

SACHEM

The hopes of Youth, like smouldering
fire,

From darkest depths we see aspire,

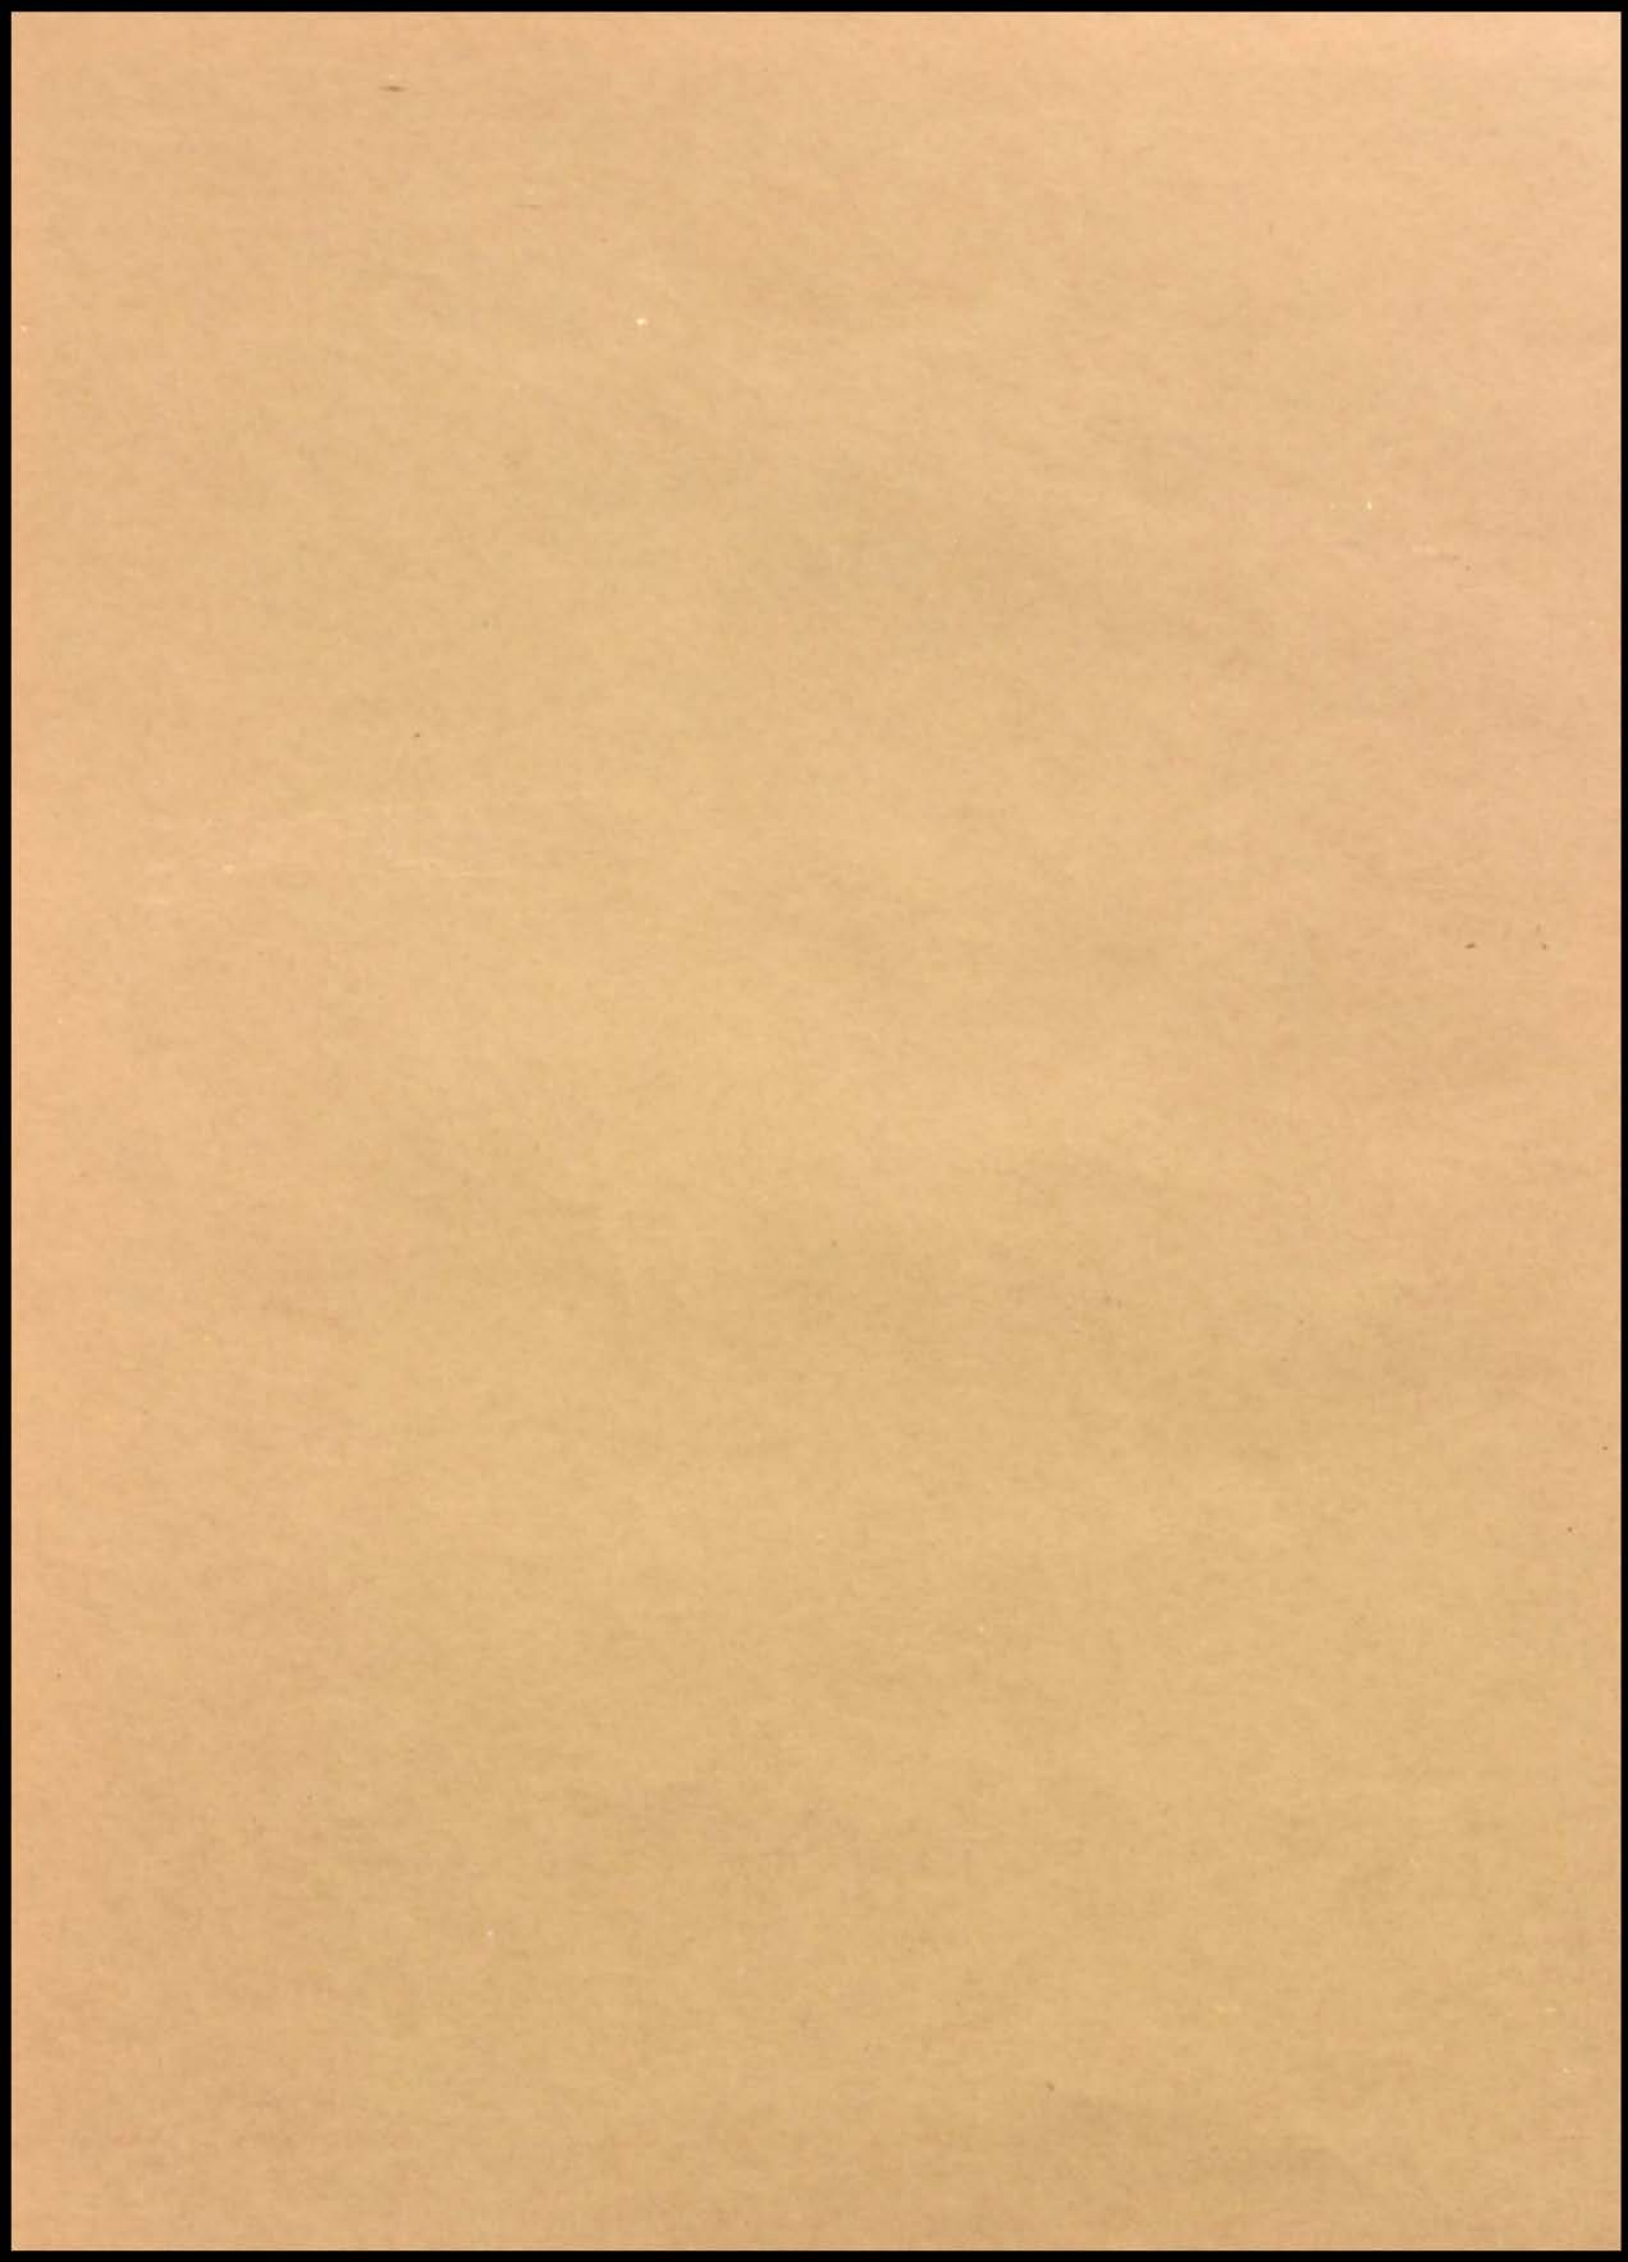

Spurred on by some divine desire

To conquer, triumph, and acquire;

And in their aims, so to inspire

The lives of all to something higher.

Dedication

To Youth and Fellowship, through ages past,
Forever striving, we would give new power—
A strength we see increasing every hour
And growing to its greatest heights at last.
To Youth—a living challenge we would cast
To conquer circumstance, the world empower,
To Fellowship—a hope it may so flower
That e'en its greatest dreams may be surpassed.

May Youth and Fellowship with flags unfurled
Provide a peace triumphant to the earth,
And by their fine ideals and their worth
Implant and form a better, nobler world.
Thus, may these two triumphantly arise
And lift their glorious banners to the skies.

— Robert Hubach.

LAKE

Miss Ada M. Jones, a member of the Southwest Faculty, passed away last July. During her two brief years in our school, she instilled many of her fine ideals in all those with whom she came in contact. Love of beauty, language and literature seemed almost a part of her.

Miss Jones was loved by teachers and pupils, and she took the keenest interest in the problems of all those who came to her. The faculty and student body of Southwest pay highest tribute to her lasting memory and beautiful spirit.

Organization

Faculty and student body
Work together to attain—
Youth must seek for greater knowledge,
Higher hopes and heights to gain.
Fellowship with one another
Makes our efforts less in vain,
Guides us in co-ordination,
Lifts us to a higher plane.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

THE SOUTHWEST SOCIAL SCIENCE department embraces a wide field which includes courses in Civics, History of Civilization, American History, Economics and Sociology, subjects ranging from the study of primitive man to that of the vital problems of the present day.

This year the Civics course for the Freshman year is taught by Mr. Hood, Mr. Wesner, and Mr. Williams; History of Civilization by Miss Barnett, Mr. McKee, and Mr. Overman; American History by Miss Naomi Simpson, Miss Guyer, and Miss Barnett; and Economics and Sociology by Miss Guyer, Mr. Bryan, Mr. McKee and Mr. Wesner.

Three years of Social Science are required for graduation.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT at Southwest is composed of a staff of ten members: Miss Sara Van Metre, Miss Ursula Ash, Miss Clara B. McDonald, Miss Esther Schroer, Miss Anna Klein, Miss Eleanor Kleeman, Miss Cleora Hutchinson, Miss Catherine Neumann, Mrs. Alicia Seifrit, and Mr. Chaney O. Williams.

The English curriculum consists of four years of Composition and Literature and one year of Newswriting. Although only three years of English are required for graduation, a large number of students enroll for four years.

Included in the scope of this department are the two publications,—the bi-weekly newspaper, The Trail, and the school annual, The SACHEM. The Trail, which is supervised by Mrs. Seifrit, is carried on by the work of the newswriting class.

The SACHEM staff, directed by Miss Klein, is chosen by a contest in which dummies are submitted, and by class election. The annual is issued on Senior day and contains an excellent account of the school's activities.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT—Continued

Throughout the year various essay contests are offered to those students who aspire in the line of creative writing. Included in these are the "Sons of the Revolution," the "Jefferson," and the "W. C. T. U." Essay Contests. A great many Southwest students are interested in these contests, and Southwest has always been fortunate in placing in them.

Yearly the literary clubs hold a contest which is indirectly an expression of the work of the English department. The study of the poem, essay, and short story during the Junior year does much to prepare the contestants for the written events in this contest.

For the past two years the students of Miss Van Metre's classes have taken up voluntary collections to purchase a valuable assortment of pictures. These paintings and engravings adorn the walls of room 205 and add beauty to the school.

Through such enterprises as these, one can readily see that the students of Southwest are taking a deeper interest in the higher type of literature and art.

LANGUAGES

LATIN

The Latin classes have been taught this year by Miss Anderson, Miss Elliott, Miss McLeod, and Miss Morgan, of the Language Department, and also by Miss Larson and Miss McDonald.

FRENCH

The French classes have been taught by Miss Elliott and Miss McLeod. A full four years' course has been given.

SPANISH

The Spanish classes have been taught by Miss Morgan, Miss Patterson, who is also educational councilor, and Miss Powers. Next year a three year course will be offered in this subject.

GERMAN

After a lapse of several years, German has again been placed on the curriculum of Southwest. Only one class, taught by Miss Klein of the English department, was opened this year; next year the course will be extended to two years.

FOOTBALL

COACH HOUSE

YEAH, Southwest! Everything considered, this has been a mighty successful year for the Indian braves. The football warriors surprised everybody, including themselves, by coming out second in the race, instead of occupying the cellar position as was predicted. Yes, sir, those boys certainly turned the tables on our time-honored rival, East. Then, there was the basketball championship; but that's another story.

The school was somewhat dubious this fall about football prospects. Here we were, defending champions, with a group of light, inexperienced boys from which to build a team; and a team was built!

Coach House deserves a hand for his work with the squad this year, and not just this year, but for the past nine seasons that the Southwest Indians have fought on the field of battle. His first job coaching after finishing a supplementary course in Iowa University was at Westport. From there he came to us in '25 when he at once took up the job of building clean, honest character in the boys as well as training them in physical education.

Coach House has a mighty able assistant in this work in Assistant Coach Bishop. After trekking through Kansas and Oklahoma for six years, he finally crossed the Kaw to Missouri, also going to Westport before heading Southwest. Coach Bishop has charge of the second team boys, that is, the building up of material for future years. Luckily for Southwest, this important work has fallen into unusually capable hands. In 1930, his first year here, the football reserves tied for the title; in 1931 both his basketball and football clubs netted their respective championships. The Indians are certainly fortunate to have such a man in charge of their future warriors, as can be easily seen by the outcome of this year's season. Let's all give three rousing cheers for Coach Bishop!

COACH BISHOP

No matter how hard we try in any organization, it seems that never in our history have we been able to rid ourselves of the all important item of finance. All hail Mr. See! He is the one that looks after the wampum, sees that all we lusty Injuns buy tickets so our warriors may have the best equipment. As is usual in jobs of this sort, the task requires as much work and more worry than any other and receives the least thanks. Mr. See, in spite of the many handicaps that are piled upon him, always succeeds in making ends meet. If it were not for his fine work in the past, the football players would probably be wearing track suits; and heaven help the basketball and track teams then! This year, upon the meager response of the student body to the sale of basketball tickets, our wampum manager got right in the thick of the fight, trying to sell tickets, just as the team tried to win the championship. Victory was ours! Southwest has a deep feeling of gratitude for her "money-man"—Mr. See.

Of course, it is granted that no coach, even if he were a genius, could produce such unsurpassable teams as Southwest has had, were it not for the whole-hearted support and co-operation of the squad. This year in football, although the team lacked in weight, they made up for it by their smooth functioning teamwork with the coach and each other.

Southwest showed that it's brains, not brawn, that really counts! The team had the cool presence of mind and perseverance of Greek warriors; the smooth well-oiled machinery of the Roman soldiers; an air attack that proved invincible; a system of blocking, tackling, running, and passing that exasperated the enemy. Those line-men were midget power engines, once going. They stopped at nothing short of victory. Remember them?—Peltzman, Nelson, Bottenberg, Day, Michaelis, Underwood, Robinson, Bankson, Klein, Buehner. Everyone of them was an Indian brave, fighting with the whole heart to bring victory to the orange and black. Of course, it wouldn't have helped much if the line had opened holes and there were no swift footed ball-luggers to tear through for substantial gains. Southwest didn't have to worry about the backs this year! There was Monday at quarter, calling signals, directing plays, and carrying the ball with such crafty shifting that the eluded enemy was time and again completely baffled. There was Nigro to dash off tackle; North and Fulton to circle the ends; Wager to twist and turn on spinners through the line; and Burr to boot the ball squarely between the crossbars. But wait, the best is yet to come! Southwest had a group of kids this year that held down the wing positions in a masterly fashion. Jobes time and again eluded his opponent to break up enemy plays and stop the backs in their tracks. Kreske was as impregnable as a stone wall, ending all plays on his side of the line before the ball carrier would reach the secondary defense. "Stork's" toe pulled Southwest out of many a hole, as you will remember in the Manual game when the pigskin soared 89 yards. Valentine and Thomason were two swift footed Indians whose uncanny ability to snag passes concerned the enemy no little bit.

MANAGER SEE

The season opened with the combat between the braves and the time-honored rivals, Westport. One hard earned touchdown after touchdown was sufficient to bring home the tiger's scalp and victory to the tune of 7—0. In the second battle the Indians fought valiantly for four quarters, and all for naught. The Pirates stubbornly refused to yield to Southwest, and we just as stubbornly refused to yield to Paseo. The final gun ended all hopes of pushing across a score and the game closed 0—0. Who could ever forget that heated fight with East! East, the school that last year we licked in the final quarter by a desperate run, the school we most desired to beat again this year. The Indian rooters were jubilant when, after a few minutes of play, Nigro, behind perfect interference, dashed off tackle for a touchdown! East rallied, and by straight football plays and sheer force pushed over two touchdowns. The score stood 12—7. Southwest revived in the second half and an aerial attack netted a score to make it 14 to 12, in our favor. Hope was short lived! East, led by O'Neal, scored again and this time kicked goal, making it 19—14 with but a few minutes to play. It was Junior Monday who turned defeat into victory by his brilliant run through the entire East team, again perfect interference playing prominent part in success. The game was ours, hard-fought—deserved—21 to 19. In the fourth encounter Southwest came out victorious over Manual with the score 17—0. It is the last two games that proved the stumbling block to the Indian team. Central, the champions, handed us the first defeat in two years, and Northeast, by holding the team to a scoreless tie, cost us first place by half a game.

In recognition of their fine ability, character, and gameness, three players from Southwest were honored by being placed on the mythical all-star team—Charlie Jobes on the first eleven, and Harvey Kresge and Junior Monday on the second. These boys deserved every bit of reward they received. They were in there every second of the time, fighting hard, playing clean, and using their heads. "Stork" was at a disadvantage in the last two games, playing with a badly injured ankle, yet he stuck it out—there's grit for you!

Al Nigro, halfback, due to his outstanding running, and punting during the past season was elected captain for next year. May he lead the team to victory!

Although not top rating in the league games, the boys were crowned city champions in one respect. They received the Dartmouth cup, presented to the team with the best scholastic and performance rating. The crowning accomplishment of a successful season!

SECOND TEAM FOOTBALL

ALTHOUGH the younger braves did not win a crown this year, they have become rich in the experience required to develop a city-championship team. Throughout the season they showed the skill and flash that make real stars.

In the initial tilt Southwest swamped the Tigers of Westport by three touchdowns. Although they were not synchronizing perfectly, as it was their first opportunity to compete with others, the score, 18—0, is proof enough of their good work.

After an easy victory of Paseo, the Indians were severely tested in a contest against Pembroke-Country Day. Throughout the game the Ramblers had been leading up to the last three minutes to play, when, in true "story-book" fashion, Lee Smith saved the day by catching a pass from Byerly and running for a touchdown!

Following this exciting conflict, the braves went over to East where they skinned the Bears alive with the cutting victory of 13 to 0.

Only the touchdown scored early in the first period saved the Indians from a scoreless battle with the Cardinals of Manual. This game was probably the hardest fought one during the season and the reserves surely did their share of the fighting.

Perhaps a little fatigued from the previous fight, the younger braves did not do so well as they had earlier in the season. Although they held the Eagles scoreless until the last minute, there they slipped and let one of the Centralians make the score 0—6.

Here the uniforms seemed to grow extremely heavy from former scrimmages and the boys received disastrous defeat at the hands of the Vikings of Northeast, 7—13.

BASKETBALL

CAPT. THOMASON

CHAMPIONS! As the curtain falls, bringing to a close the most successful basketball season in Southwest's history, the orange and black floats supreme over all. It is with complete satisfaction that we look back upon the months of practice that led to the city championship and second place in the state tournament.

The season opened with brighter prospects than usual for the Indian cagers. Five of last year's players were back, around whom could be molded a fighting team. The forward positions were ably filled by Captain Phil Thomason and Dan Wager, a member of last year's second team. "Bud" Kresge, our old stand-by, jumped at center and then dropped back to a guard position with John North, another of last year's lettermen, while Bill Valentine held down the pivot post. Most of the grinding, steady play rested with these five boys who combined height, speed, accuracy, and teamwork to bring victory to themselves and the school. The work of the reserves, however, deserves notice, for it was they who answered in the pinches, whose moral support and loyalty to the team and coach were, to no small degree, responsible for the championship. Harry McFarland was for a part of the season on the starting line-up, especially when tight defensive play was needed. "Lawdy" Narr, a two-year letterman, Roy Toomey, "Al" Nigro, Junior Monday, Francis Galloway, and George Klein made up the remainder of the first squad.

At the start of the season the boys were faced with a rather trying situation. Sports writers had predicted that Southwest would be one of the two winning teams in the league, due to our showing in pre-season games with Rockhurst and the Alumni. We had a reputation to meet: we met it! From the first league game, which was with Westport, the team emerged successful by a one-point margin. Southwest fans went wild, when in the last minute North, who was destined to save more than one game, turned defeat into victory by a perfect goal from the free-throw line. Paseo offered little opposition to the smooth-functioning Indians, but the East contest was one of those hard-fought, defensive battles, which ended 10-7, our favor. Southwest rooters returned home discouraged after the defeat received at the hand of Manual, certain that all hopes of a championship were now lost. However, it is doubtless the result of that night's play that enabled East to come back and beat Northeast, and Southwest to do the same trick in good fashion to Central and the Vikings. Surely there is not a single Indian rooter who could ever forget that final championship contest with Northeast. It was a clean, hard-fought battle, with neither team ever more than five points ahead. In the last quarter the lead changed hands often, much to the anxiety of the crowd, to say nothing of the teams. Valentine and North scored to put Southwest ahead 23-20, with but a few seconds to play. The game was not yet over, as Northeast scored again, but fate was with us as the gun ended the game with the Indians ahead 23-22.

Four members of the first team received special honor for their outstanding play throughout the season. Bill Valentine was individual high scorer with 48 points and captain of the first all-star team,—a unanimous choice. Harvey Kresge was placed at guard on the first all-star team, while Phil Thomason and John North were named on the second team. A successful season, and well deserved!

The State Tournament served to increase the Indian's laurels, for they went straight through to the finals where, at length, they met their stumbling block. It was a tiring contest for the boys, unused to tournament play and little rest. Both the quarter-final and semi-final games were overtimes from which the Indians emerged victorious. The last game with Jackson, a far more experienced group, proved a little too much for the team, which had to be satisfied with second place. The season was ended—with victory! Two new trophies adorn the display case, a tall silver cup with the names of the team members engraved upon it, and a plaque, the reward of the state meet. It is with absolute pride that Southwest looks back upon the play of this year's team, and wishes those boys the greatest of success as they continue through the game of life.

SECOND TEAM BASKETBALL

THE young Indians did very well this year by finishing the season in second place. Although they received quite a jolt early in the program by the defeat at the hands of blood-thirsty Paseo crew, they were in a two-way tie at the last call and under only one other team.

In the first game of the season the reserve band of warriors swept clean the battle-ground of any lurking Tigers. In spite of the fact that the jungle inhabitants stuck pretty tight during the first half, the Indians were so determined to win that scalp that under the leadership of "Dat" Brookfield they tore off the Tiger's whole head and soared on up the score board to an altitude above that of the Bengals.

Following this smashing success, the exhausted victors were assailed by a cunning crew of Pirates that had swooped down on them from the Paseo. By the suddenness of this attack the Indians were almost thrown into their own graves, but a late rally spurred up their hopes for a victory. However, the Buccaneers had already secured too much booty to recover; so the great battle was lost.

While the first squad was recuperating in Independence, the aggressive youngsters took on the young cubs of William Chrisman and showed them how to play basketball. The Bear-cubs didn't seem to learn very fast, though, as can be seen by the score, 20-14.

After a good night's sleep, the "scalpin' flashes" tore limb from limb a baffled East team, 20-4. This was "Dut's" last game and he certainly left a lasting memory in the tilt.

Following this successful jaunt the "bravelets" trounced the blushing Manualites. In spite of their loss to Brookfield, their rebound recoverer and center, they told the Cardinals, who could recover rebounds and so forth, that they would take care of the ball for them the rest of the time—and they did!

At the close of the Northeast game the flags were lowered, lights turned off, and suits turned in with Southwest, although not on top, so close to the top that one could not discern the difference except by actual figures. By virtue of the experience that these boys gained in the past season, it is easily seen that Southwest will make as good a showing as any other school in the city next year.

TRACK 1933

SOUTHWEST usually is not as strong in track as in the other two major sports, but last year the Indians experienced a highly successful season. Happily several lettermen from whom great things were expected were back. Among them were Captain Bill Cortelyou, Wilbur Allred, Bob Fulton, Carl Christenson, and Harry Hagan.

The first meet of the season was the annual inter-class contest, which the Seniors won, but only after a hard fought battle. Among the good prospects discovered in this meet were Ladd and Christensen.

The Indians won easily by a score of  $67\frac{1}{2}$  to  $23\frac{1}{2}$  in their first dual meet with the East Bears. East was practically a two-man team composed of Van Duesen and Gene Potts. Southwest won seven firsts and the relay as against three firsts for East.

In the next meet, Southwest met and conquered her arch rival, Westport, with a score of  $54\frac{1}{2}$  to  $34\frac{1}{2}$ . However, the team was greatly weakened by injuries to Hagan, our star dash man, and Dan Wager, pole-vaulter.

The Indians won their third dual meet from Manual with a score of 83 to 8.

Paseo Pirates proved to be the first barrier of the track season by keeping the Indians from victory with a score of  $46\frac{1}{2}$  to  $44\frac{1}{2}$ . Although the team won five firsts and the relay, they could not secure the additional two points necessary for a triumph.

The city meet held on our field May 13th, found the Pirates successfully defending their title in a closely fought battle. The final totals of the teams easily show the sharp degree of competition, for there was but a margin of half a point between first and second place, and but  $5\frac{1}{2}$  points were between Southwest and the victory. Bill Cortelyou brought joy to the Southwest rooters when in the last 150 yards of the quarter-mile run he sprinted past Fell of Central and broke the tape for first place! Twice more during the afternoon the orange and black banner was raised aloft; once, when Ralph Eaton won in the broad jump, and again when Wilbur Allred tied for first in the high-jump.

An unusually large number of letters was awarded to the boys who had been out on the track all season, working hard and giving the team moral support, regardless of their own personal victories. Of the twenty-four letters presented, many went to Juniors, giving promise of a first-rate team, this year headed by Captain Bob Fulton.

Cash, D. Johnson, Galloway, Denebeim, Myers, C. Mitchell

TENNIS

SINCE the founding of Southwest in 1925, the athletic functions have taken an important place in the outside activities of our school. Southwest tennis teams are always able to find ambition and inspiration in the achievements of Junior Coen, a former Southwest tennis star, who has become nationally famous in this sport.

The call for the tennis tryouts at Southwest this year was met with widespread interest and instant approval. Forty-two doubles and fifty-one singles entrants participated in the elimination matches in order to win the right to represent Southwest in the city matches. The winning doubles teams consisted of Charlie Mitchell and Francis Galloway, Harold Myers and Walter Cash. Donald Johnson and Nat Denebeim emerged victorious in the school singles matches.

In the doubles, Mitchell and Galloway defeated East 6-1, 4-6, 6-1; Paseo, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4; and Central, 6-1, 6-4. They therefore went to the city finals where they were eliminated by Westport. The other doubles team, consisting of Cash and Myers, drew a bye in the first round; defeated Paseo 6-3, 6-3; but took defeat at the hands of Westport in the semi-finals, 3-6, 6-3, 5-4.

Johnson and Denebeim represented Southwest in the singles. Both unfortunately dropped out of the competition in the first round, Johnson being defeated by Central 6-2, 6-1; and Denebeim by Westport 6-4, 6-4. Those players winning letters this year are Galloway, Mitchell, Myers, and Cash.

WILLITS, CASH, UDELL, MCFARLAND, WATSON, WILKERSON, JONES

GOLF

THE first round of golf found the Southwest foursome out in front by the substantial margin of 42 strokes. Each succeeding week this lead was increased until it was well up in the hundreds. Before the final round was played the Indian team had the championship clinched, and competition, instead of being centered about first place, was directed toward second and third places.

Led by Ray Watson and Walter Cash, the team not only took the Interscholastic championship but also walked away with low scoring honors, Watson having the lowest total for the season.

Throughout the meet the Indians showed themselves to be the stars of the league, the entire team shooting consistently low. With the exception of McFarland, the team is composed of Juniors. These boys—Watson, Cash, Udell, Jones, Wilkerson, and Willits—will have an opportunity to improve their game during the summer months and thus return next year in top shape, ready to bring Southwest another golf championship!

Although golf is a minor sport, Southwest students each year are taking a greater interest in it. A try-out match is held every Spring to determine what boys will make up the team, and a promising group turned out this year, giving the Indians great hope for golf in the future!

GIRLS ATHLETICS

THE athletic department at Southwest offers a recreational and beneficial course, which gives each girl a chance to participate in her favorite sport.

Miss Bayne, instructor, aided by Miss Josephine Betz, leads the girls through an extensive, and extremely interesting course in basket-ball, volley-ball, baseball, folk-dancing and acrobatic stunts, which are indoor sports.

For those who prefer outdoor activity there are field hockey, baseball, and track. Once or twice a week girls are given the privilege of attending organized horseback riding classes under Miss Bayne's instruction.

The girls are also privileged to enroll in the swimming classes at Westport High School. Tennis instruction is given by Miss Bayne in the spring. Intra-mural tournaments are held in all games, thus giving girls chances to participate in competitive sports. The Athletic Department attempts to give training to all girls rather than to a small group with special talent, and also to give the girls pleasant recreation which develops coordination, muscular ability, and sportsmanship.

R. O. T. C. ACHIEVEMENTS

THE achievements of the R. O. T. C. are not only limited to bringing honor to the school, but are also of great benefit to the cadet in that they promote friendship, sportsmanship, and ambition.

The Southwest Battalion has made a place of high rank for itself not only in the city but in the Corps Area which comprises eight states.

First among the competitive activities are the rifle team matches. Southwest was represented in the team matches by Captain Beckerle, First Lieutenant Raymond, First Lieutenant Hammack, First Sergeant Long, and Corporal Rini.

This team, through many weeks of instruction and range firing under Sergeant Story's watchful guidance, prepared for its first competition. Its first participation was the City Match which was held in January between the teams representing each R. O. T. C. Battalion in the city. A Kansas City Team, composed of the best of the Kansas City R. O. T. C., won first place in the Seventh Corps Area. From Southwest were Lieutenant Raymond, Lieutenant Hammack, and First Sergeant Long. Lieutenant Raymond honored the school and the city by shooting high score in the Corps Area. Two men, Lieutenant Raymond and First Sergeant Long, received medals as a result of their work in the Seventh Corps Area Matches. Southwest next competed in the Hearst Trophy Match, and the City Team was one of the entrants in the National Intercollegiate Match.

At the annual R. O. T. C. Circus held in Convention Hall, April 13th, Southwest presented a number that placed the Battalion as one of the outstanding units in the city. The presentation of the Formal Guard Mount, one of the most spectacular and most intricate movements in infantry maneuvers, evidenced the fact that this unit is a superior drill organization and is quite capable of comprehending the most involved features of tactical operations.

Another of the competitive activities in which the R. O. T. C. Battalion participated was the Corps Area Inspection, in which the unit is inspected by a Regular Army officer. The final event of the year will be the annual Field Day, when each unit pits its intelligence and practical knowledge of drill against the equally determined efforts of all the other R. O. T. C. Battalions. In both these events the Southwest Battalion fosters high hopes of success which are by no means unobtainable.

Scholastic Activities

Students, scholars, youths of wisdom,
Though the crowds cheer not their name,
Still deserve a bit of credit,
So we designate their fame.
Writers, artists, actors, ever
Working with determined aim
Striving to the very highest
In life's great all-scoping game.

THE highest award for seniors is membership in the National Honor Society. To be eligible for this society, a student must be in the upper quarter of the class and have an average of 2.8 points with no F's on his records. In addition, for various school activities a certain number of points are given; no credit exceeding .5 of a point is counted, however.

The formal induction ceremonies were held this year on May 11, before a special assembly of the entire student body. It is agreed that this solemn, impressive service is by far the most inspiring of the school year. The small gold pin, with its torch of fire symbolizing the key stone of the society, Scholarship, Character, Leadership, and Service, which is presented each member at this time, distinguishes the wearer throughout the United States, for most accredited secondary schools have chapters of this organization.

Top Row: Jacobs, Olson, Williams, Lake, Wilder, Myers, Monsees, Werby, Nachman.

THE Art Honor Society was founded under the direction of Miss Flora A. Wright in the spring of 1933. Eligibility for membership in this society is determined by contest, each candidate submitting ten pieces of his class work from which one is chosen by judges for a "one-man" exhibit. Members must keep up a scholastic average of "M" in all subjects, as well as have talent in art.

The members of the club have been making this year a collection of sketches of sights in Kansas City, using churches, public buildings, and homes for a club album. In this way every member will have a sample of his work in the book to be kept throughout the years of the existence of the club.

OUTSIDE HONORS

*"Southwest, Southwest, we are faithful
Proud in vict'ry's song
May thy banner always lead us
On and over on."*

THIS year the students of Southwest have been faithful and her banner has inspired many to greater heights. Not only have present students won fame in the past two semesters, but also former students have seen "that banner waving high."

Many of last year's graduates have won scholarships to colleges throughout the United States. Nancy Jane Martin, Nancy Catherine Uebelmesser, and Bernice Burns are enjoying the benefits of Wellesley College, as the result of fine work at Southwest. Mila Hoover is attending Radcliffe College for the same reason. Joe Limb and Robert Anschuetz received scholarships to Washington University, St. Louis. Bill Jeffries is continuing his military training, which he so ably began at Southwest, at Kemper Military School on a scholarship. Helen Mary McLatchey also is attending Lindenwood College, on her own merit.

Donald Williams, cadet major of the Southwest R. O. T. C. and graduate of '31, has received appointment to the United States Military Training School at West Point. Frank Lynch, also of '31, will be wearing the middy next year for he has won an appointment to Annapolis.

Southwest has had a great share in the organization of student association of the University of Kansas City. Four girls, Florence Lee Kehl, Geraldine Klein, Virginia Collins, and Mary Alice Hockenberger, were given scholarships to this University, which Kansas City now is so proud to call her own. Virginia Collins was elected secretary of the freshman class. James Sorency, a graduate of '31, was chosen president of the sophomore class. Harry Kaufmann became editor-in-chief of the Crest, the newspaper.

But let us come to the present. Southwest has inspired, in each of the sixteen hundred hearts of its students, a desire for the better. This desire has been satisfied in many ways by some of the students. In the field of literature, Dorothy Diemer, junior, and Tom Carr, sophomore, wrote of Thomas Jefferson and his great theories of government to win first and second prizes respectively in the Thomas Jefferson Essay Contest. Barbara Mandigo, a senior, won second place in the Sons of the American Revolution Contest on the subject of the duties and powers of the Executive department under our Constitution.

Southwest has won fame in a rather unusual way in the field of dramatics. Three boys, Speed Stone, George Strothers, and Robert Cole, played minor parts in Shakespeare's "Macbeth" which was presented by Walter Hampden in Kansas City.

The athletic department did its share in bringing Southwest glory in the past football and basketball seasons. In football, Charles Jobs was chosen All-Star end of the inter-scholastic league. Junior Monday, quarterback, and Harvey Kresge, end, won recognition by being placed on the second All-Star team. On the All-City mythical basketball team, Bill Valentine was chosen captain. Harvey Kresge was also placed on this team. Second team honors are claimed by captain Phil Thomason and John North. John North was made forward on the team chosen from state tournament players. Harvey Kresge and Bill Valentine were chosen for the second team of this kind.

And so closes another tale of Southwest honors.

*"Southwest, Southwest, ever onward
Shall thy colors fly
Orange and black to all are sacred
Radiant in the sky."*

DECISION

By MARJORIE HANSON

Against the walls of the bluffs the frothy yellow waves rose and fell in sullen monotone. In furious swirls water rose in the fjords as if trying to encroach upon the safety of the tiny cottages situated along the Norwegian coast. The home of Widow Kjersti and her daughter was one of these, a low thatched hut on a clearing in the rocks and pines. In back of the cottage was a garden in which the two women were obliged to spend most of their time, eking out an existence from the soil.

Certainly the lot of the widow was a hard one despite the fact that her daughter was constantly at her side assuming as much as possible of the drudgery. Indeed, many of the neighbors had been wagging their heads, accusing Edelgart of disregarding her filial obligations. For hadn't she the finest opportunity of any girl for fifty miles along the coast, with Louis, the rich merchant's son, fairly eating his heart out for her? Hadn't he promised her a fine home in the city, and a chance for her mother to end her days away from the potato patch? But here she was, the undutiful wench, carrying on with that young Eric, a nice fellow all right, and probably able to support the two sufficiently well, but not nearly so fine a catch as Louis there.

However, recent events had altered this situation, Eric was no longer in the way, and the neighbors believed that the publishing of marriage bans for Louis and Edelgart would be only a matter of time.

On this windy gray morning Edelgart was down on the rocks to gather kelp which she and her mother would boil to feed the cow. Her basket was nearly full of the seaweedy stuff, and she straightened her back preparing to climb back to the cottage. On her return there would be the garden to hoe. There was always the garden—potatoes to be buried in the ground, the soil to be chopped with the blistering hoe—day after day. But mother Kjersti must not be obliged to bend her back at that task so often now.

Edelgart stared at the sea; its expanse was comfortless and leaden. Nothing was to be seen except the ashen ring of the sky falling on the water in one wide gloomy semicircle. How different it was from the sea of a few mornings ago, when the Samson launched for her first voyage. The green waves had sparkled beneath her bow as she rocked back and forth during the loading. Every sailor was working in order to be able to sail with the tide, putting the nets aboard, and hauling on crates of supplies. Everyone for miles around was there on the shore, because the sailing of a fishing expedition, with all its bustle and excitement, is a gala occasion.

Eric had recently found favor with the financier of the fishing expedition, who placed him second in command. He was standing in front of the pilot's wheel, proud and smiling. Edelgart watched him there surveying the activities with his ocean blue eyes, while the impatient sea breezes tossed the light hair back from his forehead.

Then they had set the Samson's white sails to the wind. Wives and mothers waved good-bye as the ship moved northward toward the Dufeden fishing grounds. Edelgart watched it all morning until it finally slipped into the clouds below the horizon.

But nothing remained of the joy of that bright morning. Before the ship had been gone many hours, the wind had risen, swiftly and furiously whipping the waves into terrible black mountains. All through the dark night the sea writhed and tossed while the rain beat savagely on the water, on the rocks, and against the little cottage. Before the storm which had so suddenly broken had run its gamut, a sudden dark realization settled over Edelgart, that what had been Eric's first voyage with the Samson was now his last.

When the Wotan came into port yesterday, the sailor's report of broken rigging floating on the water above the spot where the Samson went down, brought no obvious sign of grief from Edelgart. They needn't have told her; since the storm she had been as certain of Eric's fate as if she had been on the battered ship when its reeling bulk sank below the waves. Calm as always she continued her monotonous daily tasks, hoeing the potatoes, gathering kelp, preparing meals.

The neighbors' tongues were busy again. "She doesn't seem particularly sad."

"This Eric affair must have been only a flighty whim of the moment—"

"And now Louis—"

"She doesn't deserve her lot, the lucky girl, after delaying so long, gadding about with a fisherman that might get himself drowned any day of the year—"

"Old Kjersti can live in the city, too, he says, and have nice clothes—"

Edelgart shut her eyes and tried to imagine Kjersti living in the city. Once she had even questioned her mother on that subject, but heard only these words in reply, "Edelgart, your father was a seaman; your grandfathers and great-grandfathers sailed in ships, and their wives always lived by the shore."

But why should one necessarily live as ones grandparents did? True, at times when she stood on the rocks, her hair blowing with the wind, hearing the waves pound beneath her, she knew that there was much she would miss in the city. But could she not soon forget these things? Could she forget the great gray waves that roll slowly against the shore, the graceful strength of ships—?

Enough time wasted! Carrying the heavy basket of kelp, Edelgart picked her way up through the rocks to the cottage.

At the gate stood Louis, half hesitating as to whether to stay. If Edelgart would rather not see him, of course he would go. But no, Edelgart's greeting was almost cheerful; her smile evidenced appreciation of his visit, as she came toward him.

He spoke laconically, "They are gathering driftwood on the shore."

She understood. The Samson had gone down only a few miles from the coast, perhaps after having struck the dangerous Kelfan Rocks, and now the tide was coming in. She took her shawl and accompanied Louis down the road.

Soon they were near the beach. Through the foggy air the hollow roar of waves crashing onto the shore, filled their ears. The shouts of workers were silenced into mere echoes by the heavy wind. A small group of women stood together on the sand watching the men in dripping oilskins as they pulled on objects beneath the waves. The water washed the sand from under their feet, making a sure footing impossible.

There was one cold stiff bundle they drew a little more carefully from the water and deposited on the sand. A body—lashed to a plank—in vain. Soggy yellow hair clinging to his forehead—. Edelgart turned from it. Well, at least there was no longer any doubt—.

Louis accompanied her on the walk back to the cottage. His attitude was that of silent questioning. Edelgart thought of the garden to be hoed. She thought of Eric. An important decision was expected of her soon.

These people of the sea are blunt and unemotional. Sentiments never delay or interfere with their decisions. Eric was gone—that was all, and Edelgart must shape her life accordingly, without hesitation.

She looked at Louis. He was not particularly handsome, in fact, rather unprepossessing, but he would be a good husband, always respecting her thoughts, just as he had respected her love for Eric. There was Kjersti to consider also. Sometimes Edelgart almost felt as if her mother would rather stay in the cottage. Oh nonsense, that was a foolish notion. No one would ever want to continue slaving in a garden as she does. "She probably hates the whole place," Edelgart told herself. "And I dislike it thoroughly myself." But she knew that wasn't true.

They stopped before the cottage gate. "You people have hard work to do," he remarked casually.

Silly how people always have to beat around the bush when they talk. Edelgart looked at him, comfortable and complacent, and pictured a home in the city where there would be no more potatoes to cultivate. Then she looked at the cottage, and Kjersti working in back. The ocean was beating its age old rhythm against the rocks, as she hesitated a moment.

"Yes," she responded, "but we belong here by the sea."

And leaving him she rejoined her mother in the garden.

WHIMSY

By BARBARA JANE MARSH

I wonder what the pale old moon would say
 If I should weave a crystal web from ocean spray,
 And then on one gay starlit night should fling
 Its jewelled loops about the milky wing
 Of some great sea-bird wheeling o'er the crest,
 With raindrops 'broidered on his satin breast.
 A quiet path he'd cleave through azure space,
 Winging upward with a flowing grace;
 And like a white and softly rippling veil
 My web would float behind in sparkling trail,
 Brimming o'er with treasures of the night
 Richly garnered from a silv'ry height.
 Clust'ring stars, like tiny golden bells—
 Their dainty music weaving faery spells . . .
 Feathered clouds, in soft disorder strewn,
 Like fragrant incense curling 'round the moon . . .
 As comets trace a glowing arc across the sky,
 Shedding gilded radiance on high,
 My great sea-bird would spread his wings and soar
 To ebon-shadowed sands of far-off shore.
 And there he'd spill in shimm'ring disarray
 The heaven's treasures in a bright bouquet.
 But when the dawn her damask robes had spun,
 The dazzling gems would fade beneath the sun;
 And only scattered pebbles would remain,
 To show where heaven's precious stars had lain . . .

ROBERT E. LEE

By SHERMAN PLATT

"A foe without hate, a friend without treachery, a soldier without cruelty, and a victim without murmuring." So Robert Edward Lee has been characterized and so he stands today in the hearts of his countrymen—a patriot of patriots.

Throughout his life, the outstanding characteristic of Robert Lee was his sense of duty and it was always to set the standard for his every thought and action. His foremost thoughts were always of duty—duty to himself, duty to his friends, to his superiors, to his country, to his God.

While at West Point, he felt deeply his duty to superior officers, obeying their every order to the letter and suffering great privations in order that he might do his duty. The motto there was "Duty, Honor, Country." This simple, yet difficult motto meant more to Robert Lee than anything else in the world. It was the basic principle for his code of living and he fully realized his obligation for its execution.

So boldly did he display his bravery, his sense of honor, loyalty, and duty, and his outstanding faculty for inventing ingenious tactics to outwit his foes in the Mexican War, that even General Scott predicted he would be the greatest military genius of his time.

Soon after the end of the Mexican War, Lee faced the greatest problem of his life. The Southern states had begun to secede and the Civil War, which he so dreaded, became an inevitable tragedy. His own state, Virginia, was threatening to secede and finally did. Lee was offered the position of Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army if he would remain with the North, but this did not affect his decision. His problem was one of duty—duty to his country, or duty to his state and friends. After careful consideration he decided on the latter, to fight against his country rather than his friends, relatives, and, above all, his native state.

Throughout the war, Lee fought a gallant but losing fight, yet he struck again and again with grim tenacity and undaunted courage at the Northern forces. He was neither elevated by victory, nor discouraged by defeat. The thought of his men, lying dead and wounded, filled him with grief, but still he refused to retreat until he could hold out no longer. Tremendously outnumbered in forces and supplies, he led his comparatively few, half-starved, exhausted men repeatedly against the enemy, determined to defeat them. His marvelous, almost supernatural, ability for creating ingenious military tactics, his constant hammering at the enemy, his undying faith in his men, and theirs in him, made the Northern losses many times those of the South; and yet, still more men and supplies continued to flow into the Northern army from an apparently inexhaustible source.

Lee, Christian that he was, prayed fervently, and taught his soldiers to pray, asking their Heavenly Father to succor them and give them the strength and courage to follow through, win their campaigns, and bring this destructive, apparently futile struggle to a victorious end. Nevertheless, the overpowering numbers finally became too great, and General Robert Edward Lee, his heart filled with sorrow for the dead and wounded, and his soul rent by the destruction of war, decided that surrender was the only remaining course.

Not many years had passed before Lee lay on his death bed, dying of a broken heart. And as his end drew near, this warrior faced death with that same composure and steady courage that he had displayed on the field of battle. While the elements outside raged in a storm whose melancholy seemed to denote the tragedy of his own life, his mind reverted to the front and he visioned clearly the glamor of battle, the succession of charges, the flash and report of cannons and artillery, the long lines of marching men, the utter horror, and at the same time the thrill of it all. Then, as he realized he was about to break camp for that last of all journeys, he feebly whispered "Strike the tent."

AFTER LOCARNO—WHAT?

By JANE EVEREST

One thousand, nine hundred, and twenty-five years had elapsed since the beginning of time recordance when seven diplomats met at Locarno. Many civilizations had gloriously risen and fallen into mouldy decay when this septet of nations agreed to eliminate war and further progress. Here in the small Swiss town, the representatives were divided between a memory and a hope. The memory was of the terrific hardships and disasters of the Late War; and the hope was that this horrible procedure would never again be repeated. As a result of this conference came the Pacts of Locarno.

These agreements differed from their predecessors and followers in that they reflected the feelings of the people as well as the sentiments of the governments. At Versailles, the minds of the nations were too biased and warped by the recent conflict to consider the situation correctly. By 1925, however, old wounds had healed, and men could look again with impartial eyes at the true state of affairs. Only time can test the validity of these documents and although nine years have passed, the far reaching results are yet forthcoming. Were the Pacts of Locarno, which started the people to thinking in terms of worlds instead of nations, a few decades too early? Were the peoples of the globe mentally ready for internationalism?

This idea of the world as one political unit is no novel suggestion. This plan was conceived in ancient civilizations by military leaders who dreamed of a universal empire under one sovereign. But the same difficulties and passions, namely fear and hate, that arose as barriers thirty centuries ago, are present today whenever international affairs are discussed. It is distasteful to realize that when a nation speaks of security, it always retains as an ace card that ancient practice of war. This condition will continue to exist, however, unless the international mind —built on national pride—begins to function.

By the term "international mind" is meant the habit of thinking in a broad sense of foreign relations and dealing in a cooperative manner with other nations. Before any work can be done in the field of internationalism, the peoples of the earth must be made to feel the urge and to see the necessity of a world union. Without this psychological condition, the governments will be helpless to carry on the work begun at Locarno.

The proposal to merely outlaw war is futile, for this truce would last only as long as human greed did not break down the fragile barriers. Nicholas Murray Butler, a famous exponent of peace, states: "If laws are to be truly effective, they must be not enforced—but obeyed." It is quite impossible to remove the causes of war; and if it were possible, new difficulties would undoubtedly arise. It is therefore not the aim of internationalists to attempt to eliminate the causes of disputes, but rather to bring about a feeling of tolerance and understanding among the various nations and to encourage the arbitration of difficulties.

If by streaking the world with blood, decisions could be rendered fairly and problems could be successfully settled, there might possibly arise an argument for wars. But those problems that are supposedly settled by conflict are only replaced by more and severer ones—and the loss of life and property has been in vain. The statement that "experience is the best teacher" is a fallacy when applied to the history of international conflict. The lesson of peace cannot be taught through war, for thousands of conflicts, with the accompanying horrible experiences, have failed to turn the barbaric minds of the world toward peace.

Formerly, only a relative few suffered death from spears hurled by the conquering invaders. After the Armistice, however, ten million men failed to respond to reveille and progress was proportionally retarded. The costs of another war, if a civilization were left to consider costs, would be tremendous. When you think of the problems that have followed in the wake of the great World Tragedy of 1914-18, it is easily realized that another conflict would mean universal suicide. Even if the physical and material fabric stood the test, the moral standards would be apt to crumble. It is as useless to figure the costs of another carnage as it is to compute the "price of the sunset"—neither are humanly possible.

It is the realization of the forenamed conclusions that has produced the Pacts of Locarno. Each year that war is avoided, the habit of world peace becomes more firmly fixed in the minds of the people of the earth. What the future will disclose can be told by no clairvoyant, and only the passage of time will indicate whether chaos and jealousy shall rule or whether Locarno's plan for a Utopia will materialize.

It is the younger generation that is going to bear the burdens of the last war and face the probability of others. Thus it is the citizen of tomorrow who must heed the plea for international compatibility and act accordingly. Therefore into the hands of modern youth is laid the portfolio of diplomatic arbitration and the world offers up a silent prayer.

THE Southwest Debate Team was composed of two girls and sixteen boys chosen from the public speaking classes to compete in inter-school debates on the subject: "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the essential features of the British system of radio control and operation." It was supervised and directed by Miss Bessie Gay Secrest.

The debates were held after school with the teams of four Kansas City high schools—Westport, Manual Training, Paseo, and Northeast.

A great deal of outside research work was necessary for the student to gain the desired knowledge of the subject; and while no decisions were rendered at any one of the debates, the experience gained in the preparation and delivery more than repaid their efforts.

Babara Stone, Virginia Kyger, George Strother, and Sherman Platt gave a debate at a luncheon of the Presidents and Past-Presidents Club on the subject: "Resolved, That women have attained equal rights with men." The negative side, composed of Barbara Stone and George Strother, was the victor.

Altogether the season was a successful and interesting one, the debates lasting over a period of two months.

MUCH of the success of all performances given on the Southwest stage this year has been due to the ceaseless effort of the stage crew. Southwest has had many fine assemblies in the past months and the five boys, composing the regular stage crew, have aided no little bit in making these a success. Their orderly work has commanded the attention of many of the students and faculty. The Sachus staff wishes particularly to express its appreciation to these boys who, by making the proper stage arrangements, have helped Mr. Harnden in taking the group pictures for this annual.

The two plays given this year were of a high quality and the acting was worthy of note. Not only did the actors perform their duty well but also did those "behind the scenes."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

The Music Department of Southwest includes three activities: Band, Choir, and Orchestra, all of which play an important part in the life of the school.

THIS year the band, under the able direction of Mr. Logan Zahn, is the largest and best that Southwest has ever had. At the football and basketball games, the all-school play, the Fathers and Sons banquet, the All-City Track Meet and several assemblies, the services of the band have been greatly appreciated. Besides these activities, it has played at the neighboring grade schools, the Armistice Day parade, the R. O. T. C. Circus, and the annual school concert of Southwest's Music Department. In co-ordination with the orchestra and Mr. Gafney's group of one hundred and twenty-five voices at the city-wide band contest for high schools, judged by three of Kansas City's eminent musicians, it received third place. The officers of the band are as follows: Ray True, President; Lester Milgram, Assistant Director; and John Green, Drum Major. It has an unusual system of discipline for its sixty-five members with a court of three members acting as judges.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Ray Gafney, has sung many places this year. These include the Teachers' Institute, the state conference of the Parent-Teachers Association, the open house night program of the local P. T. A., and the Athenaeum Club. The choir also sang at the Helping Hand, a charitable organization in Kansas City, for which it gives a program annually, the Music Department's concert and the Inter-High School Music Contest. The choir's services in assemblies were both appreciated and enjoyed.

The orchestra, also under the direction of Mr. Zahn, has played frequently for assemblies and has presented programs at various elementary schools in this vicinity. It also played at the Music Department's annual concert, the Senior play, and the Literary Contest. The president and Vice-President of this organization are Betty Miles and Dorothy Sword, respectively. A court system, similar to the one used by the band, has been employed. Dorothy Sword is the chief judge. However, as all of the members of the orchestra are well-behaved, which we presume they are, it has not been necessary to call a meeting of court very often.

The Music Department plays a very large part in the school activities and each year becomes a bigger and better organization. May all its years be as successful as 1934!

The Wa-te-he-ye group of Camp Fire Girls has been quite active this year. The girls had a prominent part in the annual Camp Fire pageant; they have had various parties and suppers; they have gone on hikes; and they have participated in out-of-town demonstrations. When you add this to the extensive work they have done on their ranks and on the birthday project, you can realize how busy they have been.

The subject for this year has been "hobbies." There were many discussions held about the various hobbies and several of the girls made lovely "hobby" notebooks.

The group has almost doubled itself in size; therefore, it was necessary for Miss Simpson to get someone to assist her. Miss Marie Shultz is now the assistant guardian of the group.

Camp Fire work is not only interesting to the girls, but the knowledge they acquire is very beneficial to them in later years.

And now, we witness Youth at play,
And here we find it at its best,
With silly jokes and simple songs,
With queer cartoons, and all the rest;
With howling mirth and joyful glee,
A giddy laugh its only quest—
The youth as he would like to be—
The life of vim and joy and zest.

THE YEAR'S EVENTS IN RHYME

SEPTEMBER

School Opening

September Sixth! the fatal day
When Summer pleasures fade away.
The swimming hole and summer flowers
Are cast aside for school day hours.

Trail

On time, by golly, comes the Trail
With jokes, we hope, that aren't so stale.
Beverly Smith directs the work
Seeing that others do not shirk.

Honor Roll of June, 1933

To all those students who were good
And did the things they knew they should,
With this reward and recompense
We designate their excellence.

Student Council Election

"Ginny" and Ed went up the hill
To get an office high,
And Eddie Biggar climbed until
The Presidency was nigh.

Virginia Kyger won the place
Our new Vice-President to be
And many others in the race
Won high positions, you can see.

OCTOBER

Southwest-East Football Game

Dear old East High sat on a wall,
Dear old East High had a great fall,
'Cause all those Injuns and every brave
Sent those ducks to a watery grave.

Open House

'Twas an Autumn night in Thirty-Three
The P. T. A. held a gala spree.
Dr. Robbins from Missouri U.
Gave open house success anew.

Senior Election

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of a pow-wow held by our Seniors dear.
'Twas Tommy Robinson named the chief
To steer the tribe afar from grief.

Sachem Begins

To write this book of Thirty-four
We thought and thought and thought in vain;
And well we know we never more
Would tackle such a job again.

Southwest-Central Football Game

Little Coach House sat in a corner
Enjoying his football pie.
He stuck in his thumb and pulled out—a lemon
And found it was dear Central High.

All Star City Team Member

Southwest had an end supreme,
And Charlie Jobes was that boy's name.
He made the football all-star team
And came on top in every game.

Football Captain-elect

Albert Nigro, athlete great,
Threw tacklers of the highest rate.
His comrades named him football king,
May many victories Albert bring.

Christmas Vacation

'Twas the day after New Years, and all through the school
Not an "E" pupil studied, much less any fool.

Literary Clubs Elect

'Tis twice a year the clubs decide

'Tis most exciting on the day
The new club plans get underway.

Exams

There comes a time in the midst of the year
That students abhor with the greatest of fear,
And when the teachers announce the good news
We develop a critical case of the blues.

An hour and a half of trouble and toil
And, then, at the end you bubble and boil,
For you know that your paper is not worth a dime
And you've wasted all of your precious time.
Oh, boy it certainly feels punk
To know that you are going to flunk.

Student Council Election

There was an election at the half of the year
That was won by a student named Jimmie Deer;
'Twas the highest honor in all the school
And he took it all quite calm and cool.

Southwest-Westport Basketball Game

In the very first game we met our old foe
From down the way on Westport row
In a stiff hard-won fight
We beat them up right
And got the name of our team on the go.

Lincoln and Saint Valentine,
Washington with soul sublime,
All were born this time of year.
Perhaps your birthday's also near.

MARCH

Basketball in Columbia

This was the year we wanted to fly,
We passed all other teams well nigh;
We rocketed onward up to the sky—
Second place in the state to Southwest high!

Mixer

While dancing in the gym one day,
With a happy heart and gay,
I was taken by surprise
By a pair of roguish eyes.
And it pleased me so to be
Introduced to that lady;
I only wish that Prof. Monsees
Would have more parties such as these.

Band Concert

The choir, the orchestra, and band
 Joined together hand in hand
 In response to great demand
 To give a concert that was grand.

Easter

Another holiday is here;
 For three long days we have no rules,
 And nearly have forgot this year
 That Easter comes on April Fool's.

Senior Play

On April Twenty-first
 The Seniors gave their show;
 The crowd with laughter burst,
 And like it much, I know.

It was a great success:
 The actors all were skilled,
 They did their very best,
 And every seat was filled.

Literary Contest

Once again they strive to gain;
 See them march before our eyes!
 Seven clubs all tried in vain,
 Sesame won the glorious prize.

National Honor Society

Seniors quiver, Seniors quake,
 Seniors pray and lie awake,
 Hoping they will surely be
 In this famed society.

Award Day

The genius and the athlete
 All in colors gay
     Await their turn,
     Awards to earn,
 Upon this festive day!

Some have written essays
 Upon the curse of drink
 Others compositions
 Concerning how to think;
 And still some claim a bit of fame,
 For being artists known by name.

Graduation

Southwest, we must leave thee ever,
 Never more thy halls to see,
 We shall miss thee, and we never
 Can repay our debts to thee.

In the future, our endeavor,
 Be it what so e'er it be,
 Never, never, can dis sever
 Our devoted love for thee.

INDIAN CIRCUS ADVERTISEMENT

The Burn Emup and Bail Emout Circus is under the able proprietorship of Johannes Trum and Guilelmus Underwood.

Because of her past experience in jingle writing (Sachem '34) Barbara Davis offers one of the main features of the circus with the readings of her artistic creations.

The Astaire Team of today, Helen and Jim Deer, trained by the eminent professor of dancing, Lois Klein, will be seen at the circus in a performance of the "Bolero."

Virginia Ann Clark will startle you with her act on the back of the White Stallion.

See the world's greatest tight rope walker, Bey Hess, who has won international acclaim for her amazing feats in balancing.

How the barking barker Charlie Jobes will lure you on to the mystic realm of Hidecho, enhanced by the charm of Teal, the mystery girl!

You can't miss the meek little "man without a voice." Leave-it-to-Levitt to attract a crowd!

He paralyzes them with fear! He compels them to do his every bidding—against their will!—the famous lion tamer—Wad McCarty!

Listen tonight to the radio broadcast by Miss Janie Everest, our continuity writer, who will tell exciting, dare-devil tales of the circus.

Business Managers of the Circus: Barry Renfro and Phillip Watkins.

The amusing antics of our clowns, Roy Toomey and Billy Dow, will attract and amuse the children. You will know them by their two theme songs—"Are you going tonight?" or "What's the difference between a glass of water?"

Herbie Sloan is different. So different in fact that we won't even tell you how he differs. Meet the mystery man. His looks and countenance will thrill you.

A freak—the only sweet, unspoiled girl left in this hit-and-fly modern world—Marguerite Myers.

Two go-getting gals—Jane Bradford and Winifred Winters. Anything you want leave it to them to "go get it" for you.

Changeable Millie Faxon. A mood for each hour. *She can be a sophisticated poised "deb" (though she outgrew that stage long ago) a coy baby, a frolicsome child, or any other type at a moment's notice.

No India Rubber Man can stretch farther or better than ours. He has snap and his entertainments are snappy. Fraser Fleming can't be beat or over-stretched.

Impersonations are the specialty of Miss Gaxiola. Your favorite comic strip characters are no more vivid than the impersonations of them done by Estella Gaxiola. "Pop-eye," the long-lived comic star comes to life when Estella becomes the sailor man.

The most detained man in existence is with our circus. Two years ago Stewart Hill finished the first chapter of his biography entitled, "My First Two-Thousand Years in School."

ABOUT TOWN IN 1954

One of our "400" was concerned in a curious incident that happened the other day. Miss Mary Lou Blacker, a sub-deb (still) was crossing a street in Badw-Badw, when she met a Miss Harriette Donnelly, a friend of high school days. For the last few years they both have spent for- tunes in trying to locate each other, and then they met in a strange country, a strange city, on a strange street, at the other side of the world!

A home town girl has immortalized Zasu Pitts, that "wimpy" comedian of the 30's. Margaret Ridge's hands are said to be even more expressive than those of the star of two decades ago.

After years of experience in the field, Sue Cowan has written a book entitled "Lino-leum Blocks and What to do With the Scraps." When asked about her career she said, "I owe what I am to the depression of 1929-34. Since the high school newspaper on which I worked was too poor to buy steel cuts, I was appointed to chip pieces from a lino-leum block and thereby form pictures. The influence has been predominant since."

"The Terrible Three"—James Druen, Fred Michaels and Bud Simms—although only slightly acquainted, have man- ners of haunting people that are so similar that the theory of a common ancestor cannot be denied; at least, can't in their case.

The inmates of the Home for Ex-R. O. T. C. men, run by Kenneth Fleming, prop., were honored by the presence of the "Song Warbler," Ethel Hill, and partner, Gordon Brandt, the general cut-up, on the twentieth anniversary of the institution. A good time was had by all.

Did you notice the advertisement the other night that read, "You Wreck 'em; we fix 'em. It takes two to make a bargain, so let's start business?" A novel advertisement at least! The owners of this new establishment are Harry Eisen and Hal Mather.

People may come and people may go, but some who will never be forgotten are John Deffenbaugh, because of the struggle it takes to write his last name; Harriet Hawley, because of her happy way and her smile; Hal Hardin, for the noise he can make; Lester Milgram, because of his im- mortal band and his coronet player, Ray True.

Gene Philpot would make a good hero in one of the old heroine-villain-hero plots. A damsel in distress need not have any fears when Gene is close.

The best things come in small packages. Witness Dot Smiley and Elizabeth Russell, two of the smallest, snappi- est girls of the thirties.

At last, this vision fades away,

But there will be dawn a fuller day—

A time when all the world shall say:

“Their hopes and lives met not dismay,

But rose in some more glorious way

And ever stood in bright array.”
