Beloved Children of U. S. A.:

Be always proud and happy to be an American Citizen, to belong as one of our glorious great country's devoted, loyal human beings, be proud, loyal to our wonderful flag. Whoever don't respect our Stars and Stripes don't belong to us . . . How I wish I had the power to speak in every school, college and convince the pupils how grateful they should be and pray, thanking God that they can live and grow up under Uncle Sam's protection!--

God bless, protect our U. S. A. for ever and ever.

Gratefully devoted and proud and happy to be an American Citizen

"Mother"

A MESSAGE—

THROUGHOUT the years that Southwest has served the community, its leadership in the field of education has stood as its highest attribute. To those who have looked to it as a guiding factor, it has taught the lesson of sincerity in facing the future, in giving a fuller life, and in finding expression in all that one may attempt.

The Sachem, this year, in recognition of Southwest's twelfth year of progress, leadership and service, has been designed to meet the ever-changing upward trend so characteristic of our world today. We have aimed mainly towards simplicity and concreteness, in order to present a clear picture in as interesting a manner as possible.

In keeping with the plan to give the students new and interesting material, the Sachem is presenting messages from widely known leaders, discussing leadership, its requirements, and benefits— all of which are addressed, as is our message,

The Students of Southwest High School

To the Students of Southwest High School:

Leadership can perhaps be defined as a constant effort at understanding. And, to speak in terms of that vocation, which is closest and dearest to me, I tell you that nowhere is understanding of more value than when one is a mile or more above the earth.

A good pilot understands the value of favoring tail winds in the same way he understands the value of a sincere smile. Constant use of both profits and enriches his life.

Therefore, my message to you--seek understanding of all things--and leadership will follow.

With my every best wish for your success,
I remain

Sincerely,

To the Students of Southwest High Schools

Leadership can perhaps be defined as a constant effort at understanding. And, to speak in terms of that vocation which is closest and dearest to me, I tell you that nowhere is understanding of more value than when one is a mile or more above the earth.

A good pilot understands the value of favoring tail winds in the same way he understands the value of a spicere engine. Constant use of both profits and enriches his life.

Therefore, my message to you--seek understanding of all things--and leadership will follow.

With my every best wish for your success,
I remain

Sincerely,

J. P. Eddie Heuback

To the Students of Southwest High School:

You ask me what I think are the qualifications for leadership in Journalism. Before a man enters Journalism, he should have a good education, preferably a college education, then he should first of all examine his heart and see if he likes money. If he does, keep out of Journalism. He should then ask himself whether he is willing to stand alone, to be laughed at, to be boycotted, starve, and be regarded generally as an outcast and moral leper if necessary. If he can answer these questions favorably, then he is ready to be a Journalist. After that the qualifications for leadership are what they are in any profession, law, medicine, farming, teaching, preaching, merchandising--initiative, energy, honesty and courage, but first of all initiative with an ability to take responsibility. Without that quality leadership in anything is impossible.

Sincerely yours,

B.A. White

The Swan

By Ferenc Molnar

All-School Play

Directed by Miss Ruth Dieckhoff

Presented December 5, 1936

CAST

Dr. Nicholas Agi	Jack Love
George	Cedric Hoffman
Arsenne	Mary Virginia Hogan
Princess Beatrice	Patti Metcalf
Alexandra	Marjorie Lovejoy
Father Hyacinth	Shelton Stone
Symphorosa	Nancy Miller
Prince Albert	Robert Scott
Colonel Wunderlich	Leon Goldberg
Count Lutzen	William Rothwell
Caesar	Ed Mulhern
Maid	Barbara Belwood
Princess Maria Dominica	Flora Jean Bornstein
Countess Erdely	Jean Chandler

UNDER Miss Ruth Dieckhoff's able direction, the all-school play, Ferenc Molnar's "The Swan," took its place among the outstanding productions at Southwest.

A comedy, it gave ample opportunity for the excellent cast to display their art and ability. Beginning with the Princess Beatrice's despair over the failure of the dashing Prince Albert to fall in love with her daughter, Alexandra, and her plan to make him jealous by Alexandra's attentions to the tutor, Dr. Nicholas Agi, it moves swiftly. The situation is complicated by Alexandra and the tutor falling in love, which makes the tutor lose his head so far as to insult Albert.

With the help of Father Hyacinth, Alexandra is brought to realize that she in reality loves Albert, and the tutor leaves the castle. Princess Dominica, Albert's mother, arrives in time to wish her son and future daughter-in-law happiness, and the curtain drops on a happy couple and two satisfied mothers.

Marjorie Lovejoy made a lovely

Alexandra, while Patti Metcalf portrayed the match-making Beatrice with full justice to the part. The splendid Prince Albert was ably interpreted by Bob Scott, and Jack Love made a very convincing and learned tutor. Nancy Miller fluttered charmingly as Symphorosa, Shelton Stone gave a powerful performance as the kindly Father Hyacinth, and Flora Jean Bornstein was the perfect dowager queen, Dominica. Leon Goldberg and William Rothwell were very comical in the character parts of Colonel Wunderlich and Count Lutzen, as was Ed Mulhern as the solemn major domo, Caesar. The rest of the cast distinguished itself highly in its portrayal of the minor parts.

THIS year, under the direction of Elwood Ramay, the senior class presented "Tommy," an American play, by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson.

A modern, fast-moving comedy, "Tommy" tells the story of a young girl trying to decide which of two young men to marry. After much bungling on the part of Tommy and David Tuttle, Marie's uncle and the Republican boss of the town, Marie finally decides. But in three days time the two young men, Bernard and Tommy, get thrown out of the Thurber house, Marie nearly elopes, two valuable pieces of property are sold, and Mr. Thurber's livery stable business is saved.

After finally ascertaining that Bernard is impossible, that Tommy is not a liar, that her father's land has been sold, and that David Tuttle is the scape-grace at the bottom of most of the disturbance, Marie sends Bernard about his business and marries Tommy. Mr. and Mrs. Thurber are perfectly satisfied with Tommy — and the First National Bank; Marie and Tommy are happy; and David Tuttle thoroughly perjured, but rather proud of his maneuvering.

Jean Switzer played Marie gracefully and sweetly, while Bob White, as Tommy, and James McVay, as Bernard, were convincing and gallant suitors. Patty Pitt, as Mrs. Thurber, convulsed the audience with her amazing laugh, and Neill Elliott, as Mr. Thurber, made a remarkably realistic old man with a cryptic sense of humor. Shelton Stone, as David Tuttle, was a lovable old political schemer.

Helen Ruth Fisher, as Mrs. Wilson, was a typical neighbor, and Jerome Grossman, as Judge Wilson, was a man with a purpose — in the next election. Richard Brown, as Willie Wilson, was the perfect voice off-stage, and he didn't want to practice his violin lesson.

Much of the success of the play is due to the work of the production staff, as well as to the entire senior class for its support.

CONTEST WINNERS

THE music department will be represented in the National Music Contest at St. Louis next year by Charles Piper and Flora Jean Bornstein, who will compete for scholarships to the leading conservatories in the country.

Charles won a high superior rating in the city contest and first place at Tulsa, in the division competition. He sang "Travelin'" by Enders, and "Tally Ho" by Leoni.

Flora Jean had a high ranking in the city and won first place at Tulsa in the girls' division. She sang "Homing" by Del Riego and "Thou Art the Night Wind" by Gaul.

Virginia Froman, Winifred Vrooman, Dorothy Noyes, and Nancy Miller also represented Southwest in the city contest.

THIS year the orchestra, although rather small, has achieved a balanced and modern instrumentation. It has shown an unusual spirit of cooperation and loyalty and has improved steadily. Furthermore, it owes much to the members of the "Tooters Club" for their loyal support.

The orchestra has played for a number of indoor programs, including the all-school play, the senior play, the inter-society literary contests, and the annual spring concert.

With an unusually large number of string players entering high school next fall, the orchestra is looking forward to a larger and better instrumentation than ever before.

Logan Zahn	Director

DURING the last few years, under the excellent direction of Mr. Logan Zahn, the Southwest band has been growing rapidly and improving steadily, until this year it has become the best and most versatile band in the history of Southwest. This year it has drilled with the best, has given rousing support to the closest fought sports events, and has done superior concert and contest work.

Last fall, the mothers of the members of the band, spurred to action by the lack of support given this organization and by the urgent need of better equipment, organized the "Tooters Club," the first organization of its kind in Kansas City. The "Tooters" have proved to be invaluable in arousing well-deserved outside interest in the band. They have also been instrumental in the purchase of two concert snare drums, two bass clarinets and a bassoon, and in the development of band social activities, having sponsored an open house and a dance for the band and orchestra.

The band has run the course of another year, and has made it the most successful year since its organization. Thus through the guidance of the director, the aid of the "Tooters Club," and the staunch loyalty of its members, it has attained a definite goal—it has found support for its activities, it has worked unceasingly on self-improvement, and it has become an institution worthy of the support and respect of every student of Southwest.

ENSEMBLES

THE members of the Southwest band and orchestra have been able this year to secure for the first time a good understanding of ensemble playing, and a deeper knowledge by means of it of what can be accomplished musically.

Ensemble players enjoy an unusually good time socially. They learn to know members of their group in a delightful way and spend many pleasant hours together. Often they are invited to play for school and community programs, dinners, or parties. This all makes for good fellowship and an enjoyable and profitable use of leisure.

But more important than the social value is the musical value of ensemble participation. This is so great it can hardly be estimated accurately. In fact, it can be said that the future development of the Southwest band and orchestra depends to a great extent upon the number and quality of ensembles organized therein in years to come. This is true because the ensemble player is the player who discovers the full possibilities of his instrument, its tone colorings, and its technical limitations. He is the one who develops into an independent thinker musically, and who learns the true meaning of very exacting teamwork. In fact, the officers and leaders of this year's band and orchestra are, with few exceptions, the students who have played in ensembles not only this year but former years as well.

The present year has achieved the laying of a solid foundation in ensemble playing. Future leaders of the Southwest band and orchestra have had a taste of this fine work, and many others have expressed a desire to participate next year. It is their ambition to organize an ensemble in every section.

ATHLETICS

To the Students of Southwest High School:

Leadership in any field of sport requires certain important foundations. The first must be sportsmanship in the true meaning of the word, and this is the most important of all, for without sportsmanship there can of course be no real sport.

The second involves the matter of training and competition, of being willing to make the necessary sacrifices to be at one's best during the competition.

There is nothing really worthwhile that comes to anyone easily. A thing is usually worth working for the right way or it is not worth anything at all.

Yours very truly,

Graveland Rice.

LOUIS A. HOUSE

S. C. SEE

IN CHARGE of football, track, and intramural athletics at Southwest is Louis A. House, who coached the Indian football team to a co-championship with East this year and whose Redskin track teams always show up well in league competition. Lynn C. Bailey and Francis W. Mann assisted ably in the handling of the football teams.

The basketball team, under the guidance of Melvin Bishop, had a fine season, winning the co-championship with Manual High School.

S. C. See, chemistry teacher, is the financial manager of the athletic department. His duties include maintaining a refreshment stand at the field, taking tickets at the gates, and most important of all, conducting a ticket sales campaign before each season opens.

The four Southwest cheerleaders, instructed by Elwood Ramay, are Richard Brown, Ed Mulhern, Bill Reed, and John Slattery.

Co-Champs!

SOUTHWEST'S prospects were bright this fall, even though only four lettermen were returning from last year's team. The remainder of the squad was composed of graduates of the previous year's second team, well drilled in fundamentals but lacking experience in league competition. Toward mid-season, as these players developed, the Indians reached top form.

Eleven lettermen were on the East Bears, the first team met in the league season. They made use of their greater experience in turning back Southwest 19 to 7.

Manual was unfortunate in meeting an Indian team which was rebounding from the defeat of the previous week. The Crimson was overwhelmed by a powerful offense, 24 to 0.

On October 17, Southwest faced the Central Eagles, a team potentially very strong. This obstruction in the title path was hurdled by a score of 13 to 7, the winning touchdown being made on a drive through the line in the last minutes of play.

Northeast's hapless Vikings, defending champions, were crushed by the devastating attack of the Indians. Two of the three touchdowns scored in the 20 to 0 victory were pushed across in the last five minutes of play.

After this victory, Southwest was recognized as a real title threat and the game with Westport the following Saturday took on greater significance. As a result of the interest aroused, a crowd of 5,000 turned out to witness the battle. A savage running and passing attack gave the Tigers a lead of 12 to 0 at the half and Southwest's cause looked hopeless. But the second period made this game the most thrilling of the year. Realization that championship hopes were slipping inspired the Indians. One touchdown was soon pushed over and, in the last minute of play, Kenneth Hamilton, aided by splendid blocking, returned a punt fifty yards to score the touchdown which won the game for Southwest, 13 to 12. This was a real triumph for the fighting Orange and Black.

One more formidable opponent, Paseo, stood in the way. They had to be turned back, and Southwest's title ambitions were realized by the victory over this strong team in the final game of the season. The Indians took the lead in the first quarter, 13 to 0, and, for the remainder of the game, staved off every Pirate threat with a stonewall defense.

By beating Paseo, at least a tie for the championship was assured, and if East had lost the next Saturday, the Indians would have had sole possession of first place. The Bears rallied, however, and turned back Paseo. As a result, Southwest finished a very fine season as co-champions.

The Interscholastic League All-Stars were announced in November and the championship position was further enhanced by the placing of four Southwest players on the first team. Kenneth Hamilton was quarterback; Jim Riordan, halfback; Jack Sutton, guard; and Jack Guernsey, center. This was truly the finishing touch to the most successful football season since 1932.

SECOND TEAM FOOTBALL

THE 1937 edition of the Indian second team finished a good season with a record of four victories and two defeats in league competition.

In the first game, despite a two touch-down rally in the final period, the Redskins were defeated by East 20-13.

Southwest came back in the game against Manual. Jack O'Hara scored the touchdown which gave the Indians a 6-0 victory. Central nosed out the Warriors 14-13 in the next tilt. Both of the Southwest touchdowns were made by Jack Perkins.

Displaying a powerful offense, the Braves smothered Northeast's Vikings by a score of 25-7. Miller, Evans, Perkins, and O'Hara all scored for Southwest.

Westport threatened the Southwest goal line only once in losing to the Indians, 12-0. Aikens scored the Redskins' first counter and Wager, with Evans blocking, made the second.

Southwest conquered Paseo, 19-0, to close the season with a victory. Miller scored twice in this encounter.

The nineteen players awarded letters by Coach Lynn C. Bailey include Clinton Kanaga, Allen Spalding, David Ritz, Bob Armacost, Charles Piper, Tom Thompson, Clair Martin, Dick Evans, Bob Scott, Larry Wager, "Bo" Miller, Bob Willhite, Jerry Dawson, Jack O'Hara, Jack Perkins, Carroll Aikens, Ed Talbot, Sam Edwards, and Ed Mulhern.

THE Indians came through again! The Southwest cagers finished the season in a tie for first place, duplicating the finish of the football season. Led by Captain Bill McKinley, the team concluded the year's play with a league record of five victories and one loss, and one loss out of four tilts against strong non-conference opponents.

Prospects were unusually fine for a successful season when practice began in November. Five lettermen returned from last year's squad, including Charles Costigan, Kenneth Hamilton, Bill Hogben, Bill McKinley, and Bernard Lieppman.

CAPTAIN MCKINLEY

The East Bears were Southwest's first league opponents. In this game was begun the habit of staging thrilling and almost miraculous last-minute finishes. The game was forced into one overtime and then a second. Bill Hogben made a goal in the second overtime period to give Southwest the game 23-22.

The Indians' embryo championship hopes seemed to be lost after the game with Manual. Joe Cirrincione, veteran all-star cager, playing his last game, led the Crimson to a 29-19 victory over the Warriors.

Southwest returned to winning ways on February 5 against Central. The Braves were behind seven points at the middle gun, but in their customary strong last-half offensive, won 25-23. Bill Hogben again provided the margin of victory on a pass from McKinley.

The Redskins were behind three points at half-time against Westport, next league opponent, but they made a last-period rally to win an exciting game, 27-23. This victory thwarted Tiger title hopes and gained a first place tie for Southwest.

Southwest's story-book victory over Paseo, March 5, set the stage for a championship battle the following Friday. Behind at the intermission, the Braves saw title chances slipping and began to fight with their backs against the wall. Lieppman and Hogben, with a goal apiece, tied the game as the end of the period approached. McKinley blocked an almost certain Paseo basket. Lieppman gained a rebound and passed to Hogben who made the shot that brought a 16-14 victory.

On March 12, the final night of play, Southwest faced the Northeast Vikings. The Indians could clinch a share of the title by beating Northeast. If Manual lost to East, Southwest would stand alone in first place. At the end of the first half, the Braves were faced with the usual deficit of points. This time they were behind 5-10. When the second half opened, the Warriors began to play like a different and inspired team. Led by Bill Hogben, Southwest gained a 17-16 lead at the end of the third quarter. Five players participated in the scoring of 12 points in the fourth quarter offensive, which gave Southwest a 29-23 victory. Each team scored ten field goals, but the Indians' more accurate aim from the charity stripe brought Southwest the championship. Manual nosed out East 21-18 to gain a share of the honors.

Five Indians received special recognition for the part they played in making this the most successful season since 1934. Bill Hogben was selected as all-conference forward, Bill McKinley and Bernard Lieppman were named on the second team, and Lee Talbott and Kenneth Hamilton received honorable mention.

SECOND TEAM BASKETBALL

THE Southwest second team finished the 1937 season with a record of four games won and five lost, three of its victories being over non-league opponents.

Overcoming Argentine 36-21, it introduced successfully the new season. With a strong third quarter rally, the East Cubs defeated the Indians 30-26 in the first league game.

A strong finish enabled Manual to down Southwest by a score of 25-22. An easy 31-16 victory was scored over the Central quintet in the next game, Dick Temple leading the scorers with 12 points.

Although behind at the third quarter, the Indians staged a finish reminiscent of the first team to defeat Ward 26-22.

The Braves were crushed by the powerful offense of Westport, 41-25. Southwest was behind by only two points at the half, but Westport showed the strength which enabled her to go on to win the championship by overwhelming the Indians in the second period.

Better success was achieved in the next game in which the Rockhurst Hawks were swamped 40-27. The fifth league encounter of the season was lost to Paseo, 36-14, as was also the final contest of the year, with Northeast, by a score of 36-32.

1936 TRACK

COACH Louis House had five lettermen as a nucleus for the 1936 track team. The returning athletes were Kenneth Hamilton and Bob Moeller in the dashes; Ed Petersen, distance man; Bill McDonald, high jumper; and Larry Winn, broad jumper and hurdler.

The East Bears, the Indians' first dual meet opponents, were turned back by a score of 65 to 26.

On the following Friday, the defending champions, Northeast's Vikings, with another strong squad this year, defeated the Redskins 47 to 43.

The Westport Tigers, handicapped by lack of facilities for practice, were overwhelmed by Southwest, $84\frac{1}{3}$ to $6\frac{2}{3}$.

Paseo, perennially strong in track, nosed out Southwest, 46 to 45, in the next meet.

Eyes now turned to the state contest. The Indian team of Moeller, Winn, Hamilton, Dorr, Petersen, Bishop, McDonald, and Huttig scored seven points for Southwest.

The city meet held on Southwest's field, found the Vikings successfully defending their title. Their squad piled up 44 points to Paseo's 36 and Southwest's $29\frac{1}{2}$. Southwest point winners in the city event were Hamilton, Winn, Dorr, and Ehlers.

For his consistently fine spirit and performance, Larry Winn was elected captain of the team.

GOLF

FIVE boys were chosen by Coach Melvin P. Bishop as members of the golf team to represent Southwest in the 1936 tournament. Gordon Myers, senior and a last year's letterman, earned his position on the team as captain with a 79. Kenneth Danford, Freeman Moore, and Dick Mather, all seniors, and Dale Rue-dig, a sophomore, qualified with scores of 81, 88, 90, and 92, respectively.

In the first round match, Southwest secured fourth place. Gordon was low man in the entire field, but fell into second place, on the next round. Southwest finished the season in fourth place, and Paseo held first.

THE eliminations to determine the members of the tennis team were held last September. Those who won places were Bill Hogben, Ray Moseley, Jack Severin, Donald Cox, Bill McKinley, and Gene Davis.

Ray Moseley swept through the tournament to reach the finals where he beat Claude Hickey, defending champion, 2-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to win the title. Bill Hogben, the other Southwest singles entrant, reached the second round before being conquered by Hickey.

The doubles combination of Severin and Cox reached the semi-finals of the city tournament before they were eliminated by Scott and Thompson of Central. McKinley and Davis, the other doubles team, were beaten by Westport.

Hogben, Moseley, Severin, and Cox each received a letter for winning at least one match.

CONQUEST

NAPOLEON said: "In war the moral is to the physical as three to one." This maxim is quite vividly illustrated in the achievements of the Southwest R.O.T.C. Although it is almost the smallest unit in the city, it has, nevertheless, accomplished more than any other unit in its few years of existence.

In the annual government inspection this unit has never gone below the rank of third; but instead it has gained permanent possession of the first and second place cups, having won each three times. In 1931 it gained the highest score of any high school R.O.T.C. unit in the middlewest. Recognition has been further gained through Southwest's repeated triumphs in the annual field day competitions, and the unit now holds numerous cups and awards in almost every event of this affair.

Southwest's army has also gained unusual distinction with its rifle teams, repeatedly shooting high marks in the city matches. Many other victories, although less important, have added to Southwest's honor and fame, among which are first place medals in city-wide theoretical contests and a consistent record for highest ticket sales for the annual R.O.T.C. Circus.

The "Officers Guide" says: "A military unit is no better than its commander; it is a faithful mirror and measure of his character and capacity." This truth is very strongly proved in the record of Southwest under the able direction of Sergeant Story and his officers. With this competent leadership, undoubtedly the Southwest R.O.T.C. is destined to gain greater and more glorious distinction in its conquest.

ROBERT HUNT
 Cadet Lieutenant Colonel
 Executive Officer, K.C.H.S.

“THE successful commander should possess high moral and physical courage; should be just, upright and human, honest, frank, tactful; should have magnetism, health, robust physique, commanding presence; should not be slovenly, boorish in manner or speech; should be generous, quick to recognize merit in others, self-controlled, self-confident, genuine, sincere, loyal to his seniors and subordinates; finally, should be able to think straight to the point and come to a decision.”

To the Students of Southwest High School:

It is contrary to my custom to give advice. I am not sure that I am qualified to do so. However, I will give you the following for what it is worth. It is not original with me and I am not sure where it comes from.

"Do as your manhood bids you do and from none expect applause except yourself."

Then, here is another thing I might mention, though I do so reluctantly. Loyalty is, in my opinion, the most attractive of human attributes--loyalty to one's self, to one's family and friends and to one's country and the human race. The trait that I seek most in selecting men for my expeditions is that of loyalty.

With kindest regards to you, I am,

Cordially yours,

HONORS

THE Quill and Scroll, the Art Honor Society, and the National Honor Society are the three honorary organizations in Southwest. The first two are rewards for special ability, while the last named is the goal of the well-rounded student—the scholar, the leader, and the server. These three societies have a deeper meaning than many realize, for they represent the highest achievement one can reach; they offer goals toward which to strive and ideals toward which to aspire.

SERVICE

SOUTHWEST owes much to the many members of service clubs, whose aim it is to make school life more smooth and pleasant for all. Foremost of these service groups is the Student Council, which sponsors smaller groups, such as the Corridor Guides and the Cafeteria Guards. The Powwow Club is one of the chief factors in promoting school spirit and backing our teams; the School Bankers contribute their time and work in assembling deposits each week; and the girls of the Health Center assist Miss Dreyer in her work of improving the general health of the student body.

CLUBS

THROUGH the clubs of Southwest, students with the same interests meet and work together, forming new friendships and finding higher ideals. But the social benefits received are not the only ones, for each club has a specific purpose, to supplement the knowledge of its members in its particular field — engineering, literature, social service, home economics, or public speaking. Under the able guidance of their advisers these organizations have taken upon themselves the responsibility of leading their members to bigger and better things.

This year the debate teams of the city, composed of members of the public speaking classes interested in obtaining practical experience, took under consideration the question, "Resolved: That all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated." Our team competed with teams from Westport, Manual, Paseo, and Rockhurst, at times taking the affirmative and at other times the negative side of the question.

This subject has been one of interest to the thinking people of today, and offers opportunities for clear thinking on either side. However, it was not an easy one, and the members of the debate team spent many hours trying to master all the possibilities of the question. Mr. Ramay coached the team, giving valuable advice and teaching the debaters the best method of approaching such a subject. Southwest is justly proud of this year's debate team.

Eleventh Annual Inter-Society LITERARY CONTEST

April 30, 1937

TO COMPETE for possession of the silver cup, awarded each year to the winning society, the eight literary societies of Southwest held their eleventh annual literary contest April thirtieth.

In an all-school assembly presented in the morning, seven contestants gave stirring orations, and the spirit of the contest ran high throughout the day with conjectures and hopes concerning the outcome forming the theme of the day's conversation. Therefore there was a large crowd in the evening to hear the remaining oral events and the final decisions.

The evening's entertainment opened with selections by the choir which were followed by original presentations, humorous or tuneful, by the competing societies. The main part of the program consisted of extemporaneous speeches and declamations by the representatives of the societies. As each contestant entered, his club rose and remained standing until he began to speak.

When the oral events had been given and while the audience waited for the judges' decisions to be announced, pandemonium broke loose, each club trying to be first with its cheers, songs, or any other noise that suited the occasion.

Then perfect silence! Beginning with oration, extemporaneous speech, and declamation, and going on through short story, verse, and essay, the victorious entrants were announced.

The reading of the name of each winner was greeted by wild cheering from his club; therefore, announcements progressed very slowly, and the contest ended late in the evening, the winners departing cheered by victory and the losers with determination concerning the following year.

TOGETHER

By Orilla Ann Trippe

JAMES COURTNEY REYNOLDS, III carefully outlined the yellow elephants on the wallpaper with a purple crayon and pondered in a somber, little-boy fashion upon mothers. In a hurt, small voice, he confided in an invisible playmate, "God must have made a mistake. You see, my mother just isn't what mothers are s'posed to be." Storybook mothers kissed hurt fingers and dried tears. Little boys prayed at their knees and were tucked carefully into bed. Storybook dads lived with their sons all the time. His mother talked and laughed in a hard, brittle voice that mocked him. She noticed him only to shoo him away now.

"You see, Bill, Mother fussed at my dad, and he looked cross and sad, and now they're 'vorced. Nan says it's wicked," to the unseen playmate with a judicious, yet puzzled nod.

The huge, brass knocker on the front hall door below banged impatiently. As a shrill medley of laughter and high chattering voices echoed noisily through, Jimmie hurriedly arose from behind his satin-covered bed. With the skill of experience, he pushed it back against the wall, effectively covering his crayon work on the wallpaper. Light feet ran quickly up the carpeted stairs. His mother's incessant chatter preceded them.

She opened the nursery door and stood with a suddenly quieted tongue on the threshold. She frowned at James Courtney, virtuously perusing the wonders of an animal book.

"Jimmie, come here. I want you to meet some of Mother's friends."

Sudden dismay followed by panicky rebellion crossed the child's face. "No! I'm going to read my book. I don't wanta meet the old people."

Mother drew her red lips in tightly, hardening the young loveliness of her face. In the insincerely sweet, controlled voice that Jimmie feared more than her anger, she answered, "Come, they're waiting." She grasped him firmly till her tapering nails dug into his wrists.

Gaily, he was ushered into the midst of "mother's friends." With a supremely bored look of distaste, he bore their cooing compliments and lip-rouged kisses. With proud restraint he endured the humiliation of being termed "an adorable child," and "a dear lamb." Finally his mother relieved his pent-up suffering with dismissal.

Jimmie literally dug his heels into the carpet and fled to the kitchen. Here his reception was, at least, different. Cook hustled him immediately outdoors.

Forlornly, he wandered about the enclosed yard from wall to wall. He attempted to play, but even more than usual his pathetic loneliness pressed upon him. Even the invisible playmate, Bill, was lacking in the power of solace.

Jimmie pressed against the bars of the gate, eagerly viewing the cars that occasionally straggled down the suburban road. A weary, worn traveler suddenly made an appearance at the turn of the road. His tail drooped rather miserably between his hind legs. A hurt paw was painfully held up and he progressed awkwardly on the three remaining ones.

The boy pursed his lips and emitted a shrill sound, distinguishable as a whistle. The flappy brown ears of the dog raised; he cocked a furry head and hurriedly crippled along to the place from whence this familiar sound issued. Jimmie squeezed his hand through the bars and beckoned encouragingly.

A warm, moist tongue shyly caressed his outstretched fingers. The child stroked the silky ears, and immediately the dog was a frantic wriggle of delight and friendliness.

James Courtney stood back and surveyed the gate and wall with calculating appraisal. The dog pawed at the bars, imploring entrance with a persistent series of shrill yipes. This yiping must be quelled immediately. "Mother's friends" probably didn't like dogs. Jimmie with more haste than tenderness tugged his new acquaintance through the bars and, hugging him up tightly, retired stealthily to the rear of the yard.

He was fascinated by the moist caresses and lavish doggy affection. The lonely child had neither experienced nor anticipated such sincere attention, and he was trembling with the joy of discovery.

A call issued from the kitchen door. "James, come eat now." Jimmie suddenly stiffened in despair. He had forgotten Mother! The time had come for his canine pal to be formally introduced to the household. He feared the frigid reception that a dog would receive. But he stalked bravely into the house in search of his mother.

She was sitting before her dressing table. With an angry little start, she perceived the boy on the threshold. "Jimmie, I want to talk to you. Really, you — What is that?"

Jimmie held up the pup and in a tight little voice replied, "He's a dog. His name is — is — Bill."

Annoyed, she turned away. "Well, get it out. We don't want it."

The child's lips drew out in a tense line, as his mother's had done. "No. He doesn't want to go." And then suddenly with an almost hysterical quaver, "And I won't let him go. I love Bill more than anyone in the world. I won't let him go."

Mother faced about. Her face seemed older, puzzled, and hurt. Quickly regaining an air of indifference, she shrugged, "Well, I suppose Bill stays."

His face aglow, Jimmie fled from the room. Hurt and bewildered, a suddenly sobered mother bent her head in her hands. Why couldn't she understand or approach this small boy? Every twist of his sensitive face, every toss of his blond head, and every unconscious gesture of his hand brought back too vividly the thought of another — his father.

These samenesses antagonized her, and she vented her bitterness and self-reproach on the child.

Bill fast won his way into the hearts of the household—save that of Mother's. He quickly learned that his enthusiastic advances were emphatically disapproved of by this woman creature. His huge fuzzy paws literally tiptoed past her. Jimmie adored Bill. He prattled constantly of his dog and its overwhelming talents. His wallpaper project was utterly ignored in favor of his vivacious pal. Secreted behind the shrubs in the yard, Jimmie brushed Bill's silky tail and ears with his own silver and ebony hairbrush till they shone sleekly.

Bill taught this rather quiet, sober little master of his to romp and shout. The restrained affection of the child found unknown release in his actual love for the dog. His days sped by more quickly, more happily than ever before while bitter jealousy of lovable Bill grew and rankled in the hurt eyes of the young mother.

Jimmie, with Bill tagging closely behind him, crept down the broad stairs and passed the open door of the living room. "Mother's friends" magpied vigorously within. Mother's voice suddenly rose clear and brittle. "Yes, the dog is a terrible nuisance—full of fleas, of course, and dirty. Jimmie adores it, but I'll have to get rid of it. Take it out and dump it somewhere."

The world seemed to crash about Jimmie's ears. He scooped Bill up and ran. Again behind the shrubs, he scrutinized Bill carefully and ruffled his fur in search of a flea. Sobbing, he snuggled the bewildered dog, who tried to understand his master's tears.

"Darlin' Bill, y'ain't got fleas and you are as clean as can be. I won't let mother dump you. We'll run away, Bill, just you and me."

The gate was conquered by the simple expedient of clambering over and pulling Bill through. The road wound out of sight invitingly, and they pattered hurriedly along. The afternoon was beautifully clear and warm. Jimmie struggled along with a grown-up air of independence. The rolling, green-turfed suburban spaces gave way to grey sidewalks and precise squares of green lawn.

The hours fled quickly with a multitude of interesting things. They had wandered about, delightedly investigating every street with its houses, its vacant lots, its stores, and its dump heaps. Jimmie had felt broadly as a man of the world, but now he was rather wearily squatting on a pile of railroad ties, waiting for one of those awesome engines to puff by. The friendly sun had disappeared. The murky twilight was depressing and a little frightening.

Jimmie's determination to run away was a little shaky now. He soberly observed that perhaps he and Bill had better go back and eat before they really began their venture. Again the two journeyed down the road. It rapidly grew darker. The small boy felt a little panicky even with stalwart Bill at his side.

They came upon a concrete bridge. Jimmie remembered how Dad had laughingly hoisted him up on the broad concrete rim and allowed him to walk across, peering down at the stream beneath. The raised sides of the bridge were narrow, but Jimmie felt recklessly brave.

He struggled up on the railing, uncertainly balanced himself, and commenced walking along it. He laughed with childish triumph at this latest accomplishment. But he suddenly stumbled and with a terrifying quickness reeled and fell from the edge. His frightened scream called Bill. The dog streaked back. Barking excitedly, he searched for the boy.

Finally on the dry stream bed beneath the bridge, he found the oddly crumpled body of his master. He caressed the little face and whined pathetically for the expected response but Jimmie remained still. In that moment the uncanny power of a dog to comprehend human misfortune motivated the sturdy legs of Bill towards home.

Sometime later, a panting, dusty dog scratched on the back door screen. Cook gasped, "His puppy!" She grasped Bill by the collar and pulled him into the living room before the dreaded woman creature.

The woman's eyes were red and swollen; she sobbed dryly. Beside her stood a tall blond man, grey eyes veiled with worry. He stroked the head of the brown dog. Weary though he was, Bill remembered his social graces and feebly licked the hand.

"Ol' dog, good ol' dog. Where's my boy?"

Bill sensed sympathy in this man and appealed to him for help. He fastened his teeth in the trouser cuff, pulled, and then trotted to the door. He glanced back anxiously. Jimmie's dad understood.

Cook brought a huge flashlight. The woman and Jimmie's Dad took it and followed Bill, who ran eagerly before them. He disappeared beside a bridge ahead, and suddenly the father knew what lay ahead.

"Clare, he loved to walk along that concrete rim above the stream," and he and Clare ran. They stood on the edge and flashed the light below. There in its powerful beam lay a bruised and bent little body. A heart-breaking dread in their thoughts, they carried him tenderly home.

In the first hours of the next dawn, a doctor stepped back from a small bed. "He'll be all right. He's coming to now."

Jimmie opened his great, grey eyes. He looked blankly at his mother, his father, and the ecstatically wriggling Bill in his mother's arms.

He smiled feebly, sweetly. "We're all of us together again, aren't we?"

His father spoke softly. "Yes, Jimmie, we're all of us together again — this time forever."

Sleepily, Jimmie echoed, "Forever — all of us — together."

HANDS

By Bessie Summers

HAVE you ever noticed hands and thought of their individuality and significance? No two persons' hands are alike, and in the shape, texture, and lines are revealed much of the person's life. There is the soft, dimpled hand of the baby; the withered, bony, and veined hand of the aged; the smooth, white, useless hand of the idle rich; the rough, red, misshapen hand of the labourer; the sensitive, artistic hand of the musician; the strong, capable hand of the surgeon.

We think of character as revealed in the face; the soul as revealed in the eyes; but in the hand we read the aspirations, the experiences of man translated into these symbols of action. Hands are the practical workers, the servants of the mind; they transform the dream into the reality, the formless into the concrete. They build both the perfect works and the deformities by which we reveal ourselves. Louis Untermeyer in his poem "Hands" says:

"Strange, how this smooth and supple joint can be Put to so many purposes."

They are speech for the dumb, eyes for the blind, the creator of beauty, and a human necessity for all. The surgeon relies upon the steadiness and skill of his hand to work his miracles; the actor reveals emotions with his gestures as well as with his voice; the artist gives truth and beauty to the world through what his hand puts upon canvas; the poet translates the noblest thoughts of man to the written page. It is the hand that soothes the fevered brow, or deals the blow of death; the hand behind the plow provides the sustenance of life; the hand behind the dumb machine directs the power of industry.

In this machine age the hand is significant. "It checks and rears the monsters of machinery."* It works the levers that control the giant machines in factories and mills, where one false move would stop the wheels of industry, or bring disaster upon a whole community. One quick movement of the hand on the bomb lever of an airplane would demolish a thriving city and the thousands of people living there, or the lighting of a fuse on a stick of dynamite would clear the way for the foundation of a mighty skyscraper. Upon the hand of the switchman depends the throwing of the switch so that trains may pass in safety. The hands protect the victim when a bandit says "Hands up!" These are but a few illustrations that show how much depends on this highly perfected human tool.

Not only is the hand vital to our material life, but it is a symbol of abstract ideas. The Bible tells us not to let the left hand know what the right hand doeth. The generous person is the one with an open hand. Charity is spoken of as "the bounty of the hand." Friendship is symbolized in the handclasp. Browning makes us feel the deep emotion of the handclasp in the lines:

"Let my hand —
This hand, lie in your own — my own true friend!
Hand in hand with you."
And again in "Saul":
"Hand
Grasps hand, eye lights eye in good friendship."

The artist has made the hand a symbol of beauty, and that beauty is not always skin deep. In the long slim fingers and the delicate veins of "Granvella," Titian painted the beauty of the hand of the aristocrat; in the gnarled fingers, the rough and misshapen hand of the honest toiler, more than one artist has painted the beauty of a life of usefulness.

On the walls of Fiske University is a series of murals depicting the progress of the negro race. One panel depicts emancipation by a star within a star, upheld by a pair of hands. It is a glorious tribute to human hands that they hold aloft the bright star of freedom with its inner light symbolizing that freedom comes from within the soul of the individual. Human hands are thus the agency of spiritual freedom and emancipation.

Another artist once pictured a multitude of hands outstretched toward a gleaming light. Every type is there, all representing the human longing for perfection, and for the full understanding and attainment which only the assumption of immortality can satisfy.

There are other symbols too: the grasping hand of greed, the clenched hand of hate and defiance, the outstretched hand of desire and longing that is never satisfied. In the lines of Young:

"Shall our pale, wither'd hands, be still stretch'd out,
Trembling, at once, with eagerness
and age?
With av'rice and convulsions, grasping hard?"

There are few of us who have not longed for "the touch of a vanished hand," † the symbol of deepest affection.

Let us make our hands support the good, the true, the beautiful; let them touch only what is pure and worthy. Let them build nobly in the service of our fellow man, and destroy only what is destructive. May they reach toward the light of perfection, and feel the warmth of their approach to that ideal. I can no better express my final thought than in the beautiful lines from Whittier's "My Soul and I":

"All which is real now remaineth,
And fadeth never:
The hand which upholds it now
sustaineth
The soul forever."

THE PIONEER

By James McVay

Unsung, unheralded, unknown was he,
The child of Fate, searching for liberty,
A spirit restless, unrestrained, and free,
A longing in his soul.
His destination lay beyond a star;
In night's deep stillness, watching from afar,
Advancing, though the wilderness did bar,
Unwavering toward his goal.

His face was old as centuries, but still
A glow of youthful radiance seemed to fill
One's soul with aspiration and a will
To follow and behold.
"Forever onward" was his solemn creed;
He spoke no words, but showed his strength in deed;
God sent this man, the multitude to lead,
To freedom yet untold.

In sleet and snow and cold and tempest's gale,
When doubt and desperation did assail,
With firm resolve he followed on the trail,
The promised land to see.
Alone he walked, unyielding faith his might;
With searching eyes he pierced the gloom of night
To come with joy from darkness into light,
The haven of the free.

And now at last, O noble pioneer,
Eternal peace for him who knew not fear;
The conqueror has crossed his last frontier,
The ship has dropped its sail.
Now, from afar, in stillness of the night,
Beyond the stars thou seest the shining light;
Thou com'st before His throne in glorious might,
The ending of the trail.

TIME

TIME MARCHES ON! But ere the echo of its thundering tread fades into the joyous memories of by-gone days, a great wind fills the sky. What's this?—wild laughter from a thousand throats! It grows apace—the years add richness to the faux pas of Southwest's 1936-37 crop of freshly educated youth, as next they are recorded for your pleasure. News—the re-enactment of memorable "boners" from the four corners of the block—here preserved for posterity: the befuddled doings of freshman and senior alike. Drama—the broken hearts and flood of tears; the exam you flunked that put you on the spot! Music—the soft sweet words poured into a glamorous shell-pink ear in the moonlight—ah, what sweet melody! All are here—caught for a brief moment by the editors on the brink of that maelstrom called education. So time marches on—leaving footprints in the sands of

MARCHES

ON!

. . . oops!—wet cement!

SEPTEMBER

Time simmers on; its humid hand signals for a change from swim suits to the habiliments of higher education. Eighteen hundred zealous disciples of Joy turn confirmed grouches. By acclamation of the multitude, Richard Brown becomes first man of the student council; first lady is Nancy Glover. Martyr for the student press is Dorothy Jean Carter, and that man Brown turns up again as assistant. Pretty feminine head in charge of those bewildering old business affairs is Bettilou (one name) Meyer. Footballers begin scaring each other silly with mighty feats of dexterity. Usual batch of "boy meets girl" episodes begin to thrive.

OCTOBER

New friends and new faces are not without their moments of sweet sorrow. Vice-Principal J. G. Bryan says farewell to Southwest, and George R. Powell says "Hello." Wizard of the courts, Moseley, battles his way to city tennis championship.

NOVEMBER

"There's something about a football player" . . . and the nod goes to Kenneth Hamilton for head of the Brain Trusters of '37. Bill McKinley wins second honors. Shelton Stone finds himself Heap Big Sachem Editor, and Margaret Church, Heap Little Assistance. This time they choose a MAN for keeper of the sacred wampum bags, and Bob Oberlander begins to grow wrinkles about Sachem finance. Student body swings out with whoops of joy as Southwest Indians finish football season with the city co-championship. "Amateur night," sponsored by Student Council, is noted as highlight of student assemblies.

SELECTING SENIOR JEWELRY

"OH, DICK, I'm going around in the front hall to pick my senior jewelry. Want to come along? I just can't make up my mind what I'll get. There's the man taking orders now. You go ahead and order while I look in the display cases, if you already know what you want.

"By the way, Dick, what are you going to get? Oh, a ring! That's nice — I like rings. What size does he say you wear? An eight? Oh, I take a five!

"Say, Dick, you know I really think you'd get more wear from a pin, and if you ever got tired of it and gave it away, you wouldn't have to worry about its not fitting somebody's finger. You get what you want, but that pin is sure pretty. Gee, Dick, I know you'll be glad you ordered a pin.

"Say, I forgot something! You already have three pins. What will you do with this one? I sure wish I had a nice pin! You're just lucky to have so many. You guess you won't wear it! Why, Dick, it would be a shame to waste that nice senior pin. You'll just have to let someone get some good out of it, even if it's just the janitor — or someone!

"Oh, Dick, do you really mean you'd like for me to wear your pin? Oh, how sweet of you, and you know I'd just love to, when it comes. Thank you ever so much! Oh, you have to go to basketball practice? Well, g'bye, and thanks again.

"Did I want to place my order now? Well, Mister, you may not know it, but I just did! S'long!"

CONSOLATION

She entered as a freshman at the well-known Southwest School,
And in her heart determined not to break one golden rule.
As to elevator passes, these she purchased left and right,
And her legs were weak and shaky, and her eyes were wide with fright.
With her teeth incased in braces and her dresses to her knees,
All the lordly upperclassmen felt like saying, "Goodby, please!"

So on she tripped through high school, gaining courage with each year,
Till at last a mighty senior, in her eyes there is no fear.
On her teeth there are no braces, and her legs have not a shake,
And her main delight in living is to make a freshman quake.
As she saunters down the hallway, in her eye is cool disdain,
And unless she's there, she's certain any party will be tame.
She has a smile both bright and flashing, and a dress the latest thing,
And when cut, for introduction, whoops, "Hi, Toots let's start to swing!"

Now if upon the reading of this poem (?) you are sad,
And you think there is no justice, here's a thought to make you glad:
Though now she thinks she's tops and calls most any freshman "goon"
She will enter as a freshman at some college pretty soon.

WINTER

DECEMBER

Four hundred Brain Trusters of '37 shuffle aimlessly into the meeting hall of the people to submit to a senior aptitude test. School biggies delighted with marks. Would-be Thespians don the grease paint to present "The Swan," with happy results. Bright spot: students depart for annual exchange of loud socks and cheap perfume.

JANUARY

Time drags on. Tardy students show up for classes clad in evening dress for final vacation parties. Elections of the Higher Intellect societies the chatter of the corridors. Baton of the Fourth Estate passes to Gene Davis, Helen Senter, and Laura Jean Williams. The scourge of the Faculty Third Degree falls at last, several students doing an unusual amount of "visiting around" until "the heat" of Pater and Mater subsides.

FEBRUARY

Attention! Robert Hunt wins appointment as cadet lieutenant colonel of the Kansas City R.O.T.C. Jean Gillett ranks third in the city in the senior aptitude test. Sharp gal, that Gillett! Southwest again produces the winners — Virginia Mering and Charles Blackmar take facile pens in hand and bring home a second and third in the "Sons of the American Revolution" contest. More intellectual outbursts as Carolyn Crandall bats off the winning essay in the Thomas Jefferson contest, and Constance Harper wins second. A busy week-end rolls in as two devotees of sophisticated swing, Charles Piper and Flora Jean Bornstein, take first in music contest at Tulsa. Southwest basketball tossers are highly accurate to tie for city high school basketball championship.

THE DUCK

ONE of the smarter shows that opened (and almost immediately closed) this year, was that touching bit of heart-rending drama, that d'lovely dish of scintillating rhythm, that rib-rocking smidgen of uproarious comedy, "The Demise of the Dying Duck" or "She Ain't No Chicken." The play was presented in three easy acts (no mail orders accepted).

The critics have dubbed this production the fastest moving bit since the "Birth of a Nation." Said Carter of the Southwest Trail: "For an evening of real relaxation don't fail to snore through 'The Duck.' It's the best cure for insomnia ever conceived in the minds of cinemaniacs." And so it goes. . . .

The plot is necessarily a simple one. As the play opens we find the queen (Simple Simple) and her daughter the princess (Simon Simon) in the study.

Queen: My dear, I feel that you should know that the Prince of Malta and his aide Duke Skitl are arriving today.

Princess: Oh Nightmares!

(The significance of this remark evidently doesn't penetrate to the queen, but it shows that the princess was aware of the results of a skitl and a malt before retiring.)

Queen: Yes, you're 84 now and it's high time you're getting yourself a husband. So I asked the prince down to spend the week.

(On hearing this the princess swings into the chorus of "You Do the Darndest Things, Baby," interspersed by cries of "Rag Out, Liza!" and "Get Hot, Gal" on the part of the Queen Mother. Incidental music is furnished by Loganberry Zahn's Swing Trio.)

Queen: I only asked him because I thought he'd be so "Easy to Love."

(Here the audience became restless and they were obliged to ring down the curtain on Act I.)

ACT II

In this act we find the princess on the terrace with Professor Twiddlesnatch (Black Dove), her tutor.

Prof: How bright the stars are tonight!

Princess: Yes!

Prof: You know, I find a certain beauty in the stars, a kind of poetry. How beautiful they are!

Princess: I suppose next you'll be asking me to marry you.

Prof: . . . Especially that little blue one there in the southeastern quarter. . . .

Princess: I said, "Next you'll be asking me to marry you."

Prof: It seems to be of the second magnitude. Or is it the third?

Princess: I said, "Next you'll be asking me to MARRY you!!!"

Prof: What's that? Oh! Er-well yes . . . (hastily) and no . . .

Princess: I knew it! Trying to take advantage of a poor defenseless girl. Help! Albert, save me!

(Enter Prince Albert of Malta (Rob Squab) running.)

Prince: What, ho! I come with gazell-like speed.

Princess: Buck Benny rides again!

Prince: (Embarrassed) Oh! Pardon me for intruding.

Princess: No! (Clutching him) Albert, save me!

Prince: A cad, eh? (With evident effort) Sir, I challenge you to a duel!

Prof: A duel?

Prince: Yes, shall we say swords at twenty paces?

Prof: Quite to my liking . . . the twenty paces I mean.

ACT III

Two months later at the castle of the Prince and Princess of Malta. As the scene opens there is great commotion offstage accompanied by the crash of dishware and the voice of the Princess shouting, "You cad! You wretch! You bounder!"

Prof: (Gazing heavenward) On second thought, perhaps that little blue star is of the third magnitude; one can never be quite sure about things like that. . .

CURTAIN

Now this gives you a rough, nay, violent, idea of the play, as well as clearing up little points, such as why the name of the author has never been disclosed, why the show played a one-night stand, and why the cast left town opening night.

TROUBLES

Kept after class, oh, what luck!
Rush to my locker! The padlock's stuck!
Whirl it around again and again,
Thirty-four, sixteen, twenty, ten.
Opened at last! Get out my book;
The clock glances down with a menacing look.
Dash upstairs, three at a time,
Come to the room — stop on a dime,
Oh, why in the world did I ever tear?
I'm safe in my seat with three seconds to spare.

WHILE TIME FLIES

DECEMBER 24

Down to view by daylight a live turkey which I won the night before at a drawing. Looked rather small, but having gotten him free, I should not be critical.

Jerome Hellings

DECEMBER 25

Up betimes and down to prepare for breakfast. Everyone had something different, but I had my usual, consisting of a glass of orange juice, a piece of toast, and a cake of yeast.

Mary Alice Matchette

DECEMBER 26

. . . . We had safely reached 63rd and Brookside when an exceedingly original driver decided to cut across the street. Keith very calmly pulled on the brakes, got out of the car, walked around to the front, nonchalantly lifted the hood, and began playing with the engine, much to the disgust of those in back of us and to our embarrassment.

Winifred Vrooman

DECEMBER 27

Made a good breakfast with the exception of burning the toast. I took upon myself the task of backing the car out of the driveway. Missing a fish pond, some bushes, a flower-bed, and side porch, I came to a halt in our next door neighbor's front yard — stuck in the mud.

Olive Joggerst

DECEMBER 28

Got ready for the Sappho dance with all the usual bother and bustle, and curled my hair. So nervous that I'd be late, I burnt my ear in the same place twice.

Jean Gillett

DECEMBER 29

I'm not even going to roll up my hair tonight. Just sleep.

Jean Switzer

DECEMBER 30

Obtained black eye boxing after supper. Attended a party with black eye; home, and rest in peace, I hope.

Lamont Wood

DECEMBER 31

Richard had invited me to go to the DeMolay dance with him. He brought me a corsage of one of the blossoms from a verbena plant upon a spray of parsley. When we reached the Ivanhoe Temple, however, he gave me a beautiful corsage of six Talisman roses.

Home about 5:15 A.M. Locked out. Climbed in back window, but still locked out of main part of the house. Slept until six in pantry-way when milkman woke me to find out whether we wanted three or four quarts of milk. Have a terrible kink in back from sleeping against Kelvinator.

SPRING

MARCH

March breezes in with annual struggles of the Higher Intellect societies. Two assemblies in one week, the latter being another one of those "amateur nights," prove almost too much for delighted students. Sachem scribe goes on record as favoring more of same. Worshipers at the shrine of Bacon go into dither in preparation for the literary contest. April takes a couple of swings at March and threatens to knock it off the calendar, so here we go to

APRIL

Days jam-packed with dashing to and fro, nights filled with burning the midnight oil for the industrious. Creases suddenly appear in R.O.T.C. uniforms as preparations continue for the annual circus. Squads, Right! Parade, REST! At ease!—and plenty of it. Then hardly a moment before the Brain Trusters of '37 take to the footlights and burnt cork to present "Tommy." Lit contest crowds to end of April, and Higher Intellect Societies marshal forces for the battle of the century.

MAY

Southwest stages its own coronation, and the ranking Brain Trusters of '37 are admitted to the sacred inner sanctum of the National Honor Society. With the advent of the art exhibit, long-haired daubers are purged in the upper ether of the Art Honor Society. All noble deeds of the year are recognized in the Award Day assembly.

JUNE

Tomes of learning take short route to the wastebasket. Boy loses girl. TIME MARCHES ON!

TIME TOTTERS ON

Revolt Staged by Students of Southwest High

“WE THE students of Southwest High School, in order to form a more imperfect institution of lower learning, establish injustice, insure educational uproar, provide for the common offense and general downfall of our comrades, do hereby ordain and establish this SYSTEM OF TEACHER GOVERNMENT!”, so spake General Jimininski Dodderidgeski, leader of the community jail system and head of the student uprising.

“We believe that in order more thoroughly to educate our teachers as to the student’s mode of living it will be necessary for us to take over the instruction of classes for an indefinite period of time.”

General Dodderidgeski further stated that the amazing new type of teacher government would go into effect next Monday morning. The following teachers have been appointed:

R.O.T.C. — Saltan of Huntia
English — Ricardoff Brownbrow
News Writing — Genius Davisky
French — Monsieur McPherrinvitch
Mathematics — Bettina Bohama
Chemistry — Arty Robinsonoff
Music — Vankan’ Tanka Fromania
History — Rodope Deffenbaughwowski
Custodian — Keithis Aulloff

The teachers will attend three-hour classes beginning at eight in the morning and dismissing at five in the evening. Enough home-study will be provided to keep them busy for weeks but they will be expected to have it prepared by the following day. There will be no eighth hours, capital punishment being the only type inflicted. The teachers will be instructed by relays of pupils while the rest enjoy holiday and much-needed rest.

In order to show you the efficiency of this system we invite you to attend a typical class in English since it will be under the super-supervision of that profound and unlearned professor, Ricardoff Brownbrow.

Per usual, the bell rings, though no one heeds it, and believes it to be a gong echoing from the amateur program which was held the day before, or are they now calling them student talent assemblies?

Quietly the instructor slinks into the room ten minutes late, preferably twenty, without the customary warning tinkle of the keys, and reprimands the teachers for speaking so softly, reminding them that silence sounds stupid.

With great clatter, the instructor approaches his desk, and announces that excuses for the homework which they have not finished are now in order, expecting the appearance of such time-worn phrases as "company last night." He is puzzled when one announces that instead of studying Chaucer's "Three Men On A Horse," he had made a tour of a chewing gum factory. To this, the pedagogue replied, "You should have taken your book along, and read between sticks." This is a gummy subject, eh what?

This episode discourages the instructor greatly, so he decides to begin the class with requirements and standards for a good student, which he has compiled with the incooperation of the other members of the faculty as the result of many weeks' careless deliberation.

Professor Brownbrow, or Tan Forehead, for that is the appellation which the victims of the revolution have tenderly given him, addresses the class in this manner: "I have been requested to read these requirements for a good student, which our great leader and instigator, General Jimininski Dodderidgeski, has ordered all teachers to read in classes. They are:

"1. He makes sure that he misunderstands the assignment, always writing it down on the margin of his book, and then remembering to forget it — leaving it in his locker at school and erasing from his fragile mind any thought of an assignment in that subject for that night.

"2. He plans a definite place and time for — (And just then he is interrupted by the entrance of Keithis Aulloff, who must be related to a street car conductor who is constantly shouting his name in connection with the phrase, "It's the end of the line." Mr. Aulloff requests that he be privileged to use the room as a demonstration place for his pupils, the custodians, in the important art of pulling the curtains in a manner most disturbing to the pupils. This does not bother the instructor in the slightest, though he notices the teachers with wild expressions on their faces as they hear the screaming shades. Nevertheless, he smiles placidly, and returns to the second rule.)

"3. He plans a definite time and place for study, picking out a seat close to the radio when a good program is in progress, and securing a piece of chocolate cake, between crumbs he reads a line or so of his lessons. (But they dismiss this provision as being rather crumby.) He studies until the last crumb is devoured, and then he decides that it will be more profitable to listen to the comedian on the radio to improve his powers as a conversationalist than to read 'Kenilworth'."

Then he notices that a very timid teacher has raised her hand. When he calls on her, she protests in a mild voice, "But, Mr. Brownbrow, our lesson for today is on Chaucer's 'Three Men On A Horse'."

At this, the instructor looks rather baffled, but soon he regains his customary poise and assurance replying, "Chaucer's 'Three Men On A Horse' have been living for several centuries and I believe that they should be able to exist without our aid by now." At this point the bell rings — which all goes to prove that even feature writers have a chance.

THE OFFICE CLOCK

HO-HUM, just another Monday, a symphony in blue! One more week to endure the hardships of this monotonous life. For so many more days I must go tick-tocking along, and then school will be over for another year. Oh, that blessed day when I can fold my hands and sleep all summer. This strenuous life of getting up in the morning is too much for me, but such is the life of an office clock. To think that the students around here feel abused at having to remain four years! I suppose they never consider the fact that I'm sentenced for life.

I must put an end to these regrets, for if I should forget to ring a bell once, it would be a calamity. Come to think of it I'm a very necessary and important member of this school. I wonder what on earth Mrs. Reese is doing so busily today. You'd think she had some work to do in this dull place. Oh, oh, it's time to ring the first bell! It won't be long now, and I can catch all those lazy laggard people meandering to school. Here goes brrrr! Ha, ha, now I've caught a dandy bunch! I hope they all get a week of eighth hours.

TIME STUMBLES ON! With the shuffling tread of a tired sandwich man, the editors of the Sachus have here presented re-enactments of outstanding events of 1936-37. From the pages of the Trail, from sources far removed from the theater of action, from the sharp observation of our own alert reporters, the material has come. Jam packed in 20 pages are events we hope will bring you pain or pleasure in the years to come. If we have failed, let none say we didn't try our best to catch you, my friends, in some forbidden spots.

TIME STAG

Heard on this program were: Winifred Vrooman, Robert Burns, Ruth Skaggs, Morris Greiner, and Jean Gillett. It is now 11 A.M., June 11, and K.C.S.W. leaves the air until 8:30 A.M., September 7. Until then, on behalf of the Sachem staff, your announcer, Margaret Church, bids you a pleasant vacation.
