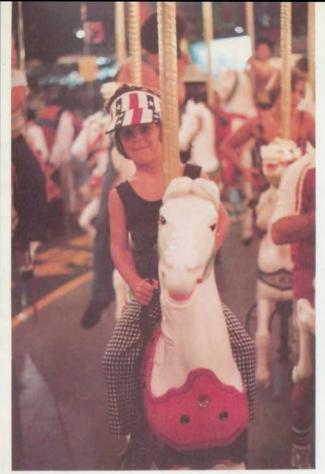

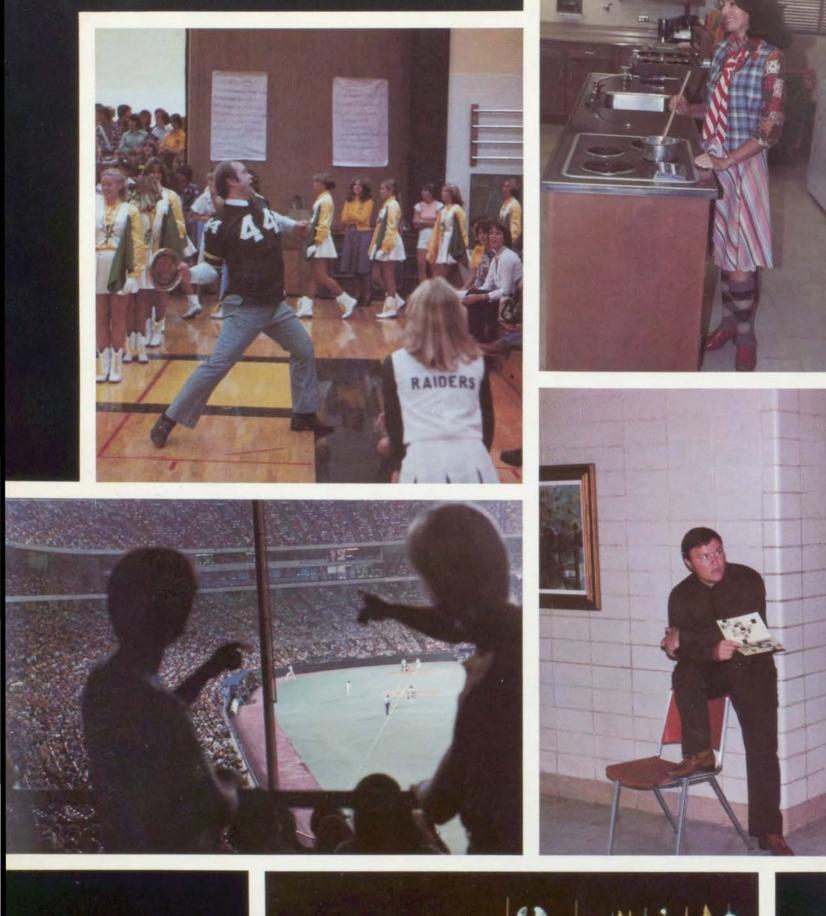

As little kids we dreamed of being knights and princesses, living in a faraway castle and having all of our cares and worries locked outside the palace yard. It made us happy . . . for a while.

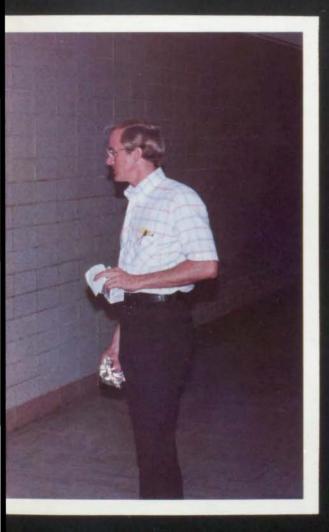

As the novelty of our fantasy wore off, our thoughts slowly turned to achievement. To have someone say "Hey, you've done great!"

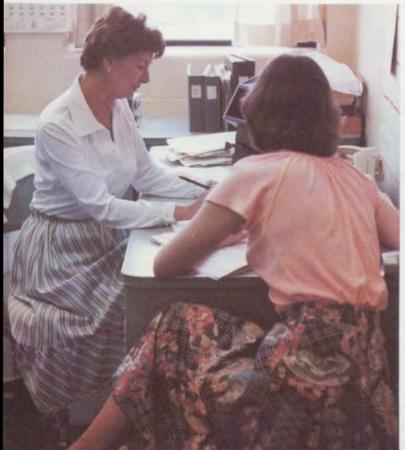

"Keep up the good work!" spurred us on to bigger and better things and did keep us going. While praise from others is still often sought, our own self-satisfaction has suddenly become most important in our lives. The decision making that was once someone else's duty has now been placed on our own shoulders.

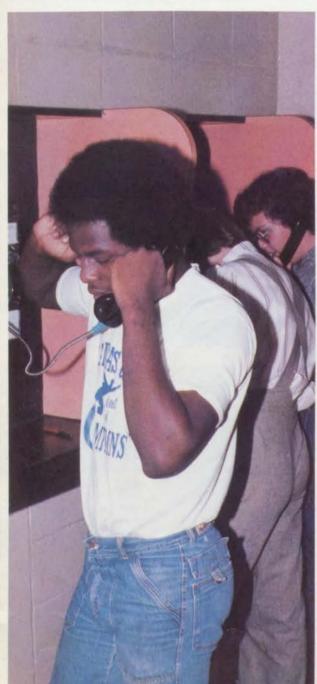

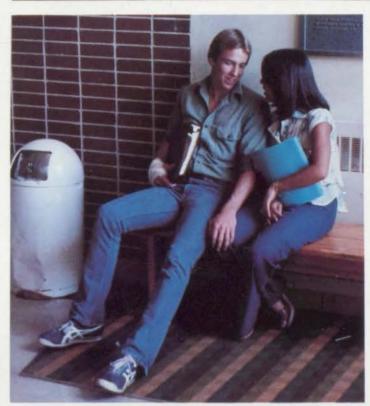

Although it is sometimes frightening to realize the choice is ours and we must make it by ourselves, other times the feeling of total independence is too exciting to be fearful.

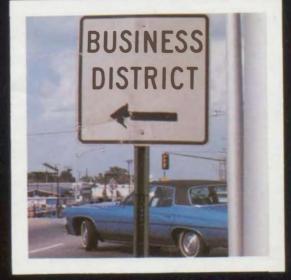

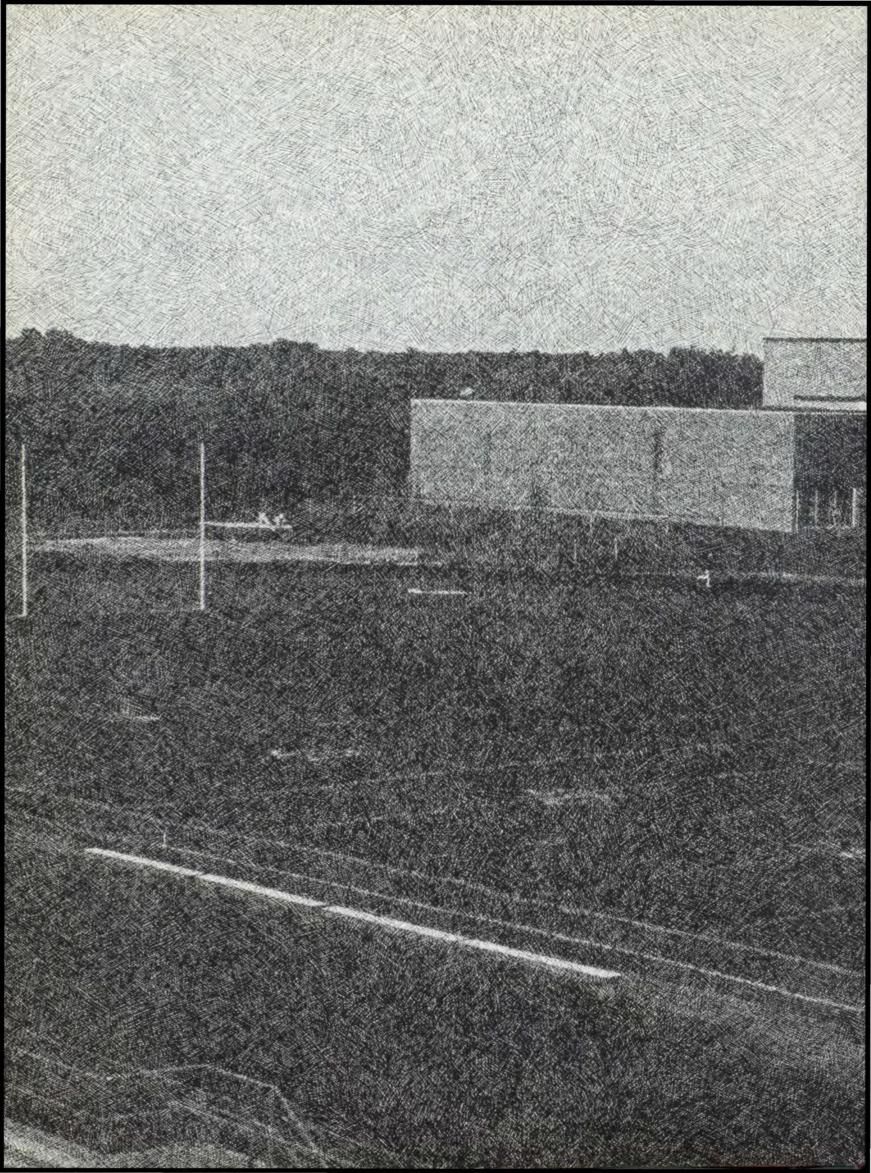

Looking at the years ahead, many crossroads come into view on the horizon. Which one we choose and where it will lead depends mainly on knowing what we want, realizing our capabilities and then proceeding toward that ideal.

Like a never ending road, life goes on, and our high school years are only a minute step along the way. Some of us seem to dash through these years too quickly, never taking the time to enjoy each day as it passes by. Others lope along in an apathetic manner, letting each day come and go as it pleases and not particularily caring what the next one may bring.

The days of Friday hight football games, Homecoming and Sweetheart dances, weekend cruising and undemanding love lives won't be here much longer.

Soon, we will all go on our own separate roads, and our daily committments will multiply with each new adventure we try.

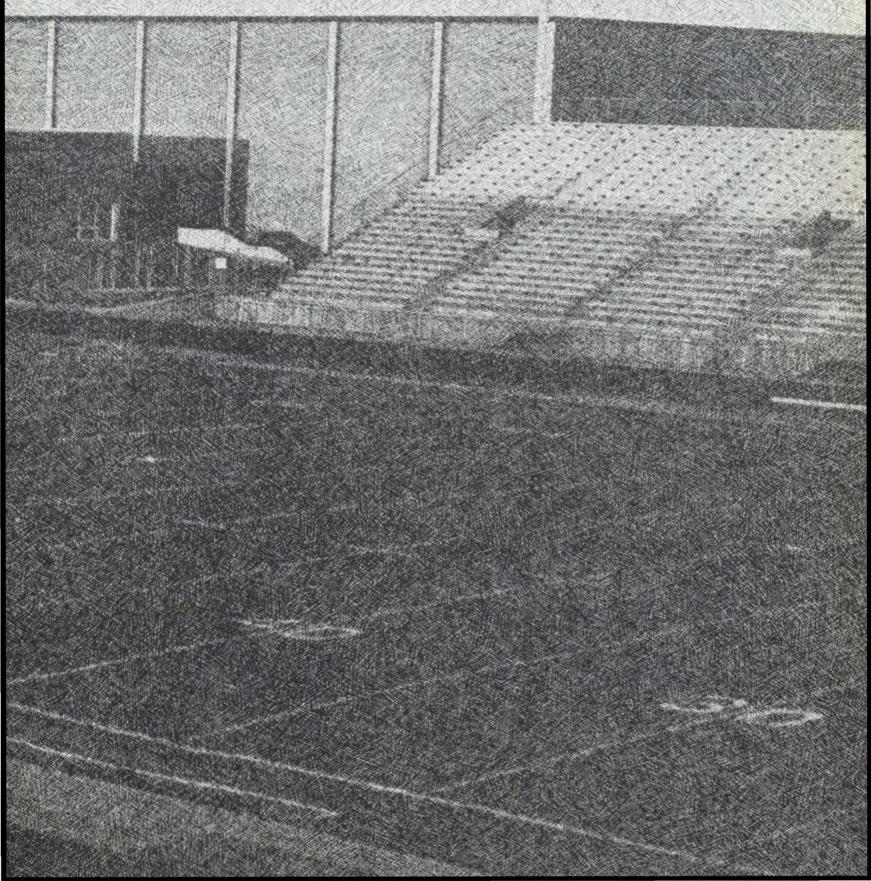

Whether to get married, go to college, be a professional or a skilled laboror, have kids, buy a car, rent or buy a house are all decisions that will confront us shortly.

Those of us who made goals for the future early in high school, will probably know exactly which road we should take.

But many of us will run in circles: searching for what we want and not knowing where to look for it.

It is at this point where we must get on the right track and push for the ultimate finish line-success.

Yeah, our high school days are only a minute step along the road of life, but it is in these few years that we mature to the point where we can handle what lies ahead—the bumps, curves, tunnels and even the forks we might find in our road.

As we grow, friends are made and lost, and memories of good times often fade like newsprint of a page. But even though those pages become somewhat worn, we'll always remember our high school prom, the excitement of a bonfire before a challenging football game, and all the things we did just for fun. It was those type of things that made our high school days all worthwhile.

Dan Ray rehearses his original oratory.

Raiders want perfection

"Ready . . . O.K.!" And they were off, going in different directions, but all for the same purpose . . . to be the best. But in order to be recognized as the best, those who participated in clinics over the summer had to be extraordinary in the judges' eyes.

Looking as though they would be more excited at a funeral, judges at the National Forensics Tournament gazed at Dan Ray, senior, with a passive expression as he delivered his impromptu speech on justice. Dan did not place at the tournament, but he was the only Raider to go there, which is an accomplishment in itself.

Also in the line of achievement, Drill Teamers practiced and performed at a summer clinic, placing first in the three areas of competition: pom-pon routines, marching and dance. Adding to the team's awards, Jane Westhues won the honor of Most Outstanding Girl. Such excellence does have its disadvantages though, as muscles were massaged twice daily with Ben-Gay, which was dubbed "Pacesetters' Perfume."

In addition to the clinic, some Drill Team members joined the band and choir on their trip to Europe. With intentions of performing and sightseeing, the group traveled to Paris, London, Austria and Germany. When asked what was most memorable about the trip, Nancy Ives, senior band member, commented, "It rained every day except one while we were there, and when we visited London it was Gay Liberation Week."

We always party hearty

Each time a school week ended the excitement and glitter of a weekend began. Lights, music and partying seemed to constantly prevail, as we tried not to waste a second of those precious Friday and Saturday nights that seemed so few and far between. During football and basketball season, one of those weekend nights was usually spent supporting the team and afterwards the nearest party, pizza joint or McDonalds. Those nights we weren't being rowdy spectators were spent in a variety of ways. Some took this opportunity to be with that special someone at a movie, expensive restaurant or just a romantic evening at home, while others partied in a crowd. Such spots as Pogos, Fantasies, and The Merry Go-Round, greeted many of us every weekend as we boogied down to the disco beat.

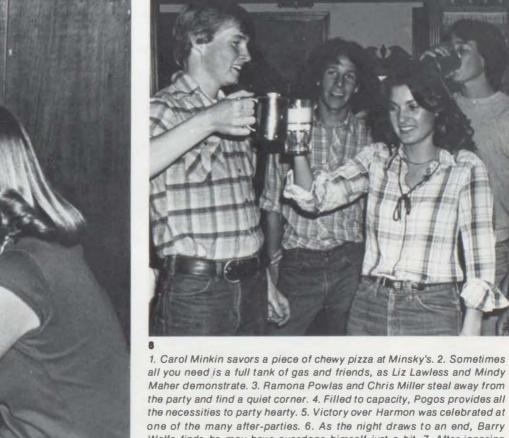

Our weekends were definitely a major part of our high school lives. They helped keep us all just a little bit crazy, for it was through our social life that we let go and forgot the pressures we constantly faced during the school week. We lived every minute to the fullest as the crowds cheered, the music blared and the nights came alive.

owner Pantalone, sat coveting his gold pieces, a coin accidentally dropped to the floor. Pantalone leaned forward and asked a spectator, "Would you get that for me? Can't removing a painful thorn from his find it? Well, O.K."

The play Androcles and the Llon is written in the style of Commedia dell'Arte, which is a style that involves the audience as well as the actors.

Among the eleven member cast, five clowns who are called zannis, sat around the stage, which helped to set a casual mood. The task of zannis was to involve the audience

As John Matthews, the slave with the action and to serve as props during the play.

> Androcles and the Llon centers around the friendship of a runaway slave and a lion who needs his help paw. In return for this favor, the lion does not harm Androcles when they meet again in an arena where slaves are to be punished for running away.

> Helping set the mood and focusing on specific characters, the new lighting system in the Little Theater was well worth the $5,000 investment according to Mr. Gerald Snider, director of the play and sole drama instructor of the theater department.

Tradition sits on the shelf

Tradition has always been the backbone of homecoming, yet the thirteenth annual ceremony seemed destined to be different. The homecoming game was on Friday the thirteenth, and even at half-time the score was 13-0, our favor.

Different it was. After the installation of the new track, the use of sleek convertibles to carry the royal passengers was deleted. In their place stood a floral and military arch through which the winners passed to their thrones.

The week preceeding this event also broke tradition as StuCo sponsered a spirit week. For five days crazy hats, college t-shirts, overalls, western outfits, Steve Martin look-alikes, and a mass of green and gold predominated in the halls. With the spirit running high, South then entered into battle against SM West.

Slowly the stadium crowd diminished from a roar to a low buzz as John Pilkington, master of ceremonies, announced the first royal couple, Patty Carlson and Phil Saunders. The cheers and tears diminished quickly as anticipation mounted for the announcement of Stacey Risser and Bob Rafferty as first attendents, and then finally Cindy Reese and Les Parrette as the 1978 Homecoming Queen and King. Certainly the superstitions of the evening had vanished.

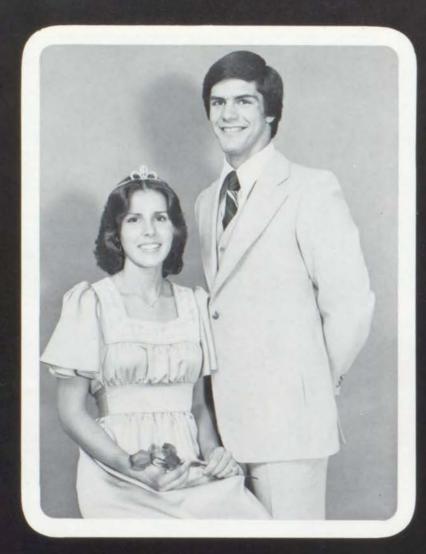

1. Dana Tait, John Breeden, Laurie Flaig, and Rick Rojek enter into a converted cafeteria that coincides with the Homecoming theme song, Cherish. 2. With tears of happiness, Cindy Reese accepts her bouquet and tiara from Leslie Gampper, 1977 Homecoming Queen. 3. David Henzlik and Nicki Hoffman clink glasses in a toast to the evening. 4. King candidates: Russ Hammond, Dan Middleton, Dayne Dartez, Phil Saunders, Les Parrette, Bob Ratterty, Fred Streck, Barry Dull, Brook Redd. Queen candidates: Anne Ricci, Sue Scardino, Jane Rasmussen, Patty Carlson, Cindy Reese, Stacey Risser, Kala Ketchum and Pam Stupas. Not pictured, Stacey Varner. 5. # Leawood Club hosts ROTC

Glamour and elegance abounded at the 11th annual NJROTC Ball held at Leawood Country Club Saturday, February 10. The evening began at 6:30 with a five course sit-down dinner with the NJROTC members and their dates sitting with their own school or members of different schools. The Ball was arranged by the NJROTC Company from SM Northwest and attended by SM West, SM East, SM North and South.

Because the band, The Counselors, was so wellreceived last year, they agreed to perform again for this year's NJROTC dance and remained just as heralded according to several students.

10:00 p.m. marked the highlight of the evening. At that time, an NJROTC queen from each school was chosen. Mellssa Graham reigned as the queen who would represent the Raiders throughout 1979.

Principals from each school were invited, as were Dr. and Mrs. Arzell Ball and Dr. and Mrs. Ollie Vereen.

1. Jeff Gazlay and Estella Montoya enjoy the fast beat of a current song played by the Counselors. 2. Karen Carle and Randy Dalton laugh at a comment made during the last course of dinner. 3. Mr. Charles Nichols and his wife Janet do the latest disco steps. 4. Melissa Graham, escorted by Mike Graham, walks through the traditional sword arch to receive her crown as queen. 5. The Counselors perform their version of "Dust in the Wind." 6. All NJROTC members and their dates are formally introduced to the commanders of each school company and their wives. 7. Elise Faber reigns as Anchorette Queen while Liz Drakenberg holds the position of princess.

'What I Did For Love' theme makes Sweetheart special

The game was close and the air was tense as nine girls, dressed in vellow, promenaded through white and yellow flag teamers and drill teamers. Dave Mayberry emceed the evening. To the tune of "What I Did For Love," tension mounted as the moment came to announce the 1979 Sweetheart Queen. As each winner was announced, one of the three escorts in white tuxedos led the girls to the stage gym decorated with a rainbow and the ever-wishful pot of gold. Lori Phillips was named second attendant with Carla Johnson reigning as first attendant. The 1978 Sweetheart Queen, Merl Kay Burns, relinguished her crown to Beth Capps.

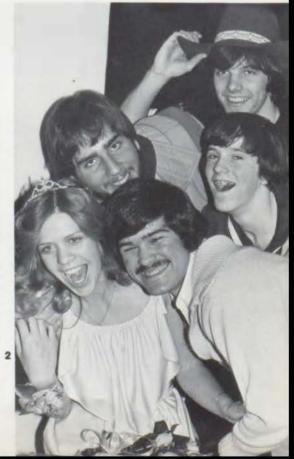

Saturday night, February 11, the cafeteria was transformed into a Valentine dance floor. The room "... was really pretty with white trees and Valentines on the walls." As each couple entered the dance, they walked over a bridge. At 9:30 the coronation began with the Sweetheart girls and their dates entering the dance floor via the bridge. The three winners were traditionally crowned by their 1978 counter-parts. The dance continued with Spectrum performing.

One must also consider the work the Pep Club officers did to prepare for Sweetheart. More than two months before anyone else had begun to think about Sweetheart, Allyson Beardsley began to gather the parts to make Sweetheart a meaningful event. She chose its theme, colors, escorts and even helped with the floor plan for Drill Team and Flag Team. The things no one thinks of, Allyson took care of. The tiny pillows the crowns were placed upon were sewn by her, and she also wrote to the 1978 Queen and her attendants requesting their participation in the ceremony.

Camelot relives age of chivalry

"It's May, it's May, the lusty month of May, that lovely month when everyone goes blissfully astray," proclaims Wendy Godfrey, who portrays the female lead as Queen Guenevere. The Musical Camelot is a backward travel in time to the age of chivalry and magic. Camelot centers around the characters of King Arthur, Queen Guenevere, the sorcerer and Arthur's teacher Merlin, the evil Mordred, Morgan Le Fay and the Knights of the Round Table.

Hard work and many hours of practice were put into Camelot, beginning in January with tryouts for the cast and crews and ending with the performances on February 15,16 and 17. Mr. Gerald, Snider directed the play, with Miss Sharon Wiber designing and supervising the choreography and Miss Marie Lerner leading vocals.

Camelot opens with King Arthur telling his future wife, Guenevere, his wish to be the best and wisest king in history. The play ends with Guenevere and Lancelot duLuc, the most gallant Knight of the Round Table, falling in love and the dramatic consequences it brings about.

The story of Camelot was hard for those of us who saw it to indentify with, since the age of kings, magic and gallantry are no longer a part of society. Still, Camelot provided enchanting entertainment, full of royal fantasy.

1. Guenevere and Lancelot du Luc share stolen moments in the Queen's bedchamber. 2. Morgan Le Fay makes a dramatic entrace into the enchanted forest. 3. Queen Guenevere and King Arthur do a lively dance with the commoners. 4. King Arthur's boyhood teacher Merlin vocalizes his fears that he might have forgotten to tell Arthur a thing or two after his powers are taken away. 5. King Arthur, Queen Guenevere and King Pellinore intently watch the joust between Sir Lionel and Lancelot du Luc. 6. Mordred, Arthur's illegitimate son, listens for his Aunt Morgan Le Fay. 7. King Arthur raises his sword in triumph knowing that Camelot will live on.

Crews create romance

With illusions of enchantment and royal pagentry, Camelot was presented in all its regal splendor on February 15,16 and 17. Yet, as with any show, none of the scenery, costumes, sound, lights or programs would have materialized if it had not been for the deeply concentrated efforts of many students.

Tucker Johnston, designer and creator of the set, spent many a late night with his crew in the auditorium painting and hammering, as did lighting director, Brlan Lynch and crew, otherwise known as the Knight Lights. While the technical aspects of the show were being taken care of, Beth Stooke, Laurle Samuelson and committee took care of the artistic department, putting together a very professional program.

Before the audience could behold these wonders though, they needed to be made aware of Camelot's very existence. Angle Petsche, in charge of publicity, contacted publications and radio stations, spreading the word of opening night every way possible.

Not one crew stopped work until closing night when the final curtain fell. There is always a tremendous amount of work and money that goes into every musical and Camelot was certainly no exception.

1. Attired in Camelot T-shirts, members of the cast relax around the piano practicing "If Ever I Would Leave You." 2. Sarah Eisele has the all-important role of lighting the stage. If she misses a cue, one is lost in darkness. 3. Complete with saws, hammers and nails, the crew takes a break during the creation of the set, to crucity Tucker Johnston. 4. Tucker Johnston steps back to admire the castle he created for Camelot. 5. Mr. Bruce Williams, the music director, conducts The Moat during a performance. 6. Kell Peterson and Kevin Christoffersen nail and staple chicken wire to form the trees of Camelot. 7. During the morning of February 13, cuttings of Camelot were viewed by the school with Steve Adams introducing members of the cast.

Heritage honors top six seniors and her court for Sweetheart and presenting the musical Camelot, the 1978-1979 Yearbook staff busied itself with singling out 20 candidates of its own, from among more than 700 seniors, to compete for positions as Heritage royalty members.

Heritage Royalty is unique at South, not because we are the only school which recognizes outstanding achievers, but because it is virtually unknown. "So few students are aware of the qualifications it takes to be nominated," said one yearbook staff member, "that it lessens what is a great honor."

The qualifications were simple ... at least to describe. A prospective

In the midst of choosing a queen candidate must have been involved in at least three major activity area (ie, athletics, scholorship, fine arts, etc.) and an achiever in each of them. Unfortunately though, only about 90 seniors could actually meet these requirements, since most found it difficult to excell in three different areas.

Two Heritage staff members had the difficult job of weeding through each senior summary, cutting off names and quotations and assigning numbers to the top 40. Then the remaining juniors on the staff each voted individually on the 20; 10 guys and 10 girls. Altogether, the process took more than two weeks, the staff felt it was worth it.

Raider spirit alive again

On the Friday of our first football game, it was announced that there would be an assembly. Grumbling because we had to sit by homerooms, we trudged down to the gym expecting to be bored. Yet before the pep band could finish the last bars of Play that Funky Music, we found ourselves clapping, stomping and screaming for the blood of our first opponent.

We had acquired organization that led to unique skits, cheers, music and events, and did away with the always tedious introducing of teams and coaches.

For instance, when we saw the mothers of the Homecoming king candidates walk out to plant a kiss

On the Friday of our first football on their blindfolded sons, we became part of a hilarious conspiracy. Or how about when all the administrators paraded out on the floor bedecked in football jerseys to we recting to be bored. Yet > Drill Team performed as always, but for the first time, their counterparts, Flag Team, found themselves performing in the assembly limelight. However, the Raiderette gun salute became a thing of the past, removing the temptation to throw pennies.

> It just did not seem to matter whether we were cheering our teams to victory or cheering with lighters held high at the MornIngstar assembly, we did it all with zeal.

1. Twin football players Tim and Todd Parsons are put on the spot by the theater group as they play eligible bachelors number two during the "Mating Game." Steve Grimm plays half of the eligible bachelors number one duo. 2. During a skit introducing Homecoming candidates, Les Parrette receives a kiss from his stand-in mother, vice principal Mrs. Jo Carroll. 3. Before Mr. Gerald Snider won the coveted title of Teacher Turkey, enthusiastic students campaigned in his behalf. 4. Greg Leech, bass guitarist for the recording group Morningstar, performs in the auditorium during a special assembly on Nov. 20. 5. Supported by the yell leaders, the cheerleaders inspire spirit in the audience. 6. Dr. David Pendleton urges students to yell "H" in their part of the F-I-G-H-T chant.

Romans come wrapped

Toga! Toga! Toga! No! It's not scenes from National Lampoon's movie Animal House. It was the Senior Class Toga Party held in late October. Admission was the price of a ticket and your own creation of a Roman toga. Most students came wrapped in white sheets, but a few went to the extreme of flowered and colored togas. (The Romans would not have allowed that.) Laurels were adorned upon many heads as were sandals upon almost everyone's feet. Three rather unusual contests were held. Jello snarfing-where one must manage to get the jello on his plate in his mouth in one slurp (snarf)-proved interesting especially in the area of sound effects. The dance contest had many watchers, but few participators. When asked why she did not enter, one girl replied, "I was afraid my toga would fall off." No wonder disco dancing was not a favorite among the Romans. The highlight of the party came when the official Toga Fashion Show began. Wearing what appeared to be a Persian rug and a helmet with wings, Chris Peck walked away with a record album as his prize. Lorl Smltka won in the ladies division dressed in a white sheet with a gold banner.

According to several students, Les Parrette did an excellent job as disc jockey and also kept the party rolling with his odd, but funny jokes and comments.

1. Bob Rafferty and Les Parrette hope to boost the school spirit for the Toga Party as they help Mr. Charles Nichols read the morning announcements. 2. The young, sleek Roman gods pose for the first official Toga Party. They are, FRONT ROW: Barry Dull, Blake Smith and Marc Jaben. BACK ROW: Bob Rafferty, Scott Winkleman, Fred Streck, Steve Francis, Brook Redd and Carl Frenkel. 3. The ink flows as Chris Peck creates a poster for the Toga Party. 4. With Les Parrette as the backup, Fred Streck and Bob Rafferty, minus a guitar, belt out Steely Dan's Big Black Cow as they take time out for a break while decorating the cafeteria for the upcoming party. 5. Heil Hitler . . . er Marc Jaben. 6. Somehow, Bob Alexander does not look authentic in his toga as he dances with Cindy Bower. 7. Unusual sound effects result as Les Parrette holds the microphone for Steve Francis as he wins the jello-snarting contest.

1. Kansas made history as Ms. Nancy Landon Kassebaum successfully defeated her opponent, Bill Roy, to become the first woman Senator from Kansas. 2. With a flash of his well-known smile, President Jimmy Carter applauds the success of the Camp David talks on Sept. 17, as Evgyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin embrace in international friendship. 3. Democrat John Carlin campaigns his way across Republican Kansas, leaving the incumbant governor, Robert Bennett, far outside the winner's circle. 4. A vat of cyanide and Kool-aid produced this scene of grisly death in November, shocking the United States and revealing the horror story behind Rev. Jim Jones and his some 900 followers in Guyana. (Pool picture by Frank Johnson of the Washington Post via Wide World Photos) 5. The Double Eagle II sails serenely over the French coast in August, as Maxie Anderson, Ben Abruzzo and Larry Newman continue on the first successful trans-Atlantic balloon trip. 6. After 55 days, the body of Italian Premier Aldo Moro was found, shot numerous times by the terrorist Red Brigades as protest to the government's refusal to free thirteen imprisoned terrorists. 7. In a little over one month, the world stopped twice to watch for the white smoke over St. Peter's Basilica. The final signal broke a 400 year tradition of Italian popes, and gave the world Pope John Paul II of Poland. 8. Shoveling driveways and walks seemed a fruitless task, as the mass of whiteness immobilized our "modern" society.

Year retold forever

As summer drew to a close, President Jimmy Carter, Eygptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel met in upmost secrecy for thirteen days to emerge with two of the most historic documents ever conceived in the name of peace. However, peace did not reign in Iran as revolutionaries began a political takeover that resulted in the hurried departure of the Shah. While the Iranians shouted, "Yankee go home," China opened her doors and welcomed U.S. technology and friendship.

Back home in Kansas, Governor Robert Bennett lost to John Carlin and Nancy Landon Kassebaum became the first woman elected to the Senate. Kansas City lost to Detroit in its bid for the Republican convention site, and digging the car out of the driveway seemed as natural then as draining one's house or car of flood water the year before.

Perhaps one of the most earthshaking events of the year was the death of Pope Paul VII and 33 days later, that of his successor, Pope John Paul I. Long standing traditions of age and nationality were broken as Pope John Paul II, 58, was brought from Poland to serve as pontiff. We also said farewell to Nelson Rockefeller, Golda Meir, Edgar Bergen, Norman Rockwell and Conrad Hilton. Yet, for every death there is a birth, as England's Louise Brown, the world's first test tube baby proved. Unfortunately, as the world watched this miraculous birth, it also witnessed horrible scenes of suicide and murder in Jonestown, Guyana.

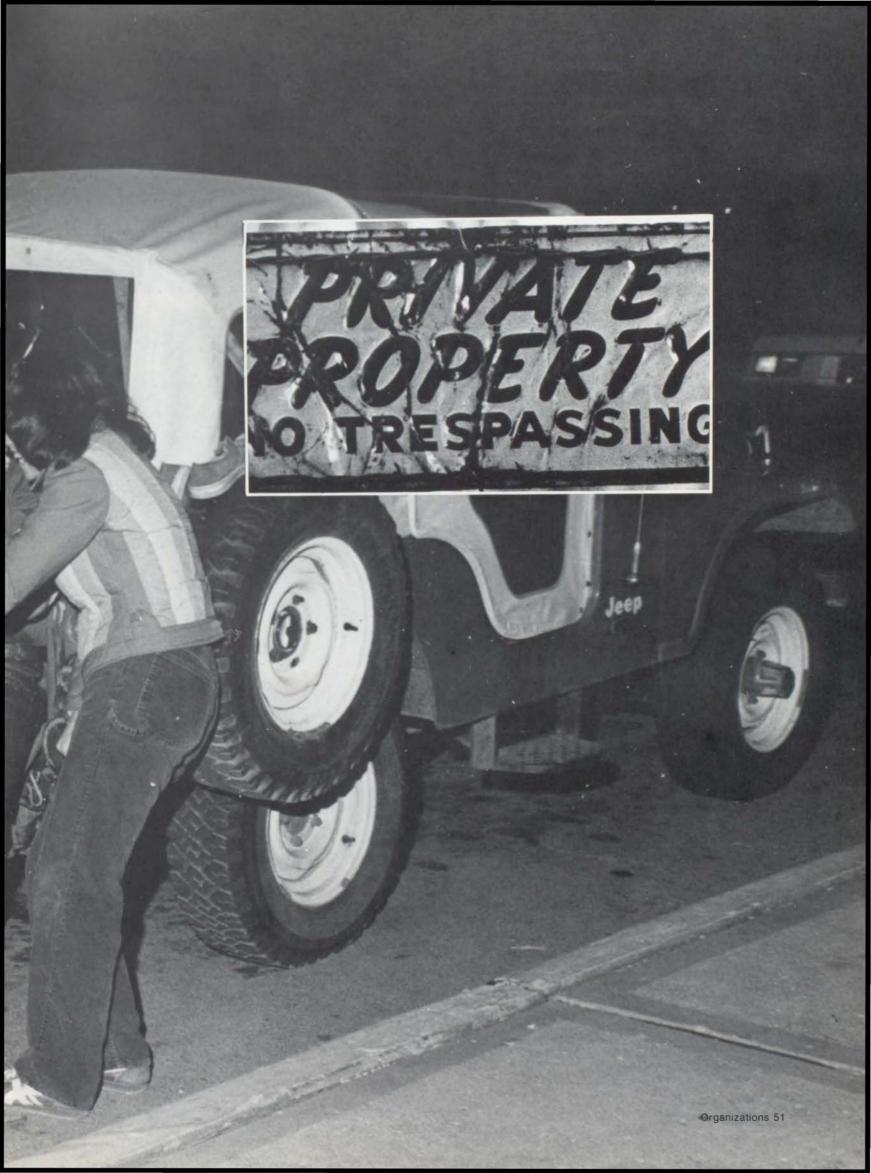

Returning to the national scene, the Supreme Court ruled in the Bakke decision on reverse discrimination, and President Carter introduced the slogan, New Foundation, in his State of the Union address. The sports world saw Muhammed All regain his title from Leon Spinks, Ohio State football coach, Woody Hayes, fired and Pittsburgh win the Super Bowl.

In entertainment, the movie Grease grossed $100 million and National Lampoon's Animal House became the comedy hit of the season. Our music stayed disco with the top hit, Shadow Dancing, and we accepted inflation when we willingly paid $1 to curb Big Mac attacks.

The need to belong casts a dark shadow on most of us as we get older. During high school, family ties tend to be loosened as we try to make it on our own. But this separation makes it even more important for every teen to belong somewhere. School groups and organizations gave that temporary security to anyone who asked for it. From the husky jock to the super brain, there was always a group to join, a place to be, and just somewhere to belong.

There really is a difference

Is there really any difference between the Anchorettes and Show Me South?

Sure there is, the Anchorettes are a performing group, besides being the official hostesses of the school. The Show Me South Club deals primarily with new students getting used to South and making them feel welcomed.

Just what exactly did each group do?

Well, the Anchorettes marched out with the flag during the pregame shows for football and basketball season; they represented a kind of patriotic Drill Team. They also helped out on Back-to-School nights and raised money for a charity.

And S.M.S.?

S.M.S. assisted new students in getting acclimated here through personalized tours for each new person. They held a luncheon for the new people in November, and they tried to keep in touch with them. They also had pizza parties for themselves; the Anchorettes too had their own parties (complete with kidnappings).

Well, I suppose the main thing they have in common is a wish to assist and help others.

Close encounters of an American kind

A decision to journey over 6,000 miles away from family, friends and all familiar surroundings is not easy to make, especially for as long as a year. This, however, was the choice Sirpa JokInnen made when she signed up for the Youth For Understanding program back in Finland. Although difficult at times, especially with the language difference, Sirpa believes her choice was, despite occasional spells of homesickness, a sound one.

Each year, South hosts foreign exchange students, and traditionally, the International Club holds responsibility for making the student "feel at home." Faculty members in the foreign language department served as rotating sponsors. Three student co-chairmen worked with them in the planning of monthly meetings and various functions to help acquaint Sirpa with some aspects of American life that might not otherwise have been presented to her.

Over the years students have complained that the Student Council was a do-nothing organization. But they should have realized that it was the students that made StuCo effective. Since StuCo was made up of only 50 people, fresh ideas soon ran out. But when a representative went to a class room asking for suggestions, the responses were minimal or else he was met with blank stares. But in spite of these handicaps, there was an increase in student involvement. The Homecoming Dance and blood drives had good turnouts. The competition between the classes to raise the most money for a charity was fierce. And next year, thanks to StuCo's efforts, the parking lot congestion should be eliminated, because both entrances to the school will be utilized for incoming or outgoing traffic.

Vast information aides in winning season

The Categories team had another great winning season. While the first match was a disappointment, the team was able to zap most of their opponents. Mrs. Barbara Selbel, the new guiz coach, started whipping the team into shape during the fall. Practices were held regularly on Mondays and Thursdays. Potential team members were always welcomed to these training sessions. The meetings were informal and fun, and if the participants weren't very careful, they could actually learn something before they were done. Of those that attended the practices, the five with the most questions answered correctly went on to that week's competition against other schools. The outstanding scorers were veterans Mike Titens, self-appointed captain Greg Rapaport, Greg Azorsky and rookie Scott Nations. Other notables were Eddle Speer and Helde Kraus.

Students practice for business future

Composed of many of tomorrow's perspective business leaders, DECA, the Distributive Education Clubs of America, again set high goals for themselves. Being the first group ever from South to compete for Chapter of the Year award, much work was involved in preparing for this national honor. Along with regular class responsibilities, the group engaged in various additional activities. They contributed to the Salvation Army fund by helping with their bell ringing campaign. They also aided the Muscular Dystrophy by throwing a fund raising Valentine's party, and they helped out the needy by holding a food drive. In DECA, achievement was the name of the game as Mark Kaman learned. Mark ran for president of the state organization and was elected. DECA is sponsored by Mise Vicki Jennings.

While DECA dealt with the marketing and retailing aspects of the business community, Office Education provided other students the opportunity to get involved using their respective talents. Providing various secretarial services to several businesses, the students received on the job training. Sponsored by Loralle Wilson, Office Education gave students the opportunity to gain experience in the business world.

Girls make no waves with boy's swim team

Girls interested in boosting morale and in promoting spirit for the swimming and wrestling teams formed the Goodtimers and Pin-Ners, respectively.

Assisting Coach Bruce Bove, the Goodtimers added depth to the swimteam. Made up of girls interested in swimming and headed by Maureen Shay, the girls helped run meets throughout the season by keeping scores, timing and lending general support.

Organized by Coach Bill King, Pin-Ners and wrestling managers kept statistics, posted scores and provided water for the Raider matmen. Along with these and other functions, the girls escorted wrestlers to the mats at matches held at South.

Spirit Spreaders 50 You probably could not help but notice that the Pep Club members had infiltrated almost every part of this school. They filled the halls with signs, locker decorations and an infectious decease called "school spirit." Their voices seemed to emanate from the very walls. Those gold golf shirts came at you from every corner on Fridays. Their mission: To promote school spirit, to make "apathy" an obsolete word, to attend sports events and cheer all the Raider teams on to victory. The way these objectives were achieved was by having a great deal of enthusiasm and a lot of time. But, as with every endeavor there were complications; the Homecoming committee could not have cars on the new track, and there were some objections to the new uniforms. But through their influence all school assemblies were once again resumed, and a bonfire was held before the East football game.

filled the gym. The anticipation built to a peak. Then with a bash from a snare drum, the six Raiderettes marched to the center of the floor with the school banner. Their new satin blouses gleamed. Their smiles dazzled. Their performances in the gym or on the football field were executed with perfection. And thanks to a dry spell and the new track, there was no need to worry about marching through a swamp. The new track also brought another change. Because the administration feared that hoof prints would endanger the track's life, the traditional Raider mascot (consisting of a horse and rider) had to be sent out to pasture. Unfortunately the administration could not find a suitable replacement, but some industrious Raiders came up with a few unofficial "mascots." The first was an approximately two and a half foot tall stuffed gorilla with an "R" on his chest and a drill team hat on his head. The other "mascot" was created by some very athletic (and very strong) Raider Yell Leaders. With three of them, they managed to form a "horse" and "Raider" to run around during the football games when a touchdown was made.

Flying colors add sparkle

With their green and gold flags waving proudly in the air, the 1978-79 Southettes stepped out in flying colors. Entertaining the crowds at parades, pep assemblies, both football and basketball halftimes, the girls performed their routines with marked precision and accuracy. After cancellation of their summer clinic, the girls decided to go to Six Flags over Mid-America, where only one day later a cable car fell injuring several people. The girls also recalled Mrs. Bille Rice getting propositioned by their bus driver. "Everyone really got to know each other," said Sharon Crossette, captain.

Sponsored by Mrs. Rice, the team worked many long and hard hours to perfect their spectacular show.

Practice makes perfect

With a final "good-luck" from Miss Sharon Wiber, all 40 girls, uniform in dress, grabbed pom-pons and headed for the door. The cymbals crashed, and with every hair in place, the 1978-79 Pacesetters marched onto the field. Perfection, until this moment, had only been a dream.

Headed by their captain, LIsa Mensch, the girls received all the first place trophies at camp along with capturing 19 individual ribbons. Their tremendous success was rewarded when all 40 girls were able to march at each performance. In previous years, a process of elimination had been used.

As they glanced at each other, the reality hit them, and their faces glowed. They had accomplished their dream.

Once again in the instrument room, the air was filled with the sounds of instrument cases hitting the wooden shelves and a constant chatter. Emotions were still running high although another marching band halftime performance was over. Well into the second quarter, members wondered if the marching would ever cease, as the football team progressed into the playoffs. The weather was growing colder, and it was becoming difficult to imagine that the beginning of the season had occurred in 90 degree weather. The plain fact was expressed by a flute player when she said, "Marching Band is getting old!"

Nevertheless, the season had been an excellent one. As the highest rated overall band in the SM district, they crossed the state line to perform as an exhibition band in Warrensburg. Spirited members who felt that they wanted more involvement formed the Green and Gold Pep Bands. The enthusiasm at basketball games and pep assemblies gave these groups, headed by Paul Bastin and Marty Warren, respectively, the many opportunities to give their all.

We're here for cheer

In all the excitement of making the sophomore cheerleading squad, little thought was given to the amount of time devoted to this activity. Sophomore cheerleaders worked just as hard as other cheerleaders, but the recognition they received was scarce. Besides covering school sports, they also attended all mandatory practices and meetings while at the same time maintaining a good grade average. These efforts lead to hopes of becoming a junior varsity cheerleader. The same duties of the sophomore cheerleading also applied to the junior varsity, but an extra special duty was added to the agenda. It was the JV squad who cheered third quarter at the games, replacing the varsity squad.

The squads were led by Corl Plester, junior, and Sonja Hanschu, sophomore, with help from cocaptains Debble Overstreet, junior, and Vickl Winkler, sophomore. Mrs. Linda Segebrecht sponsored the JV squad, while Mrs. Anna Crabtree kept busy helping the sophomore team learn the ropes of high school sports and cheerleading.

We've got spirit how 'bout you

Dressed in the traditional green and gold pleats, oversized sweaters, white bobby socks and saddle shoes were eight of the most spirited and busiest girls around. Receiving assignments on Mondays to attend each of the sporting events to be held that week, they had to learn to coordinate their time and fit these appointments around homework, dates, and other social activities. The squad was led by Jane Rasmussen who was voted most outstanding girl at cheerleading summer camp. The squad also received an award for the most outstanding group.

Helping to promote school spirit the eight yell leaders added their voices and creative stunts to all the football games. Both groups were sponsored by Mrs. Linda Segebrecht.

Some high schoolers think, "I can make it on my own, no help from anyone." Their thinking is logical, for they picked their own classes and made their own goals for the future. But most of us realize that it was the teachers and administration that were responsible for many of our accomplishments. It was not so much the grades and homework our teachers gave us that helped. It was mainly their quiet encouragement that enabled us to achieve those bigger and better goals we had only dreamed about.

Nichols becomes a Raider

"South is second to none, and I know it because I've been on the outside looking in," said the former Nallwood and new South principal, Mr. Charles Nichols. With this belief, Mr. Nichols led South's administration to accomplish bigger and better things.

The administration not only settled in (evident as Mr. Nichols placed a photograph of a child on his desk), but also managed to solve the usual problems of balancing the budget, meeting student needs and solving numerous details. A few details were another attendance window, a new tardy policy and a study hall resource center which allows students to seek teacher help.

With the understanding of the administration and the improvement of student behavior, pep assemblies returned after their banishment last year.

Under the leadership of Mr. Nichols, the new administration met its challenges head on and proved to be the victor.

Does anyone need help?

If you were looking for a teacher with personality plus, you would have a hard time choosing just one, for both the Career and the Learning Center abound with them. The atmosphere they project was not only one of total craziness but also one of openness and caring. In an effort to help more students, Mr. Dennis Butler created a new class especially designed to help students decide on a career area. It lasted only ten days and was compiled of students from study halls. Student opinion was varied on how helpful this class was, but many returned to investigate their choice in depth. In order to get into the Consortium Program, you had to have completed this class.

Once there was...

Once upon a time, there were three librarians, Miss Marjorie Lane, Mr. Phil Rambow, Mr. Jay Jamison. One day last year, the librarians decided to rearrange the library.

"Who will help us move these big, heavy, huge book stacks?"

"Not us!" said the teachers.

"Not us!" said the administration.

"Not us!" said the students.

"Very well then, we'll do it by ourselves!" said the librarians, and they did.

"Who will help us move the many fiction books all along the perimeter?" pleaded the exhausted librarians.

"Not us!" said the teachers.

"Not us!" said the administration.

"Not us!" said the students.

"Very well then, we'll do it by ourselves," and they did.

"Who will use the library?" asked the fatigued librarians.

"We will!" said the teachers.

"We will!" said the administration.

"We will!" said the students.

"Oh no you won't! Only those with passes will use the library!" said the librarians, with much glee in their voices.

1. Miss Marjorie Lane continues serving people as she volunteers as an auxilary lady at Shawnee Mission Hospital. 2. Mr. Jay Jamison finds happiness is a warm puppy and not shelving books. 3. Mr. Art Clements abandons the noise and pressures of the production center for a peaceful afternoon of fishing. 4. ## As the stomach turns

Ok stomach, it's that time again. What do you mean, what time? You've been growling for the past hour. Lunch time, of course. What's it going to be today? Do you feel like racing to the car, speeding to Dairy Queen, Winchells, or McDonalds, inhaling the food and then trying to park between the little yellow lines when you get back? I'm not up to it either. All right, we'll go the cafeteria route today. I know those pies and donuts look great, but you're on a diet, so go over to Type A and get a well-balanced nutrious meal. No, no ding-dongs for dessert. Just wait until next hour and you can get some M&M's from a drill team girl.

Sophs use pictures to study classics

"What's a run-on? Who's Julius Caesar? Do we have a vocabulary test today?" You guessed it, sophomore English.

Abounding with wide-eyed stares and mass confusion, the noise of the combined sophomore English classes registered "warning" on the Rickter scale. This enormous energy level proved to be the key of the sophomore's success.

With the addition of the sophomore anthology, Adventures in Literature (complete with the pictures to accompany the classics), the English staff hoped to improve its curriculum by stimulating the student's interest.

The sophomore population wasn't the only novice group learning the ropes of high school English. Mary Steeb and Greg Wilson also joined the ranks, as teachers. Both of them having taught at the junior high level, provided a familiar face to some students. For other students, they were new faces with which to become familiar.

Welcome back Mr. Calder

Shades of Welcome Back Kotter . . . the strain of the Welcome Back Kotter theme song is almost audible as Mr. Scott Calder, a former South student, strides down the hall, hurrying to get to track practice where he coaches the team on which he once participated. "Hi Mrs. Volk er. . . Connie." With a sheepish smile, Mr. Calder continues on, silently admonishing himself for greeting a former teacher by her formal address instead of her first name.

Mr. Calder, along with fifteen others, joined the teaching forces. The English department received four teachers, with Mr. Calder being the only new English 11 instructor. He advanced immediately to the head of the class when he returned after five years as a teacher instead of a student. In those five years the school and students have changed little. The dreams still remain. They haven't turned around. Welcome back.

To be or not to be .... that is the question

This is the question for most seniors. Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the homework and tests of outrageous teachers or abandon them as a curse of most wicked speed.

As seniors, students had the choice of taking English or passing it by. Those students that decided to go for broke and take the Advanced Placement class, and even those who took the regular English class had their work cut out for them. "Ms. Beclcka is super hard but it's really worth it for college," said Patsy Schimmel. This is a well known fact among students, and many opt for those teachers that are considered "hard" for that reason.

Those that take A. P., however, want more than to be prepared for college. The A. P. test given at the end of each year provides for the added bonus of quizzing out of English hours in college. Even though there may be students interested in majoring in English, most take the course to quiz out. "Though this be madness, there be method in it."

We're actually human

Sometimes students tend to regard teachers as inhuman beings existing only at school and then disappearing into another world at 3 p.m. Foreign language teachers seem especially to suffer from the myth and are treated as if they assimilate into the land from whose language they teach. But our foreign language teachers had interesting outside lives that would surprise us all. Both Mrs. Betty Willits and Mrs. June Farson traveled in the summer to a foreign land. Mrs. Willits studied in Mexico, while Mrs. Farson lived with friends in France. They returned for the school year refreshed and with a greater knowledge of the language and culture which they teach. Just as an outside interest, Mrs. Susan Sjolin, a new teacher, studied Japanese writing. Mrs. Barbara Selbel devoted her free time on Saturdays to teaching an enriched children class at JUCO, and Mrs. Ellen Jiskra could certainly understand and relate to the problems of working hard all day at school and then rushing to another job, as she spent twenty hours a week at Payless grocery store as a cashier. Remember as you learn to conjugate your foreign verbs, that the teachers who instruct you are human beings and lead other interesting lives outside of school.

Correctly answered tests gain yardage in class

"All right team, today we're going to discuss line segments with all of you."

"Heh, what are you talking about coach? There has not been a hole in our defensive line the entire playing season. Am I correct?"

In normal situations this may seem an unusual conversation, but for many math students it's all just part of the workout, because within the math department there were five who also coached some type of athletic team. An increase in the number of students in the department, caused by the additional hour of practice in the school day, led to a need for three more math coaches. Bud Peterson, Allo Paul and Sue Carrel were selected as first round draft choices.

The coaching staff decided against making any changes in the game plan because as J. N. Voorhees explained, "It's hard to improve on perfection." And, while some of the staff may feel left out of the strategy, they all take it with a grain of salt because, "We like sports too, and if you like them, you should be a good sport, right?"

Physics can be fun, too

A ball rolling uphill? Hmm . . . maybe I should check this out. Room 161, physics? OK. A reporter sensing an interesting story turned and headed for the physics room. Looking through the door he saw students shooting ping-pong balls through plastic guns, rolling baby's toys on the table and a plastic bird hopping across the chalkboard.

A notice on the bulletin board read: "Physics Club: Don't forget money for Dark Star." Someone explained that each year the physics club orders a film to be shown strictly for enjoyment during third quarter. Dark Star is a science-fiction comedy. The star Dan Bannon, later went on to do computer work behind a battle scene in Star Wars.

The toys the reporter had seen were used to bring physics principles to an easier level of understanding. Wandering to the office of the room, he saw, a ball rolling uphill? The lab assistants, Loree Stadelman, Becky Thorton and Tony Miller were shooting a film beginning with this violation of a physics principle. Dazed with the knowledge of the fun house technique of the ball rolling uphill and surprised that physics was not the dry, dull course he had thought it to be, the reporter left with Mr. Kenneth Roper's final comment ringing in his ears, "Physics is fun, too."

The past continues on

In this age of computers and mass production many people long for the good old days. The simpler times of by-gone eras and the wholesome attitudes which were encouraged, cause many a wistful sigh. However, all was not lost. Several teachers captured a segment of those simpler times and generously shared them with their classes. Whether this was reminiscing about or regressing back to their early school days was doubtful. Each student was given crayons to draw how he felt going into and then coming out of a party. Students also drew pictures to express their feelings on certain days. Reminds one of kindergarten days, doesn't it? Anyway, they then supposedly analyzed these "creations" and discussed the human reactions each displayed. This was psychology.

For those unfortunates that either couldn't or wouldn't take psychology, they were still able to enjoy those good old days. It is certain anyone who was the least bit interested in previous years had his fill of them by the time he finished American History. Since 278 years were discussed, students not only found out the "good old days" were not so good but also how lucky they are to be living now. Viva '78-'79.

ROTC inspires pride

In the past the word ROTC was greeted with laughter and snickers. ROTC is trying to change that by showing their personal self-respect and esteem. A subtle change is occurring in the attitude toward ROTC, and it is due to the students involved. ROTC students show their spirit as they practice marching and then perform at pre-game and half time shows. Their self-respect is seen when they wear their well earned uniforms. Commander Robert Haggerton explained the warm feeling of acceptance that existed when one entered the room by saying, "This group opens its arms to any student and gives them a place to belong in the uncertain world of a huge school." It's a small organization, but its pride is helping to start a trend in an upswing of spirit in the school.

Help has arrived

Whether it's a female quirk or everyone's secret problem, junior and senior girls are embarrassed to participate in all sophomore gym class. Maybe it's the extra two years of maturity that brings on this modesty. Whatever the reason behind it, a new class, junior-senior gym, has been added to help these girls. Golf, archery and other individual sports are featured as well as recreational games. Field trips to the bowling alley, ice skating and roller rink and putt-putt golf were taken throughout the year. As an added attraction, co-ed classes are being considered. At last girls who need a physical education credit or simply enjoy exercise can feel comfortable and relaxed surrounded by girls their own age.

Future business execs learn tricks of trades

If for a moment one had stopped and contemplated that maybe some of the future world's most prominent business executives were sitting at the desks and typewriters of South, perhaps even sitting right next to oneself, the importance of the business department would become overwhelming. Since several different phases of business were covered, students not only had a chance to learn about different businesses but also had to decide if the career they were persuing was really what they wanted to do with their lives. The teaching of business was not confined only to the books and lectures of teachers. Whether Mr. Dave Ollver was trying to illustrate principles of business law or just trying to cash in on a good deal was doubtful. He was able to find a concert ticket connection, one of his students, and so got choice seats at all the rock concerts. So much for the French . . . oops South connection.

When prices soar, we sew

She walked througn the clothing stores with apprehension and began combing the racks, feeling the softness of silk and savoring the coolness of smooth cotton. Her desire to try on the new velour fashion became almost unbearable, for she knew it would be the closest she would ever come to the outlandishly priced piece of merchandise.

Before she knew it, hours had passed and not a precious penny had been spent. So, down the mall she trudged, until she came to the bright lights and colors of the fabric store. There she chose the exact pattern and material to design the latest Hollywood vogue.

All over the nation, students have given up hunting futilely for bargains on clothes. Now, most just shut their eyes while emptying their purses before the cash register tolls the damage.

South students, however, have found another way to combat the clothing inflation. It was back to the basics. Because of this rise in homemaking interest, the addition of Mrs. Susan Trupp and Sherilyn Bowman was necessary to take up the excess.

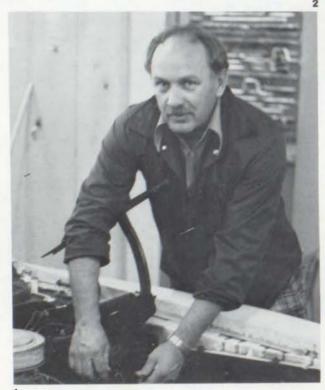

1. Mrs. Susan Trupp wears the latest in fashion in and out of the classroom. In addition to her course load of child development, survival skills, fashion fabrics, and family clothing, Mrs. Trupp also leads the Pep Club. 2. ### Cars have feelings too

"Oh, no. It's third hour and I have to let that kid drive me today. To think I had almost recovered from the last torturous drive with him. Well I quess I knew what I was getting into when I took this job, but I sure didn't realize how long six hours per kid was. There is one consolation though, think of what the poor teacher has to endure during those 60 hours of classroom time and all for that slip of paper, a driver's license. Oh, ampmeter, here we go. That's right, count out the 14 steps, now back out slowly. Watch out for that parked car. We almost had a close encounter of the worst kind. Ok, we made it out to the street. Brake, accelerate, brake, accelerate, you know, I think I'm coming down with a terminal case of antenna whiplash. Slow down you fool, there's a speed bump ahead. Oh, my aching shock absorbers. It looks like I'm going to need a major overhaul by the time we get back to school. Thank goodness for Auto Tech II. At least they know how to treat a car right. If those guys weren't around to repair me all the time, I'd have gone to car heaven a long time ago."

Art involves all

Have you ever wondered if there is a Picasso or a Michelangelo roaming the halls with you at school? Is one of your classmates destined for fame and fortune? If there are any fledgling artists walking around, they certainly have a wide range of instruction from which to choose. For those striving to surpass Monet, there is a fine watercolor class, and oil and acrylics appeals to the Rembrandt in us all. Commercial art may produce someone equivalent to Norman Rockwell or Toulouse-Latrec. Maybe if you're another Cheryl Tiegs you'll get your start modeling for a drawing class. Following in Bertoldo's footsteps, Miss Patty Beard may instruct a student whose sculptures will rival the brilliance of Michelangelo, and perhaps another Picasso will be inspired by Art I. Our founding mothers would have been proud of the weaving skills learned in weaving and textiles. If you're not an aspiring artist you can still enjoy jewelry making, photography, design and theater design, all taught by instructors whose work is also their hobby. The chances are slim that this school will produce a Van Gogh or Leonardo da Vinci, but still . . . tomorrow look around you in art class and wonder.

Bands' beat goes on

Try-outs are over and the results are posted. Some are laughing, others crying, almost no one is indifferent. Marching band is over and it's time for symphonic season. The era of AMA ends, and the tough physical exercise is replaced by the even tougher mental concentration necessary to have a good band. The competition surrounding try-outs is rough especially in such sections as the flutes and trombones which have always had notably good players. The marching band is very close, and since forty students must be cut the audition becomes even more stressful. The concert season begins with Masterworks, the most serious performance of the year. Mr. JIm Cochran faces the almost impossible task of channeling the physical energy of marching band into mental energy for symphonic band in a relatively short time. However, the students are talented and willingly to work. When the symphonic band received a standing ovation at the first concert, the hard work paid off. The physical fun of marching band combined with the mental strengthening of symphonic season makes the band program an experience worth remembering.

We're the other guys

"You're the band that plays in the front hall and at basketball games, right?"

"No, that's the pep band. We're the other guys, the jazz band. I guess that not many students really know who we are or what we do. First, we had the rare opportunity to learn and study jazz. Because it is a specialized class, we had to audition. Jazz 4, the more advanced group, consisted of twenty-three of the top all around musicians in the school. Jazz 6 was basically a training class, but those students will make up the top group the following year. There were no textbooks to study from. The class was free to experiment and learn from experience. The addition of student conductors emphasized the freedom of the class. Our goal was to get more publicity. We even tried to get a radio station to play a cut from our album to publicize an upcoming concert. For the first time we were allowed to have our own concert, strictly jazz. It was held in the Little Theater with people from our group organizing lighting and stage decorations. We also went to KU and performed at a clinic. Our big event was still the Evening of Jazz, where we got to really see what it is like to play a dance job. No, we're not pep band, 'we're the other guys'."

Jim Cochran- Marching Band, Symphonic Band, Concert Band, Concert Winds, Jazz Ensemble 1 & 2; Pep Band Sponsor. 9. Bruce Williams— Orchestra, Pit Orchestra Conductor.

With only seventeen string members, orchestra constitues one of the smallest performing groups in the school. Don't get the wrong idea though, they are small but powerful. Six of the students made the All-State Orchestra with Nancy lves and Laura Gray making first chair. Part of the reason for the group's expertise is their conductor Mr. Bruce Williams. He is one of those people gifted with perfect pitch so he can immediately sense when the group is out of tune or when someone plays a wrong note. Besides conducting the orchestra here, he works with the Nallwood orchestra and several elementary schools. He also spends his Monday nights conducting the Overland Park Orchestra. In between all this, he works with the pit orchestra, a group vital to the success of the musicals. Since he is a former performer, he knows just when to take and give cues. Two student teachers, Lisa Berry and Doug McClure, were able to work with him during the year gaining valuable experience. His enthusiasm and expertise is transferred to the students and accounts for the excellence of the orchestra.

Unity the goal for choir

Once upon a time, there was a choir. Now this choir was no ordinary choir because it was only for sophomores. It was called Concert Choir. For the first time ever, the class was honored to be under the direction of Mr. Larry Stetler. A special choir like this does not only sing, they are more like a family. Unity was always there as the choir held many functions to promote this unity. These functions are not during school time and therefore it is voluntary for the members to come. These functions also serve a hidden purpose, and this is to get the new Raiders to meet each other.

To many of the members, Concert Choir is a major adjustment from the junior high choirs because parties don't happen everyday and hard work is always there to be put to good use. Every member is expected to put forward his best each day of class, and the results are always there to brag about. Practice makes perfect and this unity of a choir makes perfect practice more enjoyable.

Title IX rules choirs

In these days of equality and desegregation, the choral department was not to be excluded. The Men's Chorus, a traditionally all male choral ensemble, added two girls to their number, solving their problem of segregation. "They not only add a special tonal quality but also a needed personality twist," remarked Mr. Larry Stetler, the group's conductor. If you had to get up early to be at school at 7:15 a.m. for rehearsal, you'd want something more than a bowl of Wheaties to look forward to-wouldn't you? Anyway, this added incentive must have worked since the group performed several outstanding concerts throughout the year. Even though the Choraleers were not desegregated because of a lack of male enrollment, the group was equally impressive in their choral performances. They not only performed in school oriented seasonal concerts, but also outside of school at shopping centers.

Music, partying mean togetherness for girls

Parties, country clubs, radio stations, basketball games, kidnappings and invitationals may not seem related to choir, but for the Chanterelles and Chanticleers they were a major part of their choral experience. These activities not only helped make choir more enjoyable but also developed a feeling of unity between the sister "'Relles" and Chanticleers.

Although the two groups frequently enjoyed various extra-curricular activities, they also put in many hours of intensified rehearsal for their concerts. An admitted perfectionist, Ms. Marle Lerner, maintained both groups' reputations for outstanding performances through her concentrated rehearsal techniques. So, choir was not only a time to learn music, but also a time to learn about people.

Choirs sing different tune

With the departure of Dr. Don Donaldson as director, A Cappella, Heritage and Varsity Men faced a challenging year of adjustment, not to mention the usual difficult music. Though several A Cappella members saw the first few months as rocky, the path became smoother with understanding.

Yet as the choir members adjusted to director Ms. Marle Lerner, they also faced several other changes. One week before the annual holiday Vespers concert, the students were informed that the traditional candlelight processional would be discontinued due to the religious overtones in school. While A Cappella watched this tradition flicker to an end, it also saw the continuance of another, candy sales and movie night, both a must to finance the spring tour. With the successful showing of Smokey and the Bandit and candy sales, the tour was deemed a success.

The two select groups, Heritage and Varsity Men, continued their famed traditions of singing at various community organizations, but under the direction of Mr. Larry Stetler of Coffeyville, Ks.

It was a year of adjustments, but also one of festivities as all three choirs continued to keep their social committees busy.

Ms. Sandi Gresham beams with pleasure while holding trophies, won at one of the first forensics tournaments, surrounded by the winners, Randy Cooke, Brent Clum, Rick Morefield, Sharon Giorgini, David Clatlin and Susan Stanley. 3. Ted Manson and Charles Kenworthy practice a duet act for an upcoming forensics tournament. 4. Ms. Sandi Gresham, debate and forensics coach, jots down some constructive criticism. 5. After a long day of hosting a debate competition, the reception table may look messy, but Karen Glickstein looks as fresh as ever. 6. Debate partners Dan Hurwitz and Brent Clum conclude their arguments with a final cross examination.

128 Debate/Forensics

Talk jocks attempt to move the world

You may have hear students talking about D.I.'s or I.D.A.'s or earnestly discussing the pro's and con's of the national energy program. While these may not seem like normal topics for conversation, it is for the students enrolled in forensics or debate. An academic performing class is a proper definition for both subject.

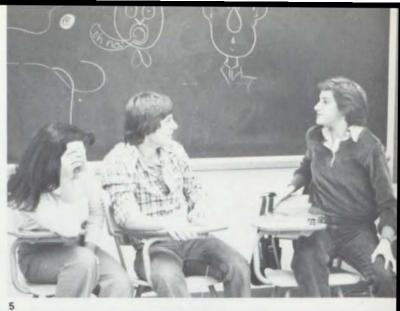

Debate, held first semester, allowed students to compete against kids from other school on one chosen subject. The topic this year was the need for an effective energy program. Like many other organizations, the debaters were close friends and often held C.P.F. parties with the stipulation that it was B.Y.O.B., bring your own brief. The cut, past, file party then consisted of the debaters cutting briefs and pasting them on 4 x 6 notecards using rubber cement.

Ms. Sandi Gresham described forensics as "an oral track meet." In this class students can express themselves through acting, interpreting drama, prose or poetry or speaking factually. Although forensics is a relatively new class, enrollment is high and the team is already well on its way to becoming a leader among other schools.

If you haven't been involved in either course, you might want to consider it. Debate is good for the prospective lawyer or those who just plain like to argue. Forensics is for anyone who wishes to express himself in his own very unique, personal way. Both classes are beneficial and the students say, "Give me the right words, and I will move the world."

They call us actors

The term theater can cover a variety of things, anything from basic exercises done in the introduction to theater classes to such serious drama as The Tempest. No matter though, it is all a vital part of the theater department, for each level provides an unique experience for those who participated.

Taught and supervised by Mr. Gerald Snider, the department had a variety of things happening all year. Intro classes worked on individual projects, while actors studio readied another production of Mandala, done by repertory theater the year before. However, unlike the past year, it was student directed plays that came from the select class of repertory theater, giving those students a chance not only to act, but direct also. While Mr. Snider provided his students with theatrical experience, the Thespian officers provided the fun. President Marjorle Michelson, stated that their goals were to involve more people and "Make theater a more recognizable part of South."

> Along with reaching their goals, the officers planned picnics, a trip to Tiffany's Attic and the awards banquet at the end of the year.

1. Mary Klauser, Connie Brown, Sonja Hanschu and Michella McKinney sing of their affections during music repertory theater. 2. Sonja Hanschu leads the chorus during music repertory theater. 3. Members of repertory theater practice mirroring individual partners. 4. Thespian officers: president Marjorie Michelson, vice-president Wendy Godfrey, secretary-treasurer Gretchen Thomas, points clerk Tucker Johnston. 5. Introduction to theater brings out the beast in Carla Winer as Frank Mack looks on in mock horror. 6. Theater teacher Mr. Gerald Snider gobbles his excitement as Dr. Dave Pendelton crowns him teacher turkey. 7. Sometimes repertory theater gets a little too deep for Dave Mayberry. 8. Group therapy sometimes is helpful, as Rusty Mann demonstrates.

Scoops cause sweat

Nearly everyone has heard the coined phrase, "the hectic life of a reporter," and that includes the this year's entire Patriot staff. For the writers, ad layout staff, photographers, proof-readers and editor alike found that producing 17 issues of the Patriot (or some 326,400 sheets of printed paper which have to be stuffed, folded and counted) in one year became nervewracking, time-consuming, back-breaking work. Supervisor Mrs. Judy Hoskins and editor-in-chief Karen Martin were probably the busiest of all, as they undertook the task of editing the yearbook as well as the Patriot. And while most staff members did not spend the four hours a day in the journalism office that Karen did, their individual duties on layout and paste up or writing and proof-reading kept each person busy for many hours between publications.

Please stop the clock

With artistic eyes, inquisitive minds and total dedication, the Herltage staff worked many long hard hours to complete their masterpiece by the last deadline. Creativity was the goal, as every page makeup had to be as original as its creator, a job of no small proportion. The decision of what the page should look like though was minimal, whereas getting pictures and writing copy like this required not only time, but mental anguish. If a staff member failed to get a photographer to a certain place at a certain time, the moment was lost forever; it was that simple.

To walk down to room 195 during sixth hour there would have appeared to be nothing but mass confusion. Each staff working on different layouts, people demanding their pictures from the photographers and thousands of endless questions being thrown at editors Karen Martin and Allison Darling, were only part of the procedure before a hectic deadline.

Certainly working on the yearbook staff provided each member with an invaluable experience that he will take with him all through his life. "Highway '79 leads to many roads," and belonging to the Herltage staff just made that highway a little more interesting and definitely more hectic.

Top notch students receive recognition

Quill and Scroll. "What's that?" you may ask. It is an international honorary society for high school journalists. Journalists, you know those people who make your business their business. Eight seniors were nominated from South to be inducted at the honorary ceremony held at SM East on April 10. Following the traditional candle-lighting ceremony, the top three winners of each division of the write off contest were announced and then a reception was held to honor the nominees.

National Honorary Society means scholarship, service, leadership character-four attributes that, although many strive to reach, few achieve. However, faculty members were able to select thirty-six juniors and seniors who they felt were outstanding in these areas. Along with one of the most successful food drives ever, the group sponsored a book-fair in April. The NHS also partipated in the organization of the first annual scholarship week which included the induction ceremonies for the newly elected members. In the words of Mike Titens, president, "NHS had another successful year maintaining the leadership and unity characteristic of the venerable organization."

Semi-finalist more than just brains

"National Merit Semi-finalists? They're just a bunch of brains." However, this statement proved to be inaccurate. Even though the fourteen winners can boast that they are in the top  $\frac{1}{2}$  of one percent of college and high school students who took the 1977 Preliminary Scholastic Appitude Test, approximately one million students, they are far from being just "typical" bookworms. Sports, drama, music and school publications are just a few areas in which these talented and intelligent students were involved. The hours they put into extra activities such as jobs, church and groups are as numerous as anyone else's and some of these book worm types can even be seen at an occasional party. Those students who scored in the top two percentile but below the semi-finalist level received Letters of Commendation. Their accomplishments are as numerous as the semi-finalists' and their talents are as diverse. Many seem to actually spend more time in outside activities than in school work, though their grades don't reflect this fact. They are smart and they are talented. South was lucky to have such individuals in its midst.

An athlete's world is full of tough breaks, aching muscles and fans with encouraging words only when a win is placed on record. Some called them animals, some called them jocks, but they were only kids born with a competitive nature. All of the seasons were long and tedious, but the will to win, to surpass other schools in that race for the state title, kept all of the athlete's heads held high even when the season didn't seem worth finishing. They always looked forward to that next game, striving to be better and hoping to be the best.

Standards set for rookies

Practice and more practice. Sit-ups, push-ups jogging and weight lifting. Hey, wait a minute-this is harder than junior high football. Although rookies to the football squad, they put forth skill and hard work. This is sophomore football. Under the direction of Coach Bill Spencer, the boys did their best as they began their football careers. Starting practice in the summer, the team devoted their lives to football. All this practice payed off in the end because the team could look back and boast at their record. The white team had a four-five season and the green team had a seven-two season. But what came out of all the team work and hard practice was lasting friendships among the members. Most white members recall an evening after the Topeka game. After a trying game and a silent busride back, the coaches kept the team forty-five minutes into the night for more practice. But after all this hard work, the team looks back on the season and most of the members feel it was worth it. So they throw aside old grievances and plan on going out for another year of high school football.

JV follows Varsity's example

Playing in the shadow of state champions was the Junior Varsity football team. It was here that next year's champions developed skills, gained experience and learned the game called football.

Possibly forecasting another great varsity team next year, this year's J.V. team sported a six-two record. The zenith of the year came with a 23-11 victory over North, avenging a 35-0 defeat last year. Victories like these made all the hardships of adjusting to grueling practices much easier.

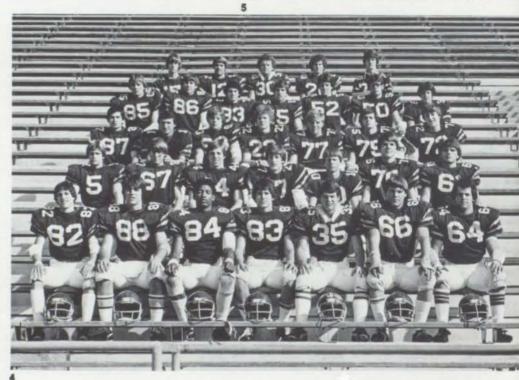

Injuries were a common problem for the team. To gain the experience necessary for next year, the junior varsity practiced against what is possibly the best team in Kansas. Nicknamed the "Hamburger Squad", they prepared the varsity for their opponents, while they awaited their moments of glory in South stadium and in the media.

The common aches and pains shared by each player aided in uniting the team and strengthening their pride in the school. Through a strong determination and dedication to their coaches, Mr. Bruce Roach and Mr. Ken Johns, each member eagerly awaited a successful next season in a continuance of tradition.

Stairwell Gang reigns

After a hard and vigorous workout, the infamous Stairwell Gang gathered at the old meeting ground. Such members as Disco Dull, Hollywood Kirk, the Kitty Twins, Buc Rodgers, Dizzy Dan and good old Dane from Calcutta could be found here in relaxed attire. When asked what they do, one member replied, "We just drink koolaide and eat Dumburgers." Although it sounds as if this is all fun and games, it takes much work to become one of the Stalrwell Gang. The main qualification is to be on the Varsity Football team. Coach John Davis said that teamwork was the key and this team knew it because they have lost only one game in their whole career at South. Practice seemed monotonous, but the constant teasing and kidding around kept the members from insanity. This practice seemed to pay off though because the boys took the Sunflower League championship. Who knows where the Stairwell Gang will be next year, but for now they are here and are setting a record that will be hard to beat.

Life in the fast lane...

That should have been the motto of the Junior Varsity and "C" cross-country road-runners, who spent most of their running careers training on busy streets such as College Boulevard, 103rd and Alternate 69 bypass. "Nothing is quite so nerve-wracking," said one C Teamer, "as reaching the top of a hill and seeing a car coming at you at 45 miles per hour."

But whether it is nerve-wracking or not, training on the roads has "gotten the job done" according to Coach Verlyn Schmidt, whose J.V. and C Team runners finished the season with 5-2 and 5-1 records respectively to win the little regional.

Led by junior Mark Frey and sophomore Steve Brown, the J.V. squad easily won the Little Regional at Shawnee Mission Park, after beginning the season disappointingly with two losses in a row.

It may seem to some that a great season would be enough for any coach, but all the times they trained for those victories, pounded mile after mile along hot streets with little break until the end of a long season, Coach Schmidt thought mainly of future victories and accomplishments. He says he expects even more runners next year than this year's unprecedented 49, and is very optimistic about next year. So move over gas guzzlers, and make room for the new line of 1979 "Sun Raiders."

Senior Scott Williams challenges both mind and muscles as he widens the gap between himself and the competition. 5. Senior Craig Carter strains up a hill in order to stay near the pack, in a regular season meet. 6. State Champion Brent Steiner breathes deeply as he exhibits the talent which made him the best in the state, easily outdistancing the other racers even in the early running of a two mile race.

Going for the gold!

For what seemed endless hours and days, mile after weary mile, the varsity road-runners pounded just about every surface imaginable in preparation for their fifth State Championship in 13 years. Even sharp downhill grades and the steepest of hills were subject to the relentless determination of those seven harriers, who ran harder and faster as the season progressed while the rest of the team struggled just to keep pace.

Keeping pace was all anyone could try to accomplish this year though, as the Raiders literally breezed to victory 65-93 and 62-127 in the boys' and girls' respective State Championships in Manhattan, becoming the first team in Kansas history to win both in one year.

That accomplishment wasn't the only first for this team though, as Brent Steiner became the first junior ever to go undefeated through an entire season. Brent, whose seven meet and four new course records included a blazing 9:05 clocking at State, was backed up consistently by State runner-up Steve Smith, also a junior. Other fine performances during the season were turned in by seniors Scott Williams and Chris (Critter) Miller who, together with the rest of the squad, gave Coach Verlyn Schmidt his fifth undefeated cross-country team in his coaching career.

The season couldn't have looked much brighter for the harriers. After all, for some teams clouds hide even a silver lining, but for South's road-runners, gold is all there is, and it looks like they finally made it over the rainbow.

Girls live with torture; 'Staying skinny' the goal

When asked why they subject themselves to the mental and physical strains of running long distances, the Girls' Varsity Cross-Country team offered numerous comments. These ranged from getting in shape or "staying skinny" as one female harrier put it, to the winning of a State Championship one, two or even three years in a row.

Senior letterwoman Jana Mulr and sophomore DeDe Lawless paced the girls to victory in both the League and State Championships, running second and seventh places respectively in Manhattan.

Muir's 11:28 career best two-mile and Lawless' 11:58 qualified them both for All-State, and helped the team win it's first three team trophies ever, at the South Invitational,

When asked why they subject League Championship and 6A State emselves to the mental and Meet.

While the point spread at the State Championships was large enough (the girls won by 67 points) to make the victory come easily, much time and hard work throughout the season was put into the effort. Training with the boys' teams, the harriers ran an average ten miles per day each, but felt that the effort was worth it.

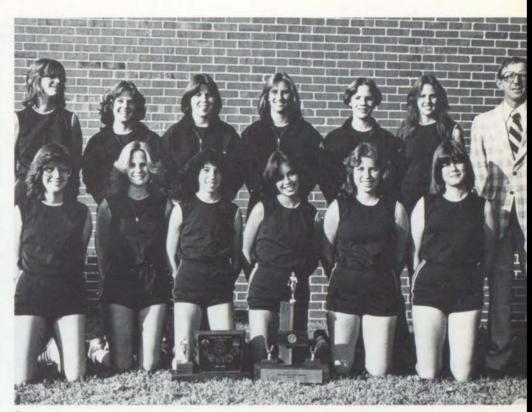

Schmidt, with a grin wide enough to comb tangled hair, said that it was helpful having the girls and boys training together because "The girls work harder when they run with the boys, and the boys, well . . . what high school kid wants to race and be beaten by a girl, even if she is State Championship material?"

Bunag wins State; Girls dazzle foes

Sunburn, chapped lips and a lot of running may not be every girl's dreamy vision of a tennis player's life, but that is what she gets when a netter strives to touch the stars.

Fortunately though, sore muscles and blistered skin were not all the girls' tennis teams got for their efforts. Karen Bunag got much more, as for the second straight year she went undefeated in 18 matches, taking the Sunflower League, Regional and State singles crowns.

Karen, along with singles teammate Coe Lewis and doubles players Chris Copeland and Patty Rowe, led the girls to runner-up berths in the League, Regional, and State tournaments. Allison Maim and Anne Scott also had a fine season, as the pair finished second in the Sunflower League and fourth in the Regional doubles play.

Together, the varsity and junior varsity teams formed a dazzling combination, outplaying the opposition in all but 17 of their 101 matches this season, and staying undefeated through all nine regular season duals.

With a record like theirs, South will probably be hearing more about the girl netters in the future. Certainly they brightened the pages of the Raider Record books with their achievements.

Back aching from lugging the bag, feet tired from trodding the green, arms aching from swinging the club. Alas. A flag in the distance. Could it be the eighteenth hole?

As she planted the tee firmly in the ground, she thought of all the months of hard work, discipline and determination that went into this moment. Thus was the life of a girl's golfer.

Under the direction of Coach Paul Sexton, the girls endeavored to perfect their game by working out at Brookridge Country Club every night after school. The adjustment to a new coach and the addition of Blue Valley to their league added to their difficult season. With one returning senior, three juniors and four sophomores, the girls had their work cut out for them.

Time Out—it was not constant drudgery. In Wichita, for example, their hotel room was infested with cockroaches, perhaps annoying at the time, but amusing to look back on. Actually, they might have even given the girls good luck as the next day they beat Wichita by a large margin.

So teamwork was hard work, yet a great enjoyment for the girls. Even though some of the girls felt they could not quite pull their game together, they consistently managed to finish in the top three positions at all eight tournaments, holding five first place awards.

Oppalay' season seeks skill of talented girls

With a loud shout of "Oopalay," meaning good luck, the huddled crowd of girls traditionally threw a towel into the air, signifying the opening of another volleyball season.

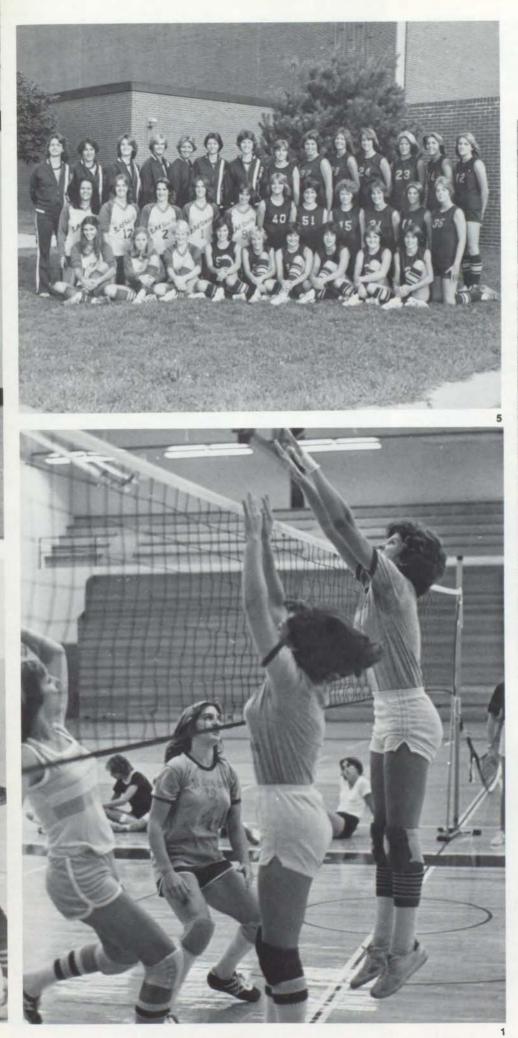

By practicing the skills of bumping, setting, spiking, digging and blocking every night after school for two and one half hours, the girls put together what Coach Sherri Brosseau called "The most talented team ever to play for South."

The Varsity squad came out of the season with a 13-13 record, capturing third in the league and second in regional. Two year captain Susan Sears proved to be a true leader, providing an all-around backbone to the team. Sue Kelly and Patty Mings both contributed to the team's front line with their excellent spiking and blocking. Junior Jane Cowee proved to be both an accomplished spiker and setter.

The Junior Varsity team consisting, of a majority of sophomores, ended the season by coming in sixth in the league. Sophomore Penny Buchner, a good all-around player, Lynette Darling, an excellent spiker, and Martha Cronan lead the team with their combined skills. Juniors Cindy Jurzack, Kim Broadus and Mary Eakes all used their experience from last year to aid in the team's scoring.

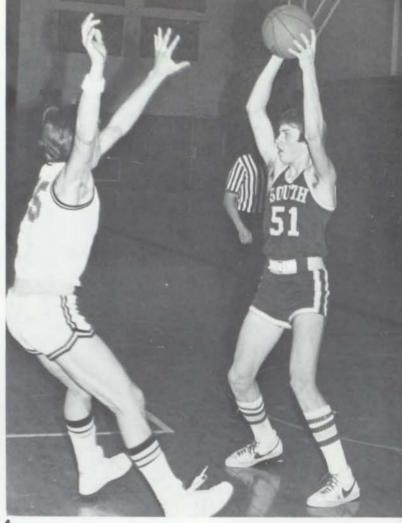

The Sophomore Team, coached by Mrs. Brosseau's sister Mrs. Sally Train, ended their season with a 9-7 record. With the combined efforts of Susan Sasser and Liz Christofferson, the team gained much experience and skill from working together as a close knit squad. Not only did the girls gain a knowledge of teamwork, but they found new friendships and bonded older ones.

Sophs build potential as season wears on

Taking to the floor with a new coach, the sophomore boys' basketball team went through a season of various highs and lows. New coach Bud Peterson incorporated the man-to-man defense into the sophs' game, and while they had a few problems earlier, they adapted well. They opened their season with four losses in their first five games, but as they grew more accustomed to the defense their fortunes turned upward as the team won five of their next eight contests. The loss of Tim Davis, Brad Palmer and John Bradford to the JV and Varsity teams was a great setback to the sophomores as Paul Glordano was the only consistent player under the boards for Coach Peterson. He had no such problems at the guard position, however, where Bill Lefko, Andy Epstein and Matt Plester all showed good potential. The squad itself gained much needed experience as the season progressed. Jerry Cassidy and Brian Hindman were new to the Shawnee Mission district and the South basketball program. Lefko saw limited playing time in his last year of junior high basketball, and Piester was hobbled off and on by an ankle injury, but the squad made it through the season; and with a year of high school basketball under their belts, the sophs should prove to be a fine JV team next year.

JV moves into spotlight

In the shadow of varsity exists the junior varsity basketball team. They practiced together, traveled together, and even shared the same days for games. Perhaps the only thing not done together was the actual playing of the games, and even then some JV players played varsity basketball. Since 15 juniors played JV and varsity, the team is looking forward to a very strong varsity squad next year.

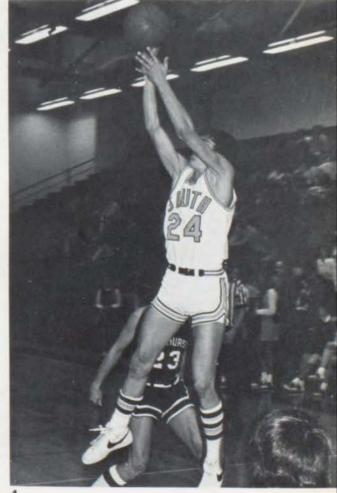

One problem that every JV team faces is getting people to fill the stands at 6:15 for the JV game. Concerning the situation, Denny Disch said, "People usually start coming to watch the game around the beginning of the fourth quarter, and that's when an audience really matters."

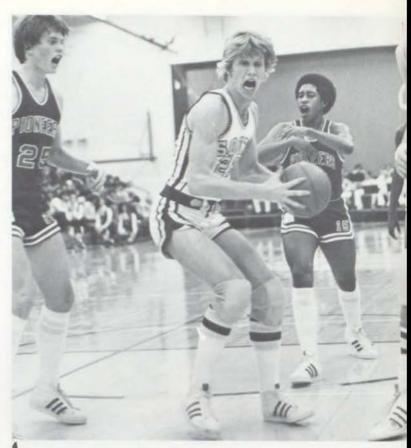

Starting off the season by winning the first four games showed that the team was well prepared and ready for action. Perhaps this was due to the shift in coaches. Coach David Oliver coached the men during their sophomore year so for many of the JV players, this year was time to perfect skills that were already learned.

Individual effort on the part of every player lead to the outstanding finish. Scott Affeit consistently averaged 13 to 14 points in each game. John Sturgeon divided his time between varsity and JV, and after a knee injury last year that kept him from playing, Mark Hansen returned to be another valuable player.

Although the JV was in a shadow, this year the team set a record that brought the JV team out of the dark and into the spotlight.

The thrill of victory ...

The thrill of victory ... and the agony of defeat. Few times in Raider varsity basketball history has this Wide World of Sports saying been as appropriate as it was this year. The victories were especially exciting since only three seniors, Blake Smith, Dave (Stretch) Richardson and Brett Milbourn returned from last year's state semi-finalist squad; and the few losses, mostly in over-time and because of foul trouble, were thus very tough to take.

This year's man-to-man defense was weaker than in previous years, which accounted for the low point spreads in many games this season. But good shooting by the whole team, an "almost unbeatable" zone defense and better play off the boards held the Raiders on top of league play.

"We are a very close squad," echoed Smith and Milbourn, "way closer than last year. The team began shaping up after we (the seniors) began leading like we should." Coach Paul Sexton agrees with this and looks for yet another winning season next year, as the Raiders return fine juniors in Clint Johnson, Tom Payne, Chris Laddish and Kevin Ludwig.

1. Coach Paul Sexton utilizes a one-minute study session to prepare his team for the remainder of its test. 2. In the last moments of a much disputed home game, Blake Smith challenges the referee's decision concerning a call. 3. Four hands don't seem to be enough to control the ball as a William Chrisman opponent goes down under the rush of senior Brett Milbourn during the finals of the Center Invitational tournament. 4. Junior Tom Payne grabs a rebound during the Leavenworth game, but the Raiders still came up one point short in overtime. Here, his Pioneer opponent seems to be saying, "Got your suitcase Tommy?" 5. Forward Dave Richardson probably wishes they were playing pro rules as he realizes he has committed his fifth foul. 6. Junior Clint Johnson concentrates intently on recovering a ball for the Raiders, as a Leavenworth opponent has the same goal in mind. 7. ## Fresh talent promises solid JV, Varsity team

Beginning the new season with a new coach, Dick Kramer, the sophomore girls worked on their shooting and ballhandling skills, putting in tedious hours every day after school. Spending a full day commuting between Highlands Elementary and Brookwood Elementary schools, Coach Dick Kramer comes to South after seventh hour to instruct the girls in the art of basketball, practicing from four-thirty to six-thirty.

On the court the girls played hard, showing strong muscle and competitive spirit. Sarah Martin, Carl Creason and Robin Kaman proved to be essential to the team with their shooting and dribbling, while their teammates provided a stable atmosphere and flexibility for the squad. Like many sophomore teams in all sports, the girls are building their knowledge and experience of the sport that will lead them to either a Junior Varsity or Varsity team next year. Not only did the girls build new skills, but they established strong friendships, bonding them together on the court as well as off it. The coaches as well as the girls are looking forward to a strong Varsity in their senior year and with their potential, the goal is aptly set. 3

Sophomores dominate Junior Varsity court

Bounding into the season with a full sophomore squad and only one junior, the girls Junior Varsity team strived to overcome its hard task. Lacking the experience of the junior players, the sophomores sought to increase their skills level by working out every day after school from two o'clock to four-thirty with the Varsity squad. Showing high interest in playing the game, the girls established their particular skills. All-around Stephanle King, the only junior, helped pull the team together, while Allison Maim aided the team with her shooting. Pattl Hoover demonstrated the art of good ball-handling, all establishing a foundation to build on for a competitive year. Believing in the "playing" method, head Coach Ron Millard set up rotation movements within the J.V. and Sophomore squads. Feeling the girls can best improve their skills by actually playing the game, Coach Ken Johns had girls from the sophomore squad playing in Junior Varsity games and in turn, J.V. players taking part in sophomore competition, providing for the teams' flexibility in the players. What is most important is the experience the girls are gaining for next year, some hoping to establish a spot on the Varsity team and others providing a strong backbone for next year's J.V. team.

Successful season due to skill, close friendship

Most people agree that the backbone of a successful basketball team is skill: shooting, dribbling, passing and rebounding. Yet, the Girls Varsity team possessed more than these essential points — friendship. Not only are the girls friends on the court, but they are close companions during school and in their free hours. This closeness allowed the girls to know each other's strengths, developing a unique sixth sense about the other player, making them "the best Varsity I ever had," according to their coach Ron Millard

All the girls developed intricate skill at all phases of the game, the nucleus of the team lying in four seniors, Nancy Kelly, Sue Kelly, DeeDee Connor and Patti Mings, the leading scorer. Palge Mongoven proved to be a spirited player, adding a competitive spark to the team's personality. Sophomore Nancy Drake demonstrated a high skill level, possessing the makings of a leader in her senior year. The skillful players provided a stable balance for the team's playing, working out from two o'clock to four-thirty every day. Here they improved their already fantastic playing abilities, leaving their record at 12-7.

1. Set on getting the ball, Therese Mullin resorts to tearing off Nancy McDonald's shirt. 2. Popular Coach Millard grabs the attention of the anticipating girls during a time out in a season game. 3. #### Grapplers top expectations

When the 35 or so boys who constitute the wrestling squad held their first meeting of the year Nov. 13, it must have looked like nursery school to Coach Guy Malone. For with the exception of senior lettermen Dan Middleton and Ellis Rainey, the grapplers were all untested, inexperienced and young.

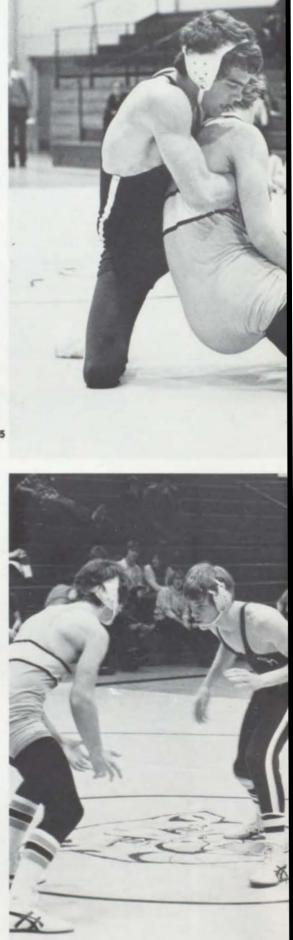

After losing about half a dozen key juniors and seniors from the squad, this year was expected to be strictly for rebuilding. But hard work by the sophomores and the dedication of Middleton and Rainey proved the old axium, "Where there's a will there's a way." As Rainey put it, "We all worked together, and it helped us. Extra effort is what made us do well."

Middleton, backed strongly by sophomores in "every size," remained a tough contender during the season, leading the young squad to many more victories than could possibly have been imagined at that first November meeting.

And while Coach Malone may have been somewhat dissolusioned then, the season left him with high hopes for the grapplers' futures. An appropriate compliment for these talented wrestlers might be, "You've come a long way, babies."

1. During a match at SM Northwest, top wrestler Dan Middleton demonstrates his secret formula for winning. Keep the opponents' legs in the air and pin his shoulders to the mat! 2. In the early stages of competition, Drew Hinton menacingly eyes the SM Northwest opponent. 3. Awaiting the signal to begin his match, senior letterman Ellis Rainey intently eyes the referee. 4. Steve Mackley attempts to break down the St. Joseph Benton opponent during a match at the South Invitational. 5. BACK ROW: Joe Gonzalez, Craig Curless, John Stroberg, Brad Krokstrom, Scott Zolotor, Scott Thielen, Willie Hoffman, Curt Reese.

'Fish gotta swim... Birds gotta fly'

This would be an appropriate phrase with which to describe the Raider swimming and diving team who, overall, had a very successful season.

Led by multi-talented seniors Dave Whitmore and Keith Jack, the Raiders put in some very impressive performances in all races. The strongest event, the 200 Medley Relay, saw Whitmore, Dickle Hansen, Bill Coens and sibling Brad Coens working gradually toward an All-American status, while Brad Coens and Hansen were also impressive in the 50 freestyle and breaststrokes respectively.

Senior Bart Foster, this year's captain, attributes the team's performance to their morale and spirit as well as to talent. Carrying on a tradition begun five or six years ago, Foster, coaches Allen and Bove and "every guy who ever saw a whisker on his face" grew beards in preparation for the state championship "shave-down."

The divers also put in a creditable showing, driven on by hours of workouts perfecting their dives. Unfortunately though, they fell at the hands of tough SM North opponents like Don Book, constantly on top of league competition this season.

1. Senior Dave Whitmore, constantly a top competitor this season, exibits his prowess in the backstroke. Whitmore also proved tough in breast, fly and freestyle races. 2. Top SM North divers eye Jay Besse with fascination as he prepares to enter the water in an almost flawlessly executed back layout. 3. Junior Tom Biggins psyches himself up while waiting on the blocks for the start of the championship heat in the 100 fly at League. 4. Timers, place judges and athletes all wait expectantly for the start of a race at a SM East meet. 5. ### Anonymous coach deals with school travel hassles

Hired only three weeks prior to the new school year, Coach Steve Nelson was faced with the challenge of training a boy's gymnastic squad. "You've never heard of Coach Nelson?" Oh, well, that is understandable because he spends his seven hour day not at South, but a Nallwood Junior High as a gym teacher. "Coming to practice after putting in a seven hour day at another school was both hard on me and the boys. That could of been an important factor in the year's outcome," commented Coach Nelson. Yet, all in ail, the team had a commendable season, with one member going to state. Scoring for the team was Captain Jeff Christian executing all-around Kelth Johnson with his floor routine and Victor Jacobsen on rings and vault. Also scoring was Dean Dahlquist on side horse and Richard Tomlinson on high bar. Injuries played a big part in the teams scoring. Dan Johnson, a strong all-around contender, Mike Black, having expertise on both floor and parallel bars, and three sophomores were all lost due to injuries early in the season. Regionals made up for a frustrating season when the boys hit most of their routines. Late comer Karl Frenkel executed the highest vault score, sending him to the state competitions. Coach Nelson is looking forward to next season where he will be able to get to know the guys better and have more time for preparation

'Seventeen is enough'

"O.K., girls, this is a beat Kathy Ross vault," commanded Coach Bille Rice, as the girls sprinted toward the vault. Only this was not to be an ordinary vault, for it entitled the seventeen girls to outdo one of the best vaulters in the Shawnee Mission District.

Faced with many challenges like this from other schools, the girls pulled, stretched and flipped their bodies into tip top shape by working out after school from three to five. At five, the team would eat dinner together, share their troubles and accomplishments, and return to school only to put in more time from six to eight.

The sister team of Kelly and Marsha McKessor accounted for most of the team's scoring, always dependable in their routines. Yet many of the girls did their fair share. Amy Guess constantly was able to hit her routine on the balance beam and bars, and Dana Reeves also specialized in the beam and on her floor exercise. Jenny Randall and Nikki Hoffman both excelled on the vault, and Nikki was able to hold her own on the floor. All four girls, constantly in the top three, were sent to state; Marsha McKessor, earned second in vault, and Jenny Randall finished sixth. After all, as the girls and coach would say, "Seventeen is enough."

6 1. Marsha McKessor pauses in a moment of reflection. 2. Jenny Randall uses strength and skill to control her form on the vault. 3. Girls Gymnastics—FRONT ROW: Amy Guess, Laurie Desmarteau. SECOND ROW: Holly Wright, Jill Grossman, Nan Newkirk, Jenny Randall, Nancy Needham, Hillary Goldman, Marsha McKessor. #### 'Coaches-who needs 'em?'

Coones' Cronies, Straps, Lohr's Lunatics or Mallin's Maulers mean? They mean that intramural basketball has struck again. Each year, it seems that two teams always end up battling for the title and this year, in the senior division, the race was close. The Hares and the Coones' Cronies, whose captains are Larry Hare and Mike Coones, each struggled to get the lead.

Intramural basketball provided a relief from regular activities. For the studious, intramurals provided a chance to show athletic ability. There are no tryouts for teams so anyone

What do the names Hares, can have the satisfaction of playing competitive basketball. For jocks, intramurals provided a time for less serious competition since intramurals are for fun rather than glory. For everyone, intramurals are a way to spend individual time in sports rather than in an environment where a coach calls all the plays.

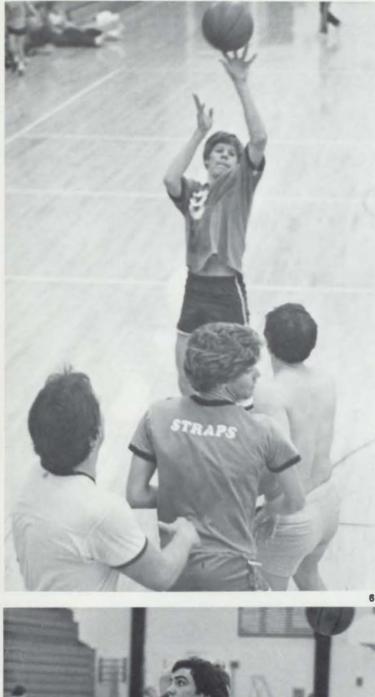

Many people participated in intramurals. Of the twenty-eight teams, four of these were all girls, and two teams were all faculty. This showed a tremendous enthusiasm for the program as well as interest in showing how individuals can have fun and still produce results.

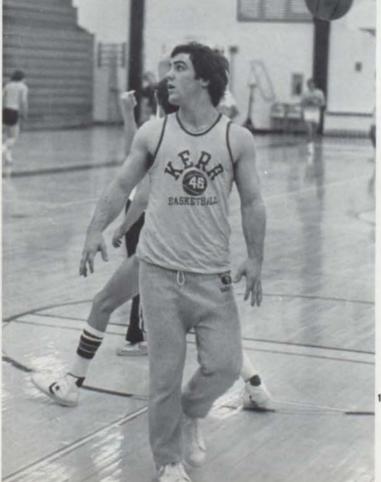

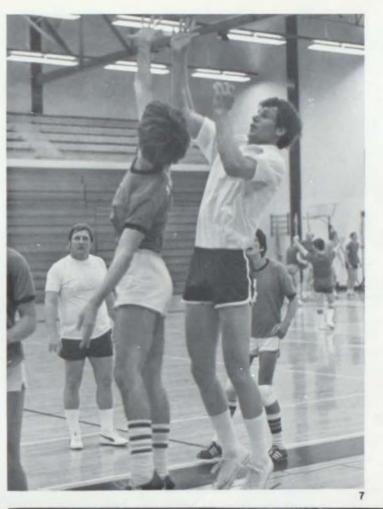

1. Quick-eyed Todd Parsons searches for the basketball. 2. At half time, Jeff Bilyeu and Kelly Hayes pose as Ceasar and Cleopatra. 3. Mr. Charles Nichols is exhausted after a hard game against some students. 4. Coones' Cronies gather to show their spirit. Todd Parsons, Mike Coones, Craig Bramscher, Dave Kurtz and Tim Parsons have got their number—it's one. 5. Rapid Mr. Ron Millard goes for broke with a flying catch. 6. Fred Olsen shoots over the heads of angry pursuers. 7. As Mr. Ken Johns looks on, both he and Mr. Bud Peterson look worried about a jump when a mere student can jump as high as Mr. Peterson can. 8. Gary Klein takes a time out to tie his shoe.

The midst of homework, afters school group meetings and seven class periods, there was still always time to make a friend. Sophomores entered in the fall, afraid of starting the next three years in such a big school, while the seniors lived with ambivilance, both happy and sad about their last year at South. At the end of the year, promises to keep in touch were spoken fluently. But most kids realized that it was all just wishful thinking and that eventually we would all be going our separate ways.

MERGING

1. Finding the strains of A.P. English too much for him, Alex Gonzalez loses it completely. 2. Allison Orlich and Carolin Coones enjoy one of the many pep assemblies that were added to the school's itinerary after a year's absence. 3. Helping to catch the "big ones", is Garth Krizman's job in Field Tech. 4. The sophomore green team catches their breath as they listen to half-time instructions. 5. Nikki Hope and Kelly Mach swing to the music of "Storm" at Homecoming. 6. During the Homecoming pep assembly, Bob Rafferty wonders what happened to his kiss. 7. Patty Lee eyes her oncoming shot and prepares with a forehand swing. 8. Having to eat lunch in the cafeteria keeps Doris Haber giggling all through her meal.

Kids will be kids

Kids have not really changed. In the thirteen years that South has been open, it has housed trouble makers, loners, go-getters, athletes, actors, rowdies, and all kids in-between.

The fashions have gone from mini, to maxi, to midi; the hair has turned fro from long flowing locks; and everything that was once far out, now kicks.

The fads have come and gone, but all in all nothing changed over the years. In '78 the 717 seniors still thought they were the greatest; the 720 juniors still tried to compete with the seniors; and the 694 sophomores were still put down by the upperclassmen. To the 2,131 kids who made up the student body, the old tradition of class competition will never die.

SOPHOMORES Soph budget bulges

"When it comes to the unique fundraisers, what's left?" Puzzled sophomore officers face this question every year, but never at the disadvantage of having only two heads instead of four, as it was for Leigh and Kelly.

However, Leigh Morrow, president and Kelly McNearney, vice-president, did not let that stop them in their efforts to raise money for the '79-'80 prom. "It's a really big responsibility, because the more money we raise, the better it will be for the '79-'80 junior officers," commented Leigh.

Such things as candy and folders with the Raider emblem were furiously peddled among the classes, as Leigh and Kelly strove to fulfill all their campaign promises.

1. The Sophomore Class officers, Leigh Morrow and Kelly McNerney, discuss an upcoming fundraising project. 2. Kelly McNerney demonstrates her leadership responsibilities while working at her part time job at Harzfelds in Metcalf South. 3. Leigh Morrow uses the Patrlot to help her keep abreast of what her sophomore classmates are up to. Both girls found it necessary to try and meet all of the campaign promises made to their classmates during the elections.

Kids romp in woods

No, sophomores were not any smaller than usual this year. Children from local elementary schools visited the Shawnee Mission Environmental Science Laboratory to explore nature in action. Tramping through the woods, chasing butterflies, fishing in the pond and screaming upon the discovery of one of those little black and yellow snakes added excitement to an otherwise ordinary school day. After an extensive trip through SMESL, students carried more insight of the environment home with them than they had before their field trip.

1. One young SMESL-ite (a local elementary schooler) apprehensively examines his catch which he landed during one of his visits to the outdoor science lab. 2. The children get a taste of raft fishing while guide Mike Inman supervises. 3. Mike advises his two visitors of the best angle for fishing. He was a member of the field tech class. Students in this class toured the elementary students.

Before the football game against SM East, Raiders were inspired with the poster, "The South will rise again, to make the least of East."

1. A poster depicts hopes for an upcoming football game against Harmon. 2. All South's activities are shown through an artistic collage done by art students. 3. Chanticleers advertise for their Fall Concert which was held on Halloween night.

Meet me in the park

According to Mr. Bill Tiegreen, "Smoking is not allowed anywhere on school campus." However, on any given day, a group of students refuse to believe that this could apply to them. Basically known as "the park," this "on campus" hangout was the place to relieve a sudden nicotine fit before school or between difficult classes.

When freezing weather arrived mid-year, some students either had to face the shakes, nervous nail biting, rapid gum chewing or suffer frozen bodies from braving the elements. Legal or not, "the park" was the place.

1. A light pole proves to be a good support for early morning smokers. 2. For Paul Sorrentino the "Park" is not just a place to grab a quick cigarette, but a place to converse as well.

When we were little ....

As little kids, everyone played with dolls and toy trucks, and built forts with mom's blankets and furniture. Those things were really fun until it was time for that daily occurrence, the nap.

But now, as big kids, some students got to play with building blocks along with their friends in the child development course, and the nap they took was one that they wanted, instead of needed.

Boy, it's great to be grown up.

1. Jenny Buskirk and Joanie Van Lammeron intrigue themselves with the building of a wooden toy designed for six year olds. 2. While being observed by a child development class, a little girl has fun blowing a bowl of bubbles. 3. Conversing with small children is just one of the many things Doreen Scalco has learned from her child development class lectures and discussions.

They'll get 'em yet

A.O. A.O. A.O. the audience chanted until Amos Otis completed his round at bat. Then the fans stuck their faces back into their hotdog or ice cold beer.

With such a winning season, Royalmanla seemed to hit Kansas City. Many Raiders took in nightly home games, but absenteeism from school was extremely high during the week of the playoff games. No, no one was sick. That came after the Royals lost the playoffs to the Yankees for the third year in a row.

"Well, there's always another season," said some optomists, in reference to a fourth shot at the American League West title and the World Series.

1. George Brett calmly awaits the next play of the game from his favorite position, third base. 2. In the home game against the Angels, Pete LaCock waits on deck before hitting his game winning double. 3. Paul Splittorff winds up for the pitch at one of the night home games. Splittorff finished the regular season with a 19-12 record.

East pulls snow job

One morning, students were greeted by what was called the greatest T-P job ever pulled. The 600 roll wrapping, to which even the SMESL and auto tech parking lot were subjected, was a bi-product of the East Lancer "Phantom Cristos," who would not even spell their name because "we aren't admitting to anything." The job was reported on KY-102's "Slice of Life" show, and it did cover South's walkways, (and trees and windows) but one wonders if even Cristo would want to claim this one.

1. East not only decorated the campus, they also hung Tim Parsons in effigy. 2. It was estimated that the East vandals spent approximately $406.40 on their decorating escapade. 3. A beautiful display of how seriously the East Lancers feel about a football game greeted the Raiders when they arrived at school on Thursday prior to the big game, which the South eleven won handily, 41-6.

Pep rallies spirit

Sauntering down the hall from the gym, he suddenly recognized the sound of beating drums far off in the distance. "What could be going on at 7:30 in the morning?" he muttered to himself. Moving in closer, he noticed a large mass of students encircling the front hall. In an attempt to get a better look, he sneaked cautiously around the throng. BANG! A lethal flag of a flag team member rapped him on the head. Resorting to the ground as a means of survival, he tunneled his way towards a circle of light. From between the forest of legs, he saw spirited cheerleaders, pep band, and green and gold wall decor. AH-a Friday morning pep rally, that's all.

1. Cheerleaders promptly begin the pep rally with the fight song. 2. Everyone waits patiently for the band to resume playing.

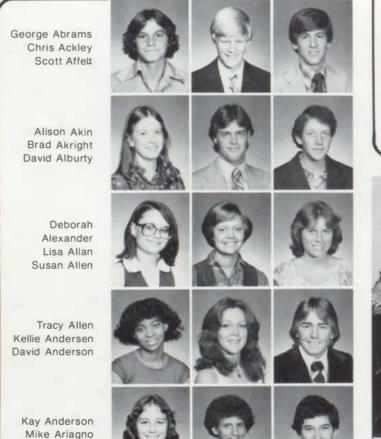

How time files ... JUNIORS

For junior class officers Laurle Samuelson, Karen Samuels, Julle Cornellson and Eddle Speer, a timer started the day of their election. These four students had approximately seven months to raise money, print invitations, find an appropriate location and secure a band in preparation for the junior-senior prom that was held on May 5.

Leawood Country Club, which the officers chose as the location for the formal, added an elegant aire to this social event. Many hours were spent on the project by both officers and committee members. They succeeded in making the late night affair an evening for the junior and senior classes to remember, as many of those present watched the sands sift all too quickly through the hourglass that night.

1. The juniors were blessed by two "swinging officers this year, Laurie Samuelson and Julie Cornelison. 2. Eddie Speer and Karen Samuels dive conscientiously into their work (and the Leawood Country Club pool.) The country club was chosen as the site of this year's junior-senior prom. 3. Laurie Samuelson, Karen Samuels, Julie Cornelison and Eddie Speer really had to truck to get this year's prom off on schedule.

Spirit starts hara

The cheerleaders, yell-leaders, Pep Club members and faculty members arrive in front of the school, awaiting the bus to take them to the game.

"Where's the bus?"

"I don't know. It was supposed to be here 15 minutes ago."

Everyone becomes anxious and a little hesitant. About 15 minutes later, the buses roll into the parking lot. "It's about time."

"Now what am I going to do? I just called my mom and told her to pick me up!"

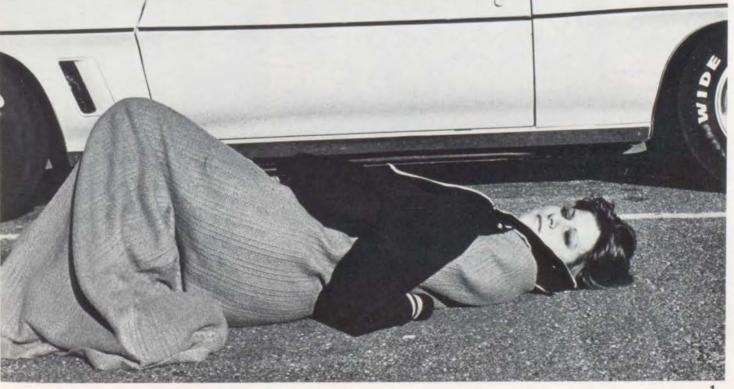

"Leave her a note on the post and tell her that we're off to the game."

1. Proving waiting for a pep club bus can be a long and tiring experience, Debbie Overstreet takes a short nap. 2. Yell leaders, cheerleaders and Raider fans are all smiles once the pep bus arrives.

Friendships knotted over Andy's story

Acting is not all that goes on in the Little Theater. Friendly shouting and chicken fights occurred in order for actors to develop team spirit and get to know one another.

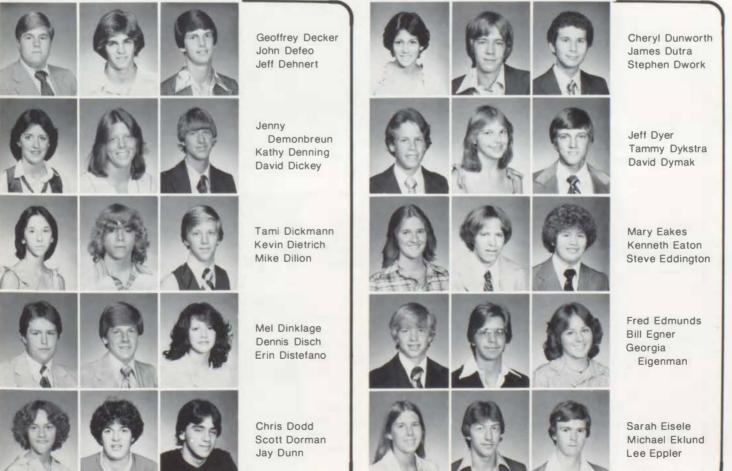

"Everyone got along reasonably well from the beginning, which is unusual," said Mr. Gerald Snider, director of the fall play Androcles and the Lion.

Cooperation is only one facet of acting in this type of play, spontaneity is another. Along with adapted lines from George Bernard Shaw's comedy, one liners relating to school life were interjected.

Zannis, who acted as props throughout the two-part play, also got into the act by dancing through the aisles of people in the audience and by adding screams, hisses and applause when necessary.

Cooperation, spontaneity and acting ability were vital to Androcles and the Lion since it was an actor's play and not a playwright's play.

1. Dressed quite unappropriately for his part as the captain, Stu Rakely listens with haughty pride for John Mathews. 2. Horror filled Steve Grimm looks on as Stu Rakley angrily runs his sword through John Pilkington. 3. Steve Davis, Doug Jones, Ann Roy-Paulson and Marjorie Michelson practice bizzare exoressions.

Cliques advertise

There has been a revolution in the United States. The lowly tee shirt, once doomed to a position under a regular shirt and therefore out of view, has become an object of pride and admiration by Americans everywhere. With a tee shirt you can show your interests, brag about where you've been, or even advertise your place of employment. They let you show a little of your individuality in a world of conformity. Where even more individuality is needed, technology has provided an answer, specialized tee shirts. The "we print anything" syndrome has hit, and Americans are rushing to express themselves. Intramural teams make use of printers to create their uniforms, some complete with pictures and nicknames for that highly specialized touch. Organizations such as the cast of the musical joined the trend and spread a variety of color throughout the school.

1. Concert tee-shirts are popular, and like many others, Debbie Gornetski wears one from STYX. 2. Although Susie Shanks and Lynn Matthews did not "shoot the hoop," they let it be known that they are managers of the girls' basketball team. 3. Teresa Benz's father got in the act and created his own Pacesetter tee-shirt.

Cheers pep up band

The band set a goal to be the proudest, most unified and spirited group in the school. To achieve this end, Paul Bastin, band president, made up several cheers to be used at all-school pep assemblies. "We're the Rompin' Stompin' Raider Band. No. 1 across the land. We're the best at what we do, and we think you should know it too," is the band's personal cheer and has been used at all competition events. A cheer encouraging the football team to show their brawn is also one of Paul's creations. The cheer's function to bring the band closer together, as well as pep up and support the other school organizations.

1. Paul Bastin enthusiastically starts a "Rompin' Stompin' Raider Band" cheer during a break in the action. 2. Rob Johnson catches his breath after a rigorous halftime performance. 3. Ready to begin a drum roll, Scott Hamlett looks to Bob Merdian for a cue.

Go west young men

Go west young man. With boots, cowboy hats, flannel shirts, long underwear and faded jeans, the males seemed to be cowboys without horses. They also appeared as mountain climbers without mountains as they wore the big waffle stomper boots with down vests and jackets. A century ago, the new collarless shirts would have made plausible night clothes.

For the classier look, the men sometimes wore full length coats with cashmere scarves.

Nichols finds time

During his first year as a high school principal, Mr. Charles Nichols tried to get to know students. He often roamed the halls between class periods greeting Raiders with a friendly "hello." His attendance at concerts, athletic events and everything else became predictable. Why did he take so much time from a busy schedule? "I like to see kids do things well. We have a lot of talent here at South."

1. Mr. Charles Nichols encourages spirit at the bonfire before the SM East game by throwing a dummy into the fire. 2. StuCo representatives Mike Titens and Karen Glickstein discuss the can food drive for needy families staged during the holiday season. 3. Leslie Brown, senior, readies herself to accept a medallion from Mr. Nichols at the revamped honors and awards ceremony held Oct. 18. 4. Looking over the morning announcements, Mr. Nichols previews them before reading to the students at the beginning of second hour.

The infamous haunted house—what would Halloween be without it. As much as a part of the holiday as trick-ortreating is to the younger crowd, thousands of both young and old go through the ritual of scaring themselves to death. Aunt Effles, House of Horrors, Chamber of Terrors and others opened up to the eager scare-seekers with the usual artifices. Claustrophobic walls that closed in on them, unknown hands that grabbed them in the dark and gruesomely decorated rooms, all formed a part of the haunted house adventure. As many students grow out of trick-or-treating, the haunted house soon takes the place as a form of entertainment.

1. Transylvania Station peers through eerie foliage on a ghostly night. 2. Mr. Phil Larson displays his ghoulish ways. 3. The Count and his Lady pose for a family portrait.

We're making tracks

"Hey, did ya hear about our new track?" "No, what about it?"

"Well, instead of a cinder track, like the old one, it's made of one foot of dirt, asphalt, and sesolite, topped with one inch of rubberized asphalt. It's a surface identical to those at state meets, so it should bring down the runners' times. Also, it doesn't have all of those puddles after heavy rains."

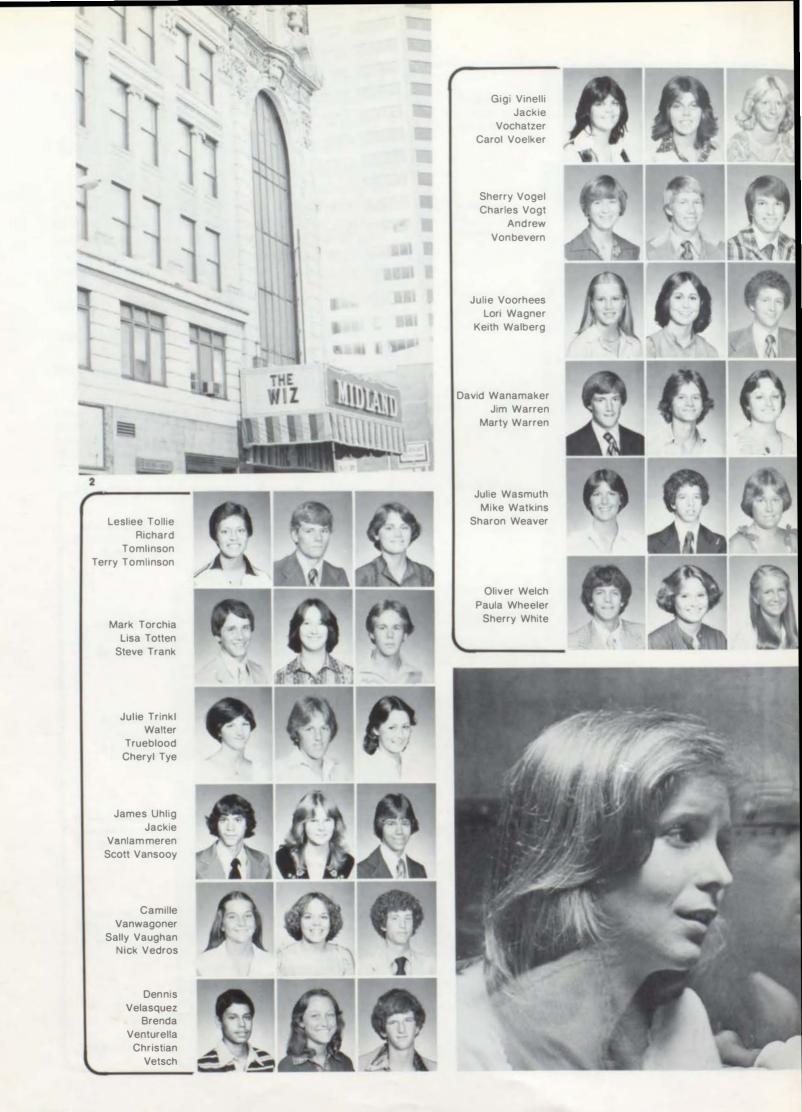

"But what about Homecoming ceremony and our mascot?"

"They're gone forever. The hoof prints and tire tracks would ruin the asphalt surface."

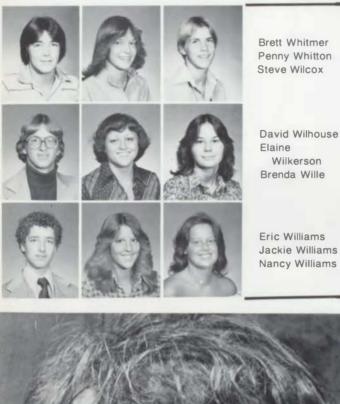

"No more Raider on horseback at games or cars at the Homecoming ceremony?"

1. Although a track is for running on, only South harriers are actually allowed to run on it. The football players run across boards laid down for them because their spikes would damage the track. 2. South sports a new track at a total cost of $91,250. It was constructed over the summer and was designed to bring down the runners' times and injuries.

Picture this, Friday night—no school game, no parties and no homework. Now in that picture, print the words, "What is there to do?". Finally, take that picture and answer that question with, "Why not go see a current movie."

Most of us are finding ourselves going to more and more of them each passing year. Grease, starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, and National Lampoon's Animal House were tops on the list, with Chevy Chase and Goldie Hawn running a close second in their hit of the year, "Foul Play".

1. Visited by his girlfriend in a Turkish jail, Bill Hayes (Brad Davis) stars in "Midnight Express." 2. "The Wiz" is shown exclusively at the Midland Theater in Kansas City. 3. Micki Goldberg and her co-worker sell a ticket for "Foul Play" to Karen Glickstein.

Seniors

Pres. uses man power

Elected in the spring of '77, the Senior Class officers collaborated and came up with a goal. This goal was not just to plan the senior talent show and the ten year reunion, but to do even more. Last spring much doubt was expressed as to the effectiveness of these four Raiders. But according to President Lillian Davis, "We worked quite well together, and got things accomplished." These four good friends with compatible personalities indeed got the job done.

Our time here is short, and therefore precious, waste it not through a dim outlook. Accept and embrace your sorrows, through them may you truly see joy. Learn from your mistakes, and above all else, live each day to its fullest, embracing every joy as though for the last time, in short, simply love. —GB Patrick Thanks Mom and Dad, I love you

Everyone rer dog world" there." Ex jobs th that Everyone remarks, "It's a dog eat dog world" or "it's a jungle out there." Even the parttime weekend jobs that most of us had, taught us that the outside world is demanding and tough, but the older we get, the more it becomes inevitable. Although it is hard to believe now, our school years really may be the best years of our lives.

Viking's final exam for the graduate.

I will always need clothes and therefore could use a sewing machine.
I should have a machine that weighs under 20 lbs., so I can take it everywhere.
I need a machine for a small apartment or a dormitory room.
My machine should sew everything from canvas seat covers to delicate lingerie.
My sewing machine should be built to last,
warranted for 25 years.

If you answered "true" to most of the questions above, we've got the perfect graduation gift idea. The Viking's 5610 portable sewing machine. It's the first lightweight that doesn't take sewing lightly. Makes more stitches than most heavyweights. Never needs oiling. Refuses to jam. And like the rest of the Viking family, it's downright rugged. In fact, chances are your Viking 5610 will still be going strong when your daughter graduates. Want to see how it works? See us.

Bones of the L.G.'s Final Days

- 1. A final performance in the Liquid Gold tradition.
- 2. We've lost our most important parts.
- 3. The second coming of the Liquid Gold.
- 4. As we ponder our loss, minds drift to the Angels of Drill Team. (They never missed a beat.)

Special thanks goes to all of the individuals whose time and effort made the 1979 Heritage a great triumph. Among those people are: Paul Murphy and the other photographers for the pictures in opening section.

John DeCloud and Keith Timberlake of DeCloud Studios for all of their help with the student body pictures and special portraits we needed. Also, Than Castle who was always as close as his phone when there was picture trouble.

The people of Shawnee Mission South who provided us with a reason to recapture the year.

A very special thanks goes to Mrs. Judy Hoskins, who knew the words "We'll get it done," but not the words "I give up."

Last year, when Allison and I found out that we were the only two returning for the next year, we went into a mild state of shock. Everyone actually laughed at us and hinted that it was impossible. Luckily, we were both just crazy enough to believe we could do it, so we picked our staff and prayed a lot over the summer.

Now the year is done and all of our little secrets will be found out. I'm sure some of our ideas will be rejected by many, but in my opinion, we did our best. This book took a big chunk out of my senior year, but I can't think of any way I would have rather spent that time. To all of the Heritage Staff-I want to thank you for the time, energy and patience that you put into making this book the best. To me, it is the best because it's ours. Yes, we will hear of all the mistakes we made, and I'm sure the compliments on the book will be scarce. Just remember, though, the pride we can carry with us in knowing that we have given the year of '79 to the student body should make our mistakes seem very trivial and our efforts all worthwhile.

To all of you guys coming back-hang in there. Giving up is not a Heritage tradition. Mrs. Hoskins-there is nothing more I can say to you. I know I speak for the whole staff when I say that the time and dedication you have given South publications is above and beyond the call of duty. Finally, to the student body-Within these pages I give you 1979. I do sincerely hope it is what you have been waiting for.

For over a year I have lived and dreamed about yearbook. Not a single day passed that seemingly impossible problems didn't present themselves. Somehow all of those unanswerable questions were answered and we finally got it all together.

The book is finished - the goal attained! And now it's time to say thanks to:

the Heritage staff - I hope that you feel the same excitement as you hold this book in your hands as I do. You all have done a fantastic job.

Mrs. Hoskins - What can I say but that you have guided us through an impossible task, that without you could not have been accomplished?

I hope that to all of the students this yearbook will be something special and meaningful, not only today but in years to come when it will recall memories of the hopes, joys and tears of this past year.

Now as we, the class of '79, move on to graduation and head our separate ways, we discover that this is not the end, but the beginning. There will be many directions to travel, and I hope that in the future our paths will cross again. Whatever the future holds for each of us, we know that Route 79 does truly lead to many highways.

As our high school career is brought to a close, we glance back for a while and shed a tear on its end. But as the tear runs down our cheek, we look at the new beginning.

A new decade is on its way, bringing new triumphs, hopes and dreams for all of us. As we leave South, we take the seventies with us. They will always remain as a part of us, and some of us will never want to leave them, afraid to try something a little more difficult.

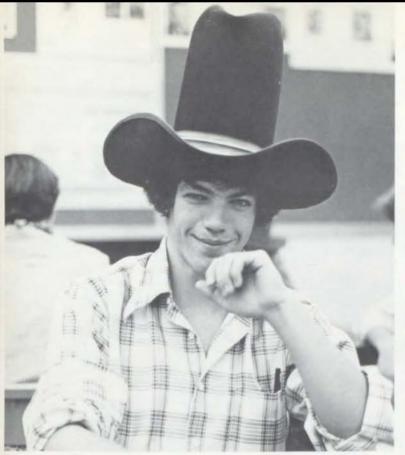

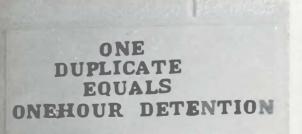

But out with the old and in with the new. The eighties are just around the corner and there are many roads waiting for us to travel.

Years from now, we will think of these days and reminisce on the trivial problems that plagued us, like the test third hour or the crowded cafeteria. We will just smile and keep traveling on . . . looking ahead . . .
