Over a century ago, caravans of covered wagons streamed across the unexplored expanses of our nation. In them were pioneers who found new hopes and dreams of happiness, contentment, and success with every mile of undulating prairie or precipitous mountain trail they traversed. The hardships they were forced to endure called for the utmost courage, fortitude, and stamina. These ambitious, hard-working men and women, through their determination to forge on to better opportunities, served as one link in the ever-lengthening chain of progress.

Today, as then, each new discovery points the way to broader frontiers ready for exploration and development. And, as the pioneers of the early nineteenth century struggled against privations and adversities, so must the pioneers of the present day overcome many difficulties and, at times, even the ridicule and indifference of others. Real pioneers strive to surmount these obstacles in order to attain their goals.

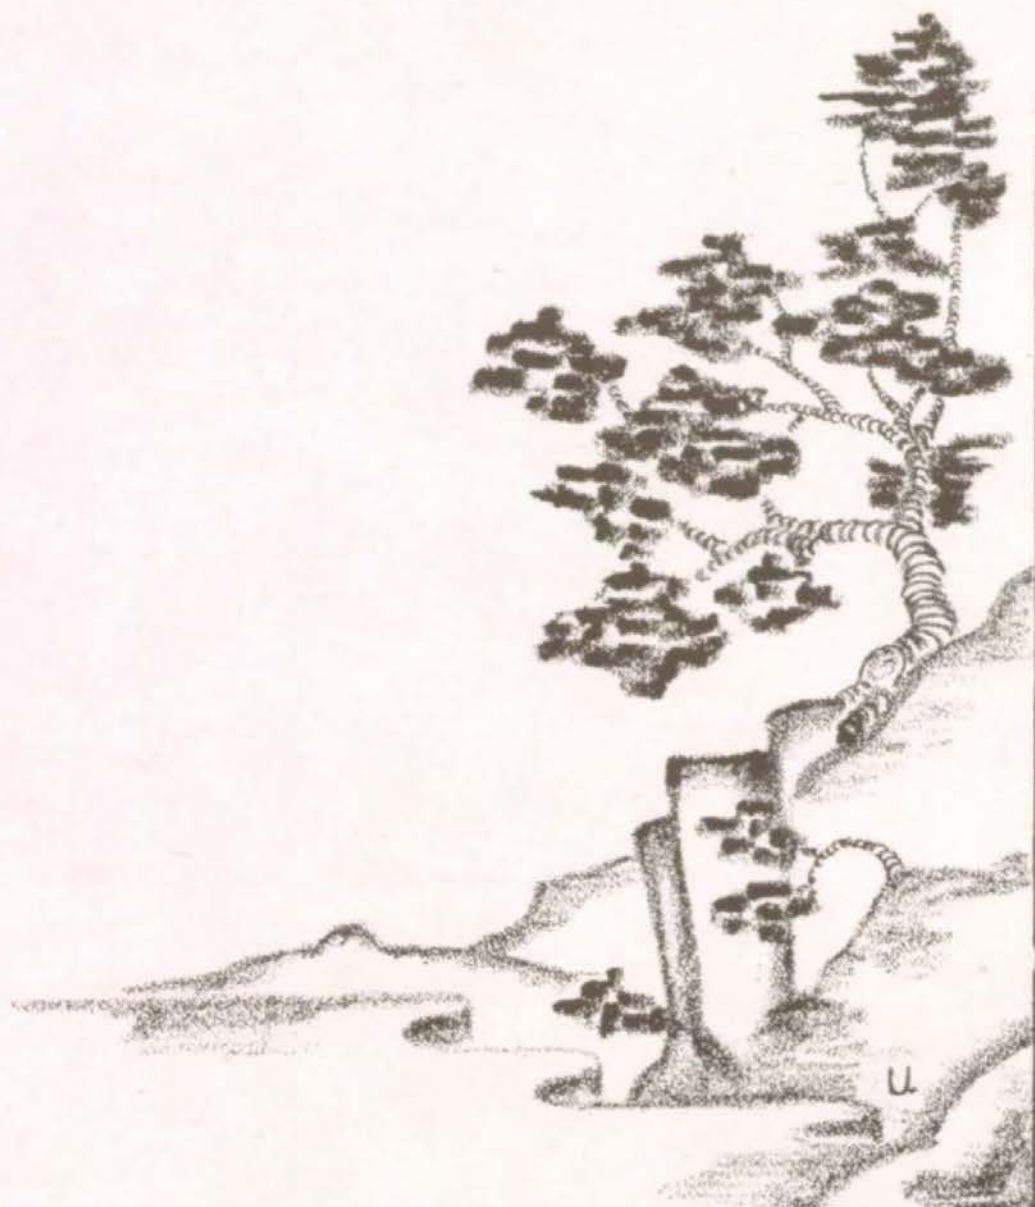

For us at Southwest the opportunities for discovery and development, challenging the initiative, ambition, and pioneering-spirit of every pupil and teacher, are many. Through participation in diversified and constantly expanding activities, we prepare ourselves for fruitful, abundant lives. Through scholarship and contest, we receive the opportunity to match our abilities with those of other people, thus training and developing them. Sometimes these tests of our knowledge provide openings of life-long importance. Through the arts, we may share our talents, and enlarge and strengthen them by diligent effort in our classes. Through service, we come to understand more fully the problems of other students and to feel satisfaction in helping them find solutions. In our clubs, the adventure of membership and leadership gives us the joy of comradeship while we are learning to live in harmony with others and to respect their desires. By taking part in athletics, we condition ourselves for vigorous living and, in addition, learn to meet disappointments and to renew our efforts. If we take advantage of all the opportunities open to us, we are laying the foundation for future happiness and success.

The key to these openings is bestowed upon us by the members of the faculty, who themselves are constantly pioneering in more efficient and effective methods of education. They endeavor, by building up in us the knowledge which will enable us to prevail over the problems of our ever-changing world, to prepare us for greater frontiers than we have yet encountered.

The staff of the 1948 SACHEM pays tribute to the pioneers of Southwest High School.

In order to acquaint the parents of Southwest students with the accomplishments of school life, an Open House is held annually. This year, on November 24, those attending heard a brief program in the auditorium, after which they filed through the halls, pausing at the various classrooms to meet the teachers and observe the displays of different courses.

As a prelude to the evening's entertainment, the orchestra played "Dark Eyes", by Harry Horlick, "Intermezzo Sinfonica" from Cavalleria Rusticana, composed by P. Mascagni, and Mozart's First Concerto for Flute and Orchestra. The choir then entertained by singing "Gypsy Life" by Schumann, "Rock-a-My Soul," a Negro spiritual, and "An Evening's Pastoral," by Shaw. Following this, Mr. Monsees greeted the guests, and a brief address by Mr. Wesner, vice-president of the P. T. A., concluded the program.

After leaving the auditorium, both parents and students responded to the invitation of the teachers to visit the classrooms. Decorated with handiwork indicative of their courses, the rooms presented a festive appearance.

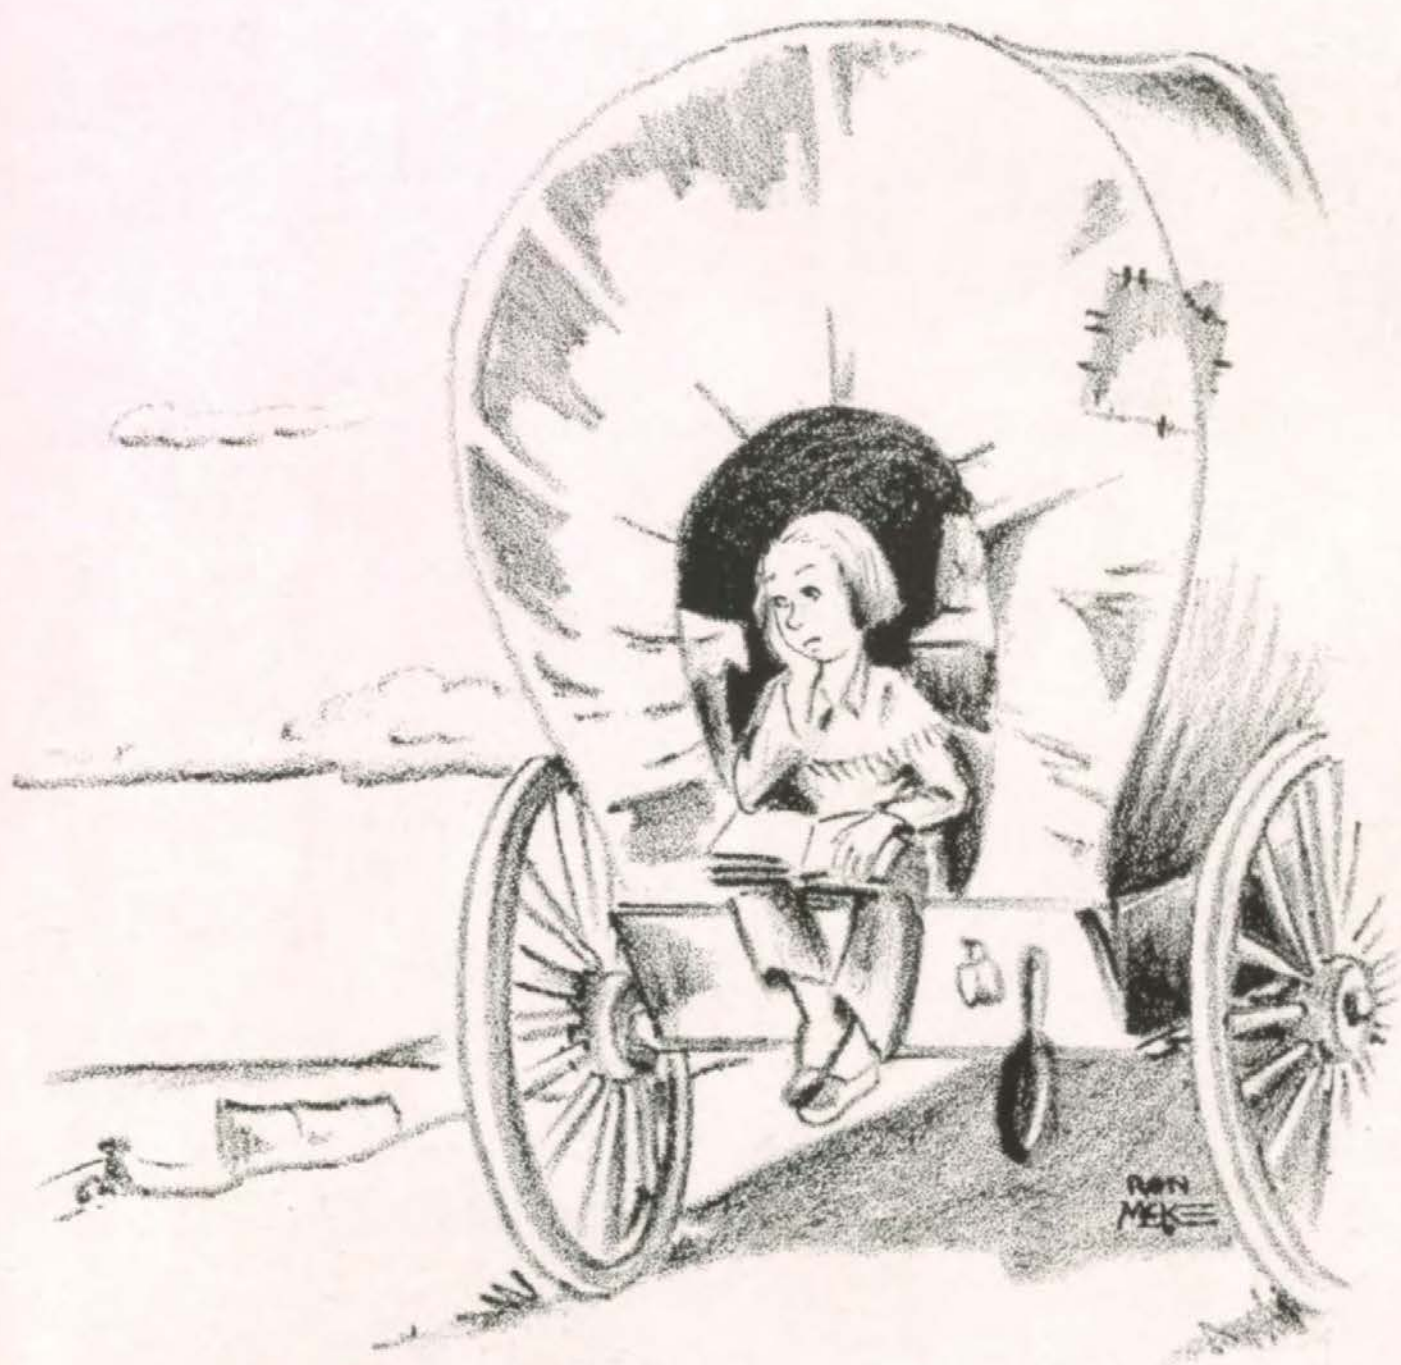

In her room filled with Latin projects, we see Miss Anderson as she greeted with smiles the many students, parents, and former students who crowded to her door. Miss Simpson and the other teachers also met large groups, including various little sisters and brothers, that congregated in their respective classrooms.

During their tour of the school, many paused to observe the fascinating displays of the R. O. T. C. The drill hall of the high school military battalion contained an extensive collection of weapons, which members of the corps explained to onlookers. Devices used for testing driving ability filled Mr. Means' room. Throughout the evening, students were present to demonstrate the use of this apparatus.

Later in the evening, after the elevator had returned the visitors to the first floor, many visited the office to meet the administrators of the school. Thus, a complete view of the building and the personnel of our school was given to all.

Class of 1948

Seniors! What magic that word held when we were freshmen. We suffered growing pains the same way every freshman and sophomore class suffers them. We looked with envy upon the seniors when we were juniors, and longed for the day when we would assume their position. But our time has finally come, and the class of '48 looks back with pride upon its achievements. We feel that we have built to endure, and that our accomplishments shall last as long as the school itself. It is with these reflections that this class takes its place in the passing parade of Southwest graduating classes.

Senior Business Committee

Are we going to wear caps and gowns? Are we going to have a senior prom? What kind of announcements are we having printed? These are just a few of the myriad questions pertaining to senior class affairs that have to be answered by the senior business committee. Composed of the seven class officers and the thirteen runners-up, this group is the nucleus around which the senior class revolves.

All financial or business questions that confront the class are first submitted to this committee. Six subcommittees, each headed by an officer of the class, take charge of such projects as the senior play, the senior prom, commencement programs, and other problems related to the senior class.

In reality, the senior business committee acts as the board of directors for the senior activities. No question goes before the class without its first being submitted to this group for approval. Usually the decision of the committee corresponds closely to that of the whole class.

The committee is vital to the functioning of the senior class, and without it the managing of the class would be infinitely harder.

Students graduate from this school every year—most of them are soon forgotten, but none of them ever forgets Southwest or the memories that she gave him. The class of '48 already has many such memories. Remember our freshman year—when Nickel, Eubank, and company led Southwest through the football season, when Bartlett and Leathers sparked the basketball team, and when Indian track men ran roughly over all comers to take their second city title? All of these names recall vividly pictures of our first year in strange surroundings. That was the year the Redskin Revels went to the circus; the senior play was The Imaginary Invalid; Sappho won the literary contest; and red leather covered the Sachem.

We took great delight, the next year, in deriding the antics of the freshmen. The football team waded through a tough schedule under Danneberg and Klose, and later on in the year the basketball squad fought to a co-championship with Northeast. Bill Meier earned the position of city Lieutenant Colonel in R.O.T.C., and the Southwest battalion took honors in the government inspection. The city track title again fell to the Indians, who went on to take second place honors in the state meet. The stage was a broadcasting station during the two nights on which the Redskin Revels portrayed a television program; the seniors produced The Torchbearers; Sappho repeated in winning the literary contest; and the Sachem was maroon.

In our junior year, the whole aspect of our position in the school was changed. We were upperclassmen then, and the seniors were no longer personalities to be gazed upon from a respectful distance. Southwest won laurels on the gridiron, claiming an undefeated, untied season. Klein and Nelson captained the basketball squad through a tough season, managing to come out fourth in the final standings. Our star in track shone brightly and the Tribe captured its fourth straight city title with Gelwicks, Cohen, Tapp, and Thomas of the relay team, and Wood in the high jump, setting city records in their respective events. The squad went on to place second in the state meet, where Wood broke the state high-jump record. The Redskin Revels turned back the pages of the scrap-book as a stage-hand lingered over old press clippings; Peg O' My Heart was presented as the senior play; Zend-Avesta won the literary contest; and the Sachem cover was white.

The fall of '47 brought the biggest change we had yet experienced in our importance in school affairs. The school seemed to be ours; we were the class of the whole student body. Ours was the class that elected officers to transact graduation affairs, and we had the major part in student government. The football season turned out to be a tough one, but the team carried on, Keller and See paving the way for our hard-driving backs. Basketball competition proved just as tough as Captain Moskovitz and his team-mates fought through a hard season. The Redskin Revels displayed the best of the school's talent in a high-type variety show; suspense pervaded the school when the seniors presented The Moonstone as their annual play; all clubs vied for honors in the literary contest; we wore caps and gowns for graduation; and brown cloth covered the Sachem.

No day could be complete without the arrival of the homeroom announcements. Reminders such as the following set the tempo of school life:

Seniors will meet in the auditorium during the homeroom period tomorrow. At this time, opportunity will be given to vote on caps and gowns, senior prom, and commencement speakers.

Literary societies meet tomorrow. All members must check report cards with their sponsors if they have not already done so.

Engineers should make reservations with Mr. Manly if they are planning to attend the field trip to the Union Wire Rope Corporation.

Southwest will occupy the north third of the east balcony at the basketball game Friday night. Students are requested to refrain from bringing noise-making instruments to the game. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

A representative of Pembroke college, Providence, Rhode Island, will be at Southwest this afternoon. Students interested should come to the office after the seventh hour.

Tepee Town will be open Saturday night from seven until eleven-thirty. Food, fun and dancing for all.

Come one, come all and join the throng
At Tepee Town on Saturday.
For food and fun you can't go wrong
If to the school you make your way.
For dancing or for basketball
Our Tepee Town has got all beat;
So come along and bring friends all;
The fun you'll have will be a treat.

Engineers ready for an outing.

A moment of concentration at Tepee Town.

Brrr . . . As the vibrant tones of the fifth hour bell begin echoing down the halls, Johnnie, an eager little freshman, is halfway out of the gym door and flying up the steps toward the cafeteria. Alas, as he rounds the corner, a taunting, ridiculing line of seniors greets him. Meekly, he takes his place at the end of the creeping line. Strangely enough, late-comers ignore the empty place behind Johnnie, seeming to prefer the open arms of their buddies at the front of the line. The tantalizing cafeteria odors float closer and closer.

"Mmm—sauerkraut and hot dogs. That's for me!" exclaims the little frosh, looking at the menu. Just as he places one foot inside the cafeteria door, a rough, hairy arm shoots across, barring the way, and a harsh voice booms out, "That's all for now. Wait your turn!"

Two minutes later, Johnnie bounds into the cafeteria and, after a slight delay, purchases his lunch. Balancing his plate on one hand, a milk bottle on the other, and nestling several books under each arm, Johnnie weaves his way toward the crowded table in the far corner. After diligent search, he manages to extricate a cracked stool from under an adjoining table, and then sits down to enjoy a few morsels of food. The raucous strains of "Congratulations To You" arouse his curiosity to such an extent that he forgets his hunger for a moment while inquiring at the next table who the lucky person might be.

When Johnnie finally settles down to enjoy the rest of his lunch, he discovers to his dismay that his plate is gone. Glancing past the row of innocent boys, he spies the "pass-your-dishes-down" lady making off with his plate. He grabs the plate with feverish lust, and pounces hungrily on the food. Brrr . . .

"Nuts, I think I'll get a home lunch permit."

As I sat on the steps in front of the school building, I eagerly awaited the arrival of my distinguished visitor, Mr. Mud, a member of the esteemed Canter Poll (somewhat slower than the Gallup Poll).

But all the days of waiting were past now and this was the big day. Presently, a long black limousine pulled up, and out stepped a somewhat bewildered little man, whom I knew at once to be my guest.

Groaning as he climbed the stairs, Mr. Mud informed me that the purpose of his visit was to check on the safety and cleanliness of school halls and lockers. Since I had great faith and confidence in the students of my school, I knew that Mr. Mud would be well pleased with what he was to see.

My watch read 8:15 and as I rounded the corner on the second floor, Mr. Mud at my heels, I was surprised that, although it was less than ten minutes before school, the halls were nearly empty.

I felt a little uneasy when I saw the end of Joe's (our red-haired janitor's) mop around the next corner, busily making a hurried clean-up job just ahead of our inspection tour. Mr. Mud, fortunately, crouching and gathering dust from the floor, was oblivious to Joe's presence.

The shrill, clear 8:25 bell rang through the halls, and the sparsely populated corridors began to resound with the anxious yells and screams of students, rushing to class.

The rush hit its peak as we had pushed our way to the stairway and my watch read 8:29. The last minute scurry to class had completely enveloped poor Mr. Mud, and I had lost him in the mob.

Later I discovered him sitting in the middle of the floor, much bewildered and confused. As I helped him to his feet, he gazed about, only to see the halls littered with debris from "cleaned-out" lockers and an unfortunate veteran of the morning's campaign limping toward the nurse's office.

In Mr. Mud's eyes there were tears of disappointment. I had picked the wrong time to make a good impression. Standing at the door and waving farewell to my distinguished and now extinguished guest, I was sure that we had one thing in common. I was sure that my name was also MUD.

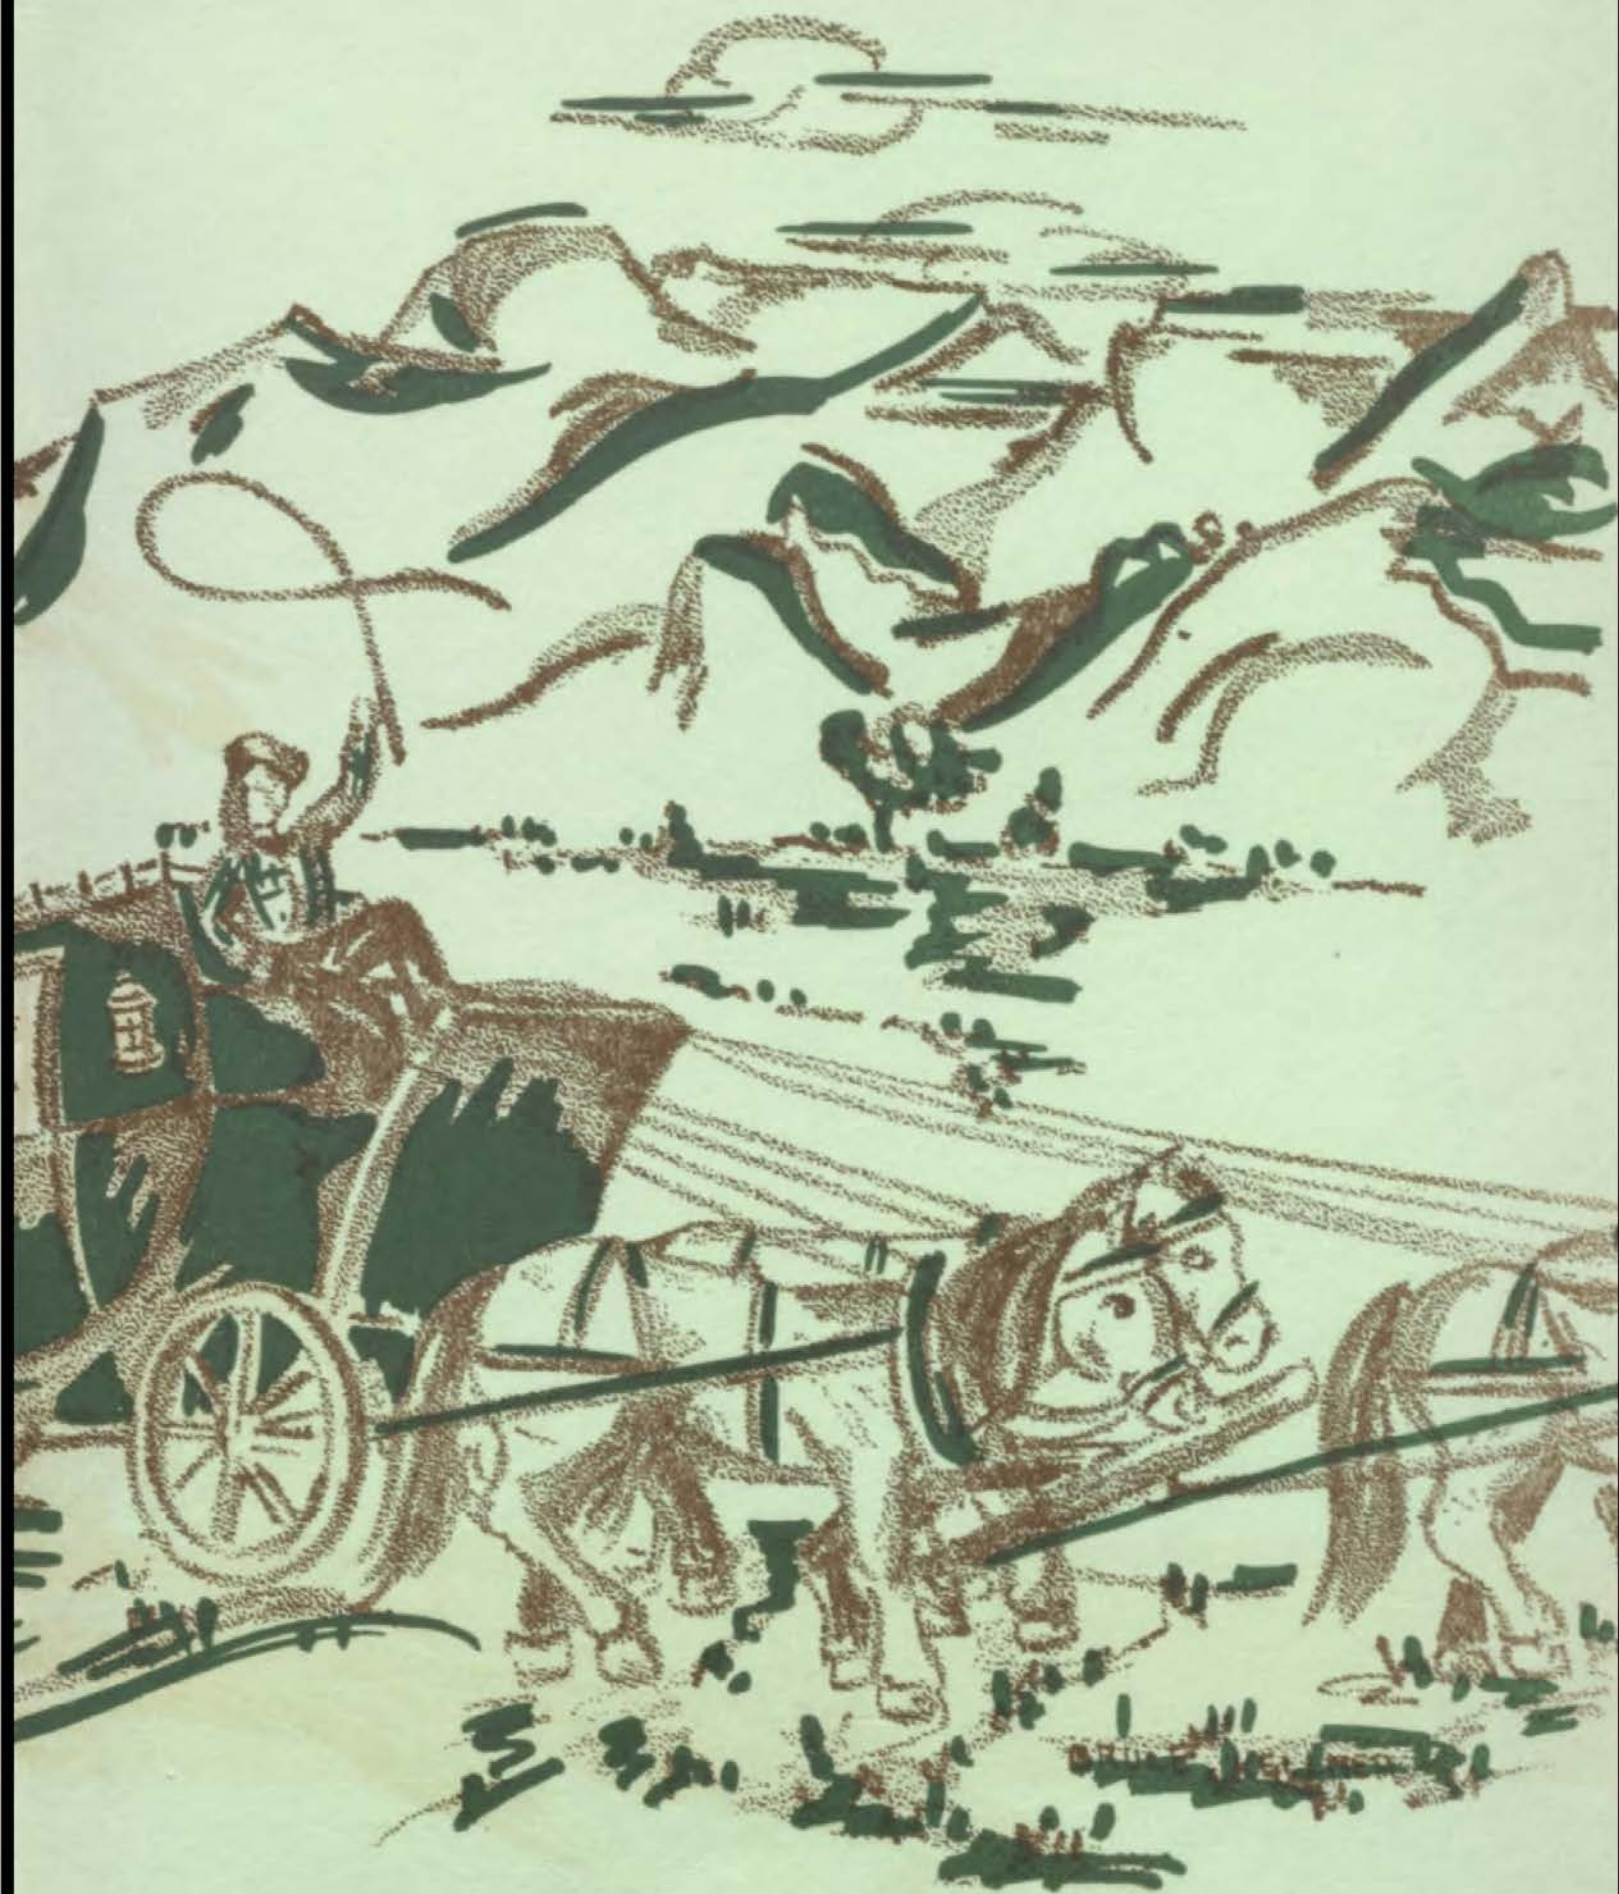

Our organizations offer us many favorable occasions for initiative, for comradeship, and for the development of lasting friendships.

ORGANIZATIONS

Honors

Honors

Since the National Honor Society granted a charter to Southwest High School in the third year of our history, two other national societies, the National Art Honor Society and the Quill and Scroll, have been established. These organizations not only recognize a student's past contributions to the school, but urge him on to greater achievements through group activities.

Every spring the highest ranking members of the senior class receive special recognition for their scholastic achievements by election to the National Honor Society. Although scholarship is the principal basis for membership, other factors such as character, leadership, and useful service to the school are taken into consideration. A senior must have a grade average of at least 2.75, to which are added the activity honor points. No one may count more than .5 honor points, and these must be earned during a student's first seven semesters. Seniors are then ranked according to their total scholarship and honor points. Approximately twelve per cent of the students of the class, the exact amount determined by a break in qualifications, are admitted into the society.

In one of the most impressive assemblies of the school year, four alumni members stress the importance of the qualities embodied in the organization—scholarship, leadership, character, and service. As the name of each new member is called, he lights his candle, receives his pin, and later repeats with the group the pledge. Undoubtedly, membership in the National Honor Society is the highest honor a student may achieve in his high school career.

The Quill and Scroll Society, an international journalistic society, honors members of our Trail and Sachem staffs. As prerequisites for membership, a student must rank scholastically in the upper third of the junior or senior class; he must demonstrate his ability to accept the responsibilities and the "give and take" of staff membership. In addition, a member of The Trail must have one hundred inches of published material. Recommendation of advisers and approval of the club's national officers assure the student of the honor, a culmination of journalistic achievement in high school. The member is then entitled to wear the pin, which is the emblem of the society, and to participate in club activities.

Many talented young art students strive each year for membership in the National Art Honor Society. By gaining the approval of two out of three judges in his "one-man exhibit" of ten original pieces, and by maintaining an "M" average, an art student is eligible for membership. Club activities serve to promote a higher appreciation of art, to develop skill, and to study the art works in our city. This year the Southwest "Mother Chapter" is promoting a $300 scholarship fund, which will be offered next year to a member of the society through the National Scholastic Awards. The Palette, a newspaper published at Southwest, is sent to each one of the chapters during the school year.

Southwest recognizes the scholastic attainments of its student body in still another way—the semester Honor Roll. To become an honor roll student one must earn two "E's" and one "S" in solids and have no grade below an "M". Although these students probably enjoyed many late sessions with their books to keep up their grades, they now have the satisfaction and due reward for outstanding school work.

Excelsior Literary Society

This year Excelsior initiated one of the largest groups of new members in its entire history. At their first meeting, the meaning of Excelsior, namely that it is a Latin comparative meaning "higher" and signifies the goal of the society to attain more creative thinking and writing, was explained to the new members. To emphasize this further, the new members were requested to read at the next meeting original poems, short stories, or essays. As a possible alternative, they could give orations, declamations, or extemporaneous speeches. The six literary forms were more extensively explored at other meetings throughout the year.

The society is a proving ground for the development of qualities that enable people to get along with each other. Individual desires and ideas are cheerfully considered and accepted where they apply to the common good. However, emphasis is placed on the benefits to the group, the central idea and theme being unity.

Zend-Avesta Literary Society

Zend-Avesta Literary Society, named after the ancient sacred scriptures of the Persians, has worked hard this year to uphold the many traditions established by former members. Realizing that this is their second consecutive year to hold the coveted contest cup, they have doubled their efforts to win the Twenty-Second Annual Literary Contest. Candidates for extemporaneous speaking began studying topics and presenting them for the consideration of club members as early as November. A debate on the question "Resolved: That small colleges offer greater advantages than do large colleges" was most enthusiastically received.

Activities of a lighter vein featured Claude Enslow of KMBC, who performed several tricks and illusions with the aid of his wife, and that warbling pair, Win and Woody, two club officers, who entertained members with some refreshing songs. Almost every meeting adjourned after, as a Zend-Avestian would say, "the refreshment committee functioned."

Zend-Avesta is the only literary society to have permanent possession of two contest cups.

Sappho Literary Society

Always mindful of the literary ideals of their namesake, the ancient Greek lyric poetess, the girls of Sappho strive, through their varied programs, to improve writing and speaking habits. At one meeting Belinda Kemp spoke on the subject of effective oratory, and at another, Frances Chase discussed the art of writing the short story. Both had had previous contest experience in their respective subjects.

Aside from pursuing its general objective of developing leadership and poise in the girls, the club offered activities to bring out their talents and originality. At the Inter-Society Tea, the very clever and attractive decorations of colorful fall flowers were arranged by members of Sappho. Following the initiation dinner, some clever songs and antics were recorded and then played for the amusement of the new members.

Other varied musical and literary programs rounded out a most successful year for Sappho.

Sesame Literary Society

Club activities and programs give scope for the development of social consciousness. Jobs on numerous committees and club offices are liberally passed around to insure each girl a responsibility and a chance to participate in club programs. The girls of Sesame have further advocated joint meetings in order to stress friendliness between societies. The Christmas party, complete with ice-cream and popcorn balls, was greatly enjoyed by all six clubs. Representatives from each society took part in the main program.

"Open, O Sesame, and let your followers through the gateway of knowledge." Such is the adaptation by Sesame of the tale of the Arabian nights. Its members are seeking a higher path than that towards material treasure of gold and silver.

Holding to its objectives of giving its members training in literary appreciation and skills, and also of promoting responsibility, leadership, and lasting friendships, Sesame has become a thriving literary club at Southwest.

Thalian Literary Society

Thalian Literary Society proves itself to be an active, interesting club by the varied programs and the friendly atmosphere of its meetings.

The new members, who withstood the "informal" initiation, were fortunate in hearing guest speakers, such as Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Higby, at several successive meetings. These two talented authors stressed, above all, enthusiasm in writing. The members then tried their own talents at creative writing, the results of which were often humorous but effective. Their bi-monthly meetings serve not only to develop individual talents and graces, but also to promote social fellowship and entertainment for girls. Since Thalia, the society's namesake, was the Greek muse of both comedy and pastoral poetry, club activities emphasize both the humorous and the poetic aspects of life.

Of special interest to the Thalias was the mid-semester luncheon at the Tea House, and, climaxing a successful year, the traditional Senior Picnic, planned by the juniors.

Veda Literary Society

The goal of each Veda this year was to learn to appreciate good literature and music, to write and speak more fluently, and to conduct a business meeting correctly. These aims were supplemented by the stress upon friendship among members. In an attempt to help the girls' societies become better acquainted, two other clubs were invited to the Veda clubroom to hear Miss Van Metre, formerly head of the English department of Southwest.

Outstanding among club programs was an "Introduction to Veda" which consisted of the singing of club songs, reading of the Constitution, and explanation to the new members of the Annual Literary Contest. Another meeting was devoted to the study of Gilbert and Sullivan music.

The name, Veda, refers to the ancient Hindu books of wisdom and learning—the Vedic writings. The girls of Veda Literary Society seek to broaden their own education through participation in club activities.

The Southwest Y-Teens are sponsored, not only by the school, but by the Country Club Community Center as well. Under the direction of Miss Jane Joyce and Mrs. Katherine England, they are carrying out an extensive and varied program.

Each Y-Teen, from the eighth grader to the senior, finds pleasure in helping others. Their effort spent in soliciting clothing for Norwegian young people was amply repaid by many thank-you letters and pictures. The girls can also be proud of their one hundred hours of clerical work at the Community Center office, as well as their baby-sitting service, which is a rapidly growing project. A Christmas Pageant for the benefit of residents of the school district utilized the talents of every member in promoting the Christmas spirit.

In service to the school, the Y-Teens sponsored an assembly with Martin Hall, world educator and traveler, as speaker. Furthermore, the girls, in conjunction with the Hi-Y, planned an Easter service for the school.

Through incorporating the ideas brought forth by such discussions as "You and Your Family" and "You and Your College Life," the Y-Teens are striving to improve their own person-

Thus, through service for others and a well balanced program of activities, the Y-Teen members learn to find and give the best.

The Southwest Student Council promotes cooperation of the student body and the faculty in all school affairs, and gives students the opportunity to express their ideas for the solution of school problems.

Their activities this year included supervision of parking, promotion of assemblies, and a crusade for police protection at football games. The members also sponsored a campaign for senior rings for juniors, which culminated in a junior vote on the proposed rings. Furthermore, the council has given its support to the activities of the Country Club Community Center, such as Tepee Town and the summer recreational program.

Because of such splendid representation, the Student Council can truly be termed "the Senate of Southwest."

The Junior Red Cross Council of Southwest may be justly proud of its aid to unfortunates in this post-war year of reconstruction. Both the sponsor and the members have given freely of their time and effort to promote several school drives.

The council went into action early last fall by urging the homerooms to fill educational gift boxes for children in Belgium and Germany. Following this, a project was undertaken to send Christmas boxes to veterans' hospitals. A letter from a grateful patient expressed his appreciation and his revived hope in today's youth.

From March 8 to March 12, the Red Cross members staged a concerted drive for funds with which to carry on another year of successful charity work overseas.

Football

The 1947 Southwest gridders began the season with an impressive 33 to 0 conquest of Hogan before entering the race for the league crown.

The Pirates of Paseo were the first of the Interscholastic League foes to fall before the Orange and Black. Martin and Gieringer plunged over in the second quarter to offset a last minute touchdown by the Bucs which registered a score of 13 to 6.

Bob See blocked a punt early in the Southeast battle to set up a tally. Later, after a 26 yard scamper, Martin was downed on the one foot line but Clark bucked across. The dangerous Knight passing attack bogged down in time to give the Indians another victory, 13 to 0.

By taking advantage of the Tribe's loose ball handling, Central converted three fumbles into touchdowns to hand Southwest her first defeat in fourteen consecutive games. The extra point, kicked after the initial Eagle tally, was the deciding margin as the Blue and White won, 19 to 18. Gieringer then gave his rooters a thrill when he returned the next kickoff 85 yards to score. A long march to the goal and a 60 yard runback of an interception completed the Braves' scoring.

The Tribe won its last victory of the season by taking the measure of the Manual Cardinals, 13 to 0. Jack Anderson scooped up a fumble on the first play and Gieringer went over to put the Indians ahead to stay. A Redbird threat was stopped on the two yard line, and in the second half Akins broke through the forward wall to dash 33 yards to the goal.

Northeast and East, co-champions, then bested the House-men in close and exciting games. Although the Vikings were outdistanced on the ground, their aerial offense paved the way for a victory. In the last quarter Vic Brewer passed to Jack Anderson for the lone Indian tally, but the Norsemen already had triumphed 12 to 6. After being pushed around in the first half, the Indian squad came to life and drove eighty hard-fought yards to score after receiving the kickoff from East. However, the conversion that would have tied the game was in vain and the Bears, undefeated, rolled on with a 7 to 6 victory.

In the season finale the Tigers of Westport held the favored Tribe at bay and in the last period pushed over a touchdown to win the game, 7 to 0, and third place from the Injuns, who finished fourth.

FOOTBALL MANAGERS

Wil Siemens, Jim Owens, Charles Ennis.

GIERINGER, Captain . . . Johnny's nearly perfect play was outstanding in every contest as he often booted the ball over the goal on the kick-offs, battered the opposing wall, and sprinted for long gains. He was awarded a half-back position on the second All-Star team for his fine performance.

AKINS . . . Bill, a small but hard running fullback, added greatly to the Indian ground game.

ANDERSEN, D. . . . The rugged line play of this junior guard will spearhead the 1948 team. Dick received honorable mention in the All-City selection.

ANDERSON, J. . . . By stopping end runs and grabbing passes, Andy hustled the squad and also received honorable mention in the All-City selection.

BOYD . . . This tall end snared many an aerial for long advances and showed fine defensive play.

BREWER . . . The high booming punts and one man pass attacks of this towering fullback were spectacular throughout the season.

CLARK . . . Ronnie contributed to the team with crashing line plunges from his halfback position.

CORNELL . . . Although not breaking into the lineup until the middle of the season, Albert sparked the Orange and Black as a speedy and hard-driving back.

CRAHAN . . . Tom engineered the Indian strategy from the quarterback slot. His sure ball handling and generalship brought him honorable mention on the All-Star squad.

KELLER . . . John was moved from center to tackle late in the season but won the original position on the All-Star first eleven for his accurate passing and strong line backing.

MARSHALL . . . Pass-receiving was the specialty of Alan, who aided the department and also the defense.

MARTIN . . . Frenchie offset his size with speed until forced to stop after an injury sustained in the third game.

PTACEK . . . Mike turned in a bulldog brand of defense from his end of the line.

ROSEN . . . A dependable kicker, John also flipped the pigskin around in the aerial offensives.

SAUNDERS . . . Harold's aggressive spirit in the forward wall gained for him the respect of his mates and a guard spot on the second All-City team.

SCHMITZ . . . Hard line play as a guard featured the assets of Fred to the Indian forward wall.

SEE . . . The alert and powerful play of Bob, a hustling tackle and three year letterman, was evident in the right side of the line and secured a berth on the first All-Star aggregation.

SILBERG . . . Demonstrating his versatility, Dick played an excellent game at both the center and halfback posts, assuring his return next year.

WILLIAMS . . . A block busting tackle, Carl proved his worth by playing every minute of every game.

Second Team Football

Under the guidance of Coach Chubb, Southwest's second team fought to third place in league standings. The squad was loaded with talent and should provide many members of next year's first team.

Paseo was defeated 10 to 0 as the seconds gained most of the ground by skirting the ends. Southeast was also beaten 31 to 12 in a game featuring Jim Hall's interception of a Knight pass and a 60 yard run back.

The Indian's all-round superior power beat the Eagles of Central in a 39 to 0 avalanche. Manual, too, was snowed under by a score of 45 to 0 as the Bravelets crossed the goal in every period.

The first set back of the year occurred when the Northeast Vikings grabbed a touchdown early in the game and then held that margin as a torrent of rain slowed up operations and turned the field into a quagmire.

East was then downed in a hard fought contest. A Rudolph to Hormberg pass connected for thirty yards and Don Hudgins got off a sixty-yard punt to spark the team.

In the last game of the season, the Westport Tigers pushed over a touchdown in each half to put Southwest in third place with a 13 to 0 loss.

Basketball

With only one returning letterman, the Southwest cagers began work early in December to build up a strong squad by playing an extensive non-league schedule.

Shawnee - Mission embarrassed the Tribe in the initial game of the season by smothering them, 34 to 10. The Orange and Black, however, hitting their stride, bowled over the next two teams, also from Kansas, Olathe 27 to 23, and Rosedale 31 to 28. The high-flying Rock-hurst Hawks then beat them 49 to 35 with a fine display of ball handling. Southwest outscored Ruskin 28 to 20, but the alumni with several of last year's stars edged the varsity 24 to 22.

Westport, the pre-season favorites, downed the Indians 41 to 27 in the league opener. By controlling the backboards, the tall Tigers started their march to the crown.

In one of the most thrilling contests of the year, the Braves nosed out the Pirates of Paseo 32 to 30 in an over-time game which saw the Tribe overcome an 11 point lead in the last quarter and then go ahead, only to be tied by a desperate heave from midcourt. In the extra session Arnie Eversull drove under the basket to net the deciding tally after the team had again made up for an early lead by the Bucs.

The smooth-working Green Bears of East won from Southwest 26 to 30 as a late rally fell short of the goal.

Avenging last year's victory by the Eagles, the Orange and Black outscored Central 36 to 23. A hustling game by the Indians spelled defeat for the Blue and White.

The Vikings of Northeast, though held to a slight lead in the first three quarters, pulled away in the final stanza to triumph over the Tribe 41 to 36.

Manual's Cardinals upset the Orange and Black 40 to 31 in a fierce battle. The Braves could not seem to find the hoop and the result was inevitable.

Saving the best for the last, the Indians swamped the Knights of Southcast 57 to 25 with Stan Moskovitz, All-City forward and team captain, hitting 22 points to tie the season record. Alan Marshall, with fourteen points, was second in scoring.

This year Kansas City squads resumed play in the state tournament. However, Southwest was eliminated by Glennon 25-34 in the opening round.

ANDERSEN . . . The only junior on the squad, Dick played on even terms with the other Injuns and will be able to start next year with plenty of experience.

BREWER . . . As a six foot four inch center, Vic tipped in goals and helped control the backboards.

CRAHAN . . . This hustling guard aided the Tribe with fine team work and accurate shooting.

DAVIS . . . The fancy hook shots and quick rebounding of Woody labeled him as a valuable cog in the Indian attack.

ELLIS . . . Ball control was the greatest contribution of Lee, a rangy forward and close defenseman.

EVERSULL . . . One of the speediest boys on the team, Arnie threatened the opposition with his fast breaks and won honorable mention in the all-star selection.

MARSHALL . . . Alan, a sharp shooting southpaw, was an excellent ball handler and grabbed many of the rebounds.

MOSKOVITZ . . . The faultless passing, ball hawking, and high scoring of team captain Stan was rewarded by his being selected as forward on the first all-city quintet.

ORTHWEIN . . . With keen floor play this peppy guard gained support from the Southwest fans.

PTACEK . . . By virtue of his scrappy and fast moving brand of ball, Mike held down a guard position on the 1948 team.

WOODARD . . . Don, playing a quick and deceptive game, often threw in some long swishers.

Second Team Basketball

Southwest's second team turned in a record of five victories and two defeats under the instruction of Coach Bredehoeft, new basketball mentor.

The Westport Cubs were on the short end of a 25 to 19 score as the squad ran up its first victory. Dave Corbin paced the team with 9 points. A thrilling contest was won by the Paseo Pirates when they fought off a Bravelet rally to win by one tally, 28 to 27. The second triumph was earned in the encounter with East. A 22 to 7 lead at the half led to the 30 to 18 victory.

Still on the warpath, the Injuns ran past the Central Eaglets, 34 to 31, and then dropped Manual's team, 26 to 13. In the latter game both squads were ice cold during the first quarter, but the victors soon ran up a comfortable margin. In a close and well played battle the Northeast seconds defeated the local boys by a 32 to 38 count. Although leading at the intermission, the Indians slipped behind as the Vikings held the upper hand. Jim Loder led the scoring with five fielders and a free throw.

Southeast was outscored 34 to 30 in another exciting game as only one point separated the teams at the half and three quarter mark. Jack Koenig hit six buckets and tossed in a charity shot for the Tribe.

Win for Four Consecutive Years

Success in the coming season was predicted when the indoor track title was won by the Indian spikebusters early in March at the Municipal Auditorium. Emil Schutzel triumphed in the 60-yard dash and the relay team set a new record.

Every dual meet foe succumbed to the all round power of the Tribe, mostly by lopsided scores.

By winning the championship for four consecutive years, the heavily favored Indians lived up to expectations in the city meet and nearly doubled the points on their nearest opponent, Northeast, 49½ to 25. Schutzel and Cohen swept the century to put the Tribe out in front to stay. Emil had the good time of :10.1, and :20.0 in the 200 yard dash which he also won; both times being two tenths of a second off the city record.

Banny Tapp produced one of the major surprises of the day when he made his debut in the low hurdles and promptly won it. Both relay teams broke the tape and the medley relay quartet set a new city mark of 1:39.

By leaping over the bar at 6 feet 1¾ inches, Jack Wood set the other new record and the team scored in every event.

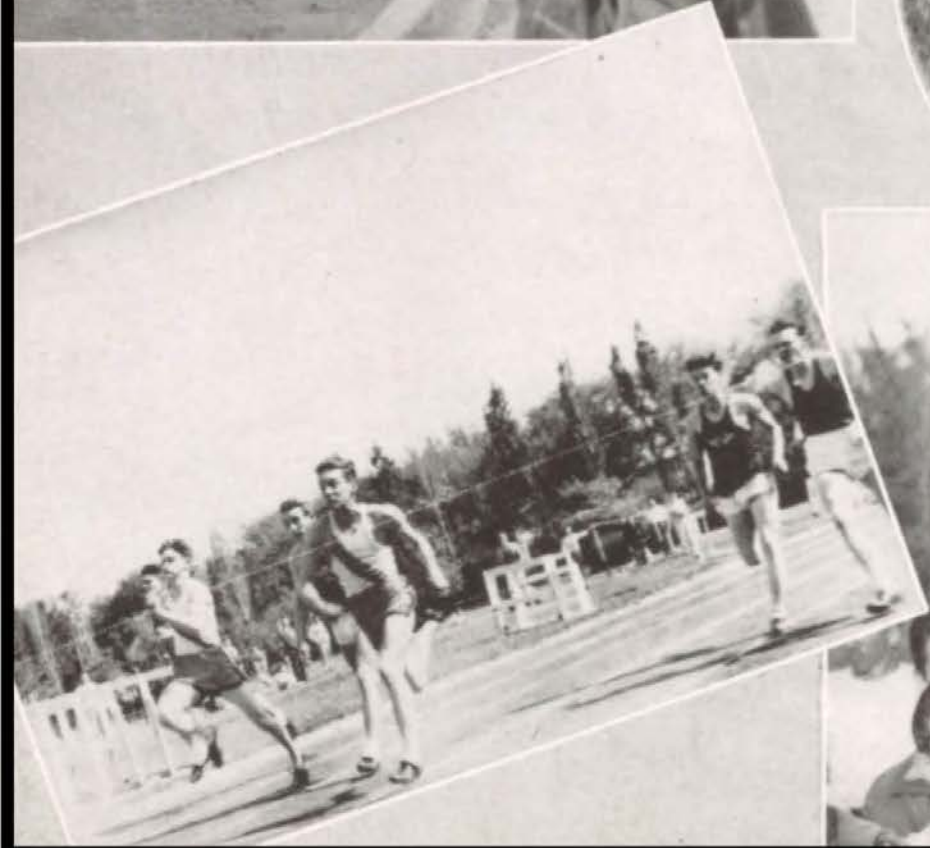

At the state meet, Southwest and University City of St. Louis staged a photo finish, but in the final relay the eastern team won first place to the Indians' third and took the championship by 2¼ points.

Schutzel won both dashes and Cohen ran third in the century. The other relay team raced to victory and Tapp placed third in the low hurdles. Jack Wood, city champion, who had taken second in the high jump the year before, set a new state mark when he cleared the bar at six feet three inches.

Thus ended the season for one of the best track teams that Louis House has coached at Southwest.

Swimming Champions

CITY MEET RESULTS

- 50-yard free style—Montaleone, SW; Bonavie, NE; McCoy, P; Davenport, P; Gerson, SW. (27.0)
- 100-yard breast stroke—Darlington, P; Townsend, M; Poulin, SW; Harrington, SW; Felkner, SW. (1:15.9) new record.
- 200-yard free style—Bryant, SW; Hall, P; McArthur, SW; Camlin, SW; Walter, P. (2:27.8)
- 100-yard back stroke—Newby, SW; Parsons, SW; Sullivan, SW; Sessions, NE; Bontrager, P. (1:13.8) new record.
- 100-yard free style—Marshall, NE; Rieling, SW; Woodbury, SW; Connet, SW; Davenport, P. (1:05.8)
- 150-yard medley relay—Paseo, Northeast, Southwest, Manual. (1:36) new record.
- 200-yard free style relay—Southwest, Paseo, Northeast. (1:54.0)

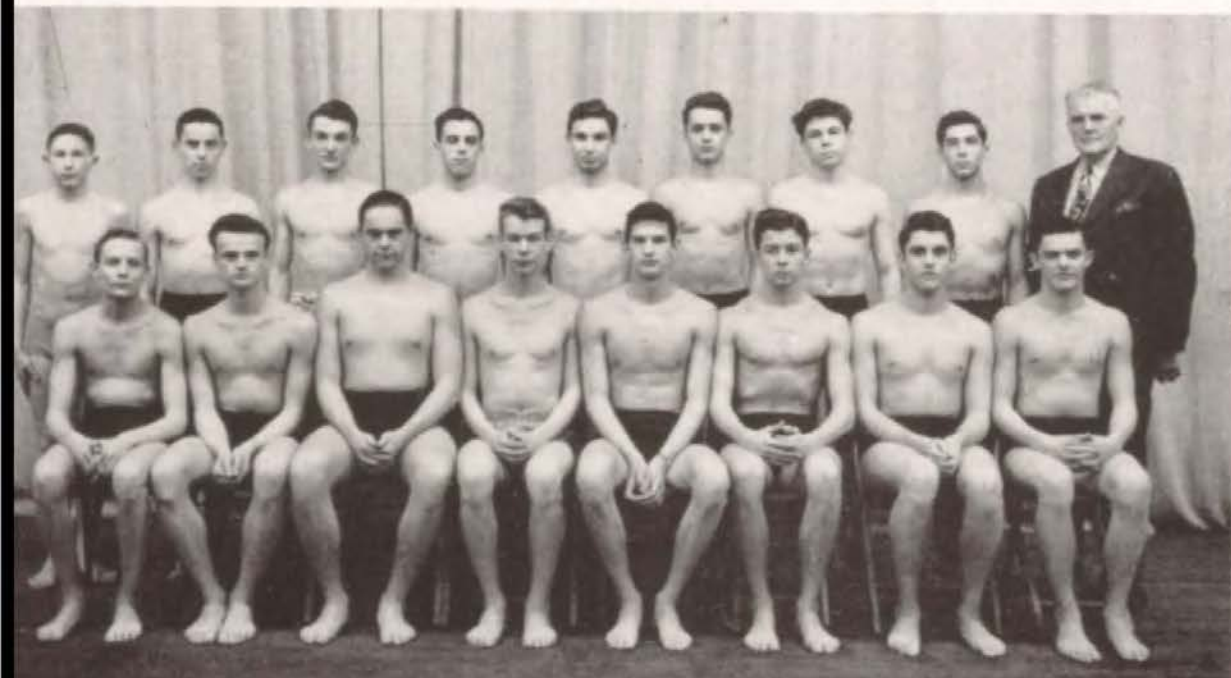

For the third consecutive season the Southwest swimming team won the Interscholastic League championship. Led by team captain Harry Newby, the fishermen outsped three other squads to finish first by 28 points.

In dual meets the Indians also triumphed. The first victory was won at the expense of the Redbirds of Manual by a score of 48 to 9. First and seconds were registered in every event except one. The tankmen then scuttled Northeast 39 to 18, but were beaten by Paseo, 27 to 30, and Wyandotte, 13 to 44. Again in the win column they passed up Manual 44 to 11 but bowed to the Vikings of Northeast by a 26 to 31 count.

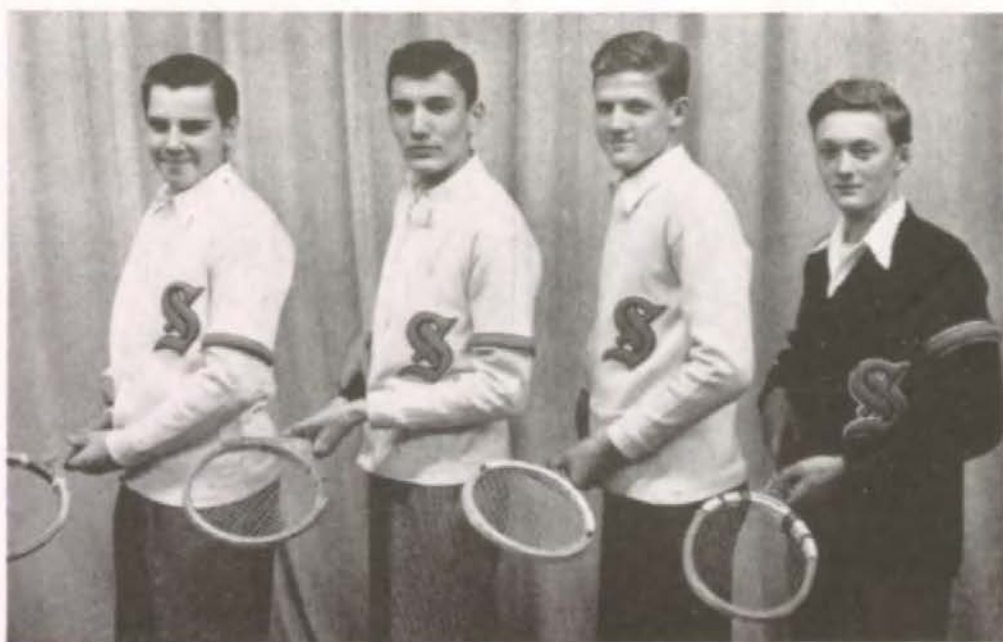

The Paseo meet was the last dual contest and the Red men routed the Pirates 38 to 19. Newby set a pool record of 1 minute 10.5 seconds to lead in four other firsts by Southwest.

With four out of seven firsts and ample reserve power, Southwest easily placed first in the city meet. The Tribe tallied 62 points, as many as the next two teams, Paseo 34, and Northeast 28.

Tennis

The 1948 tennis squad was greatly weakened by the loss of all of last year's members. However, new talent was discovered and a hard playing, high spirited team was organized.

Early in the fall the school tournament was held to determine who would represent Southwest in league competition. Bill Fithian, a very consistent player, captured the singles title and John Holden placed second. The winners of the doubles bracket were Charles Hankins and Jim Ralston, who defeated Denny Bolte and Bob Boxer in the finals.

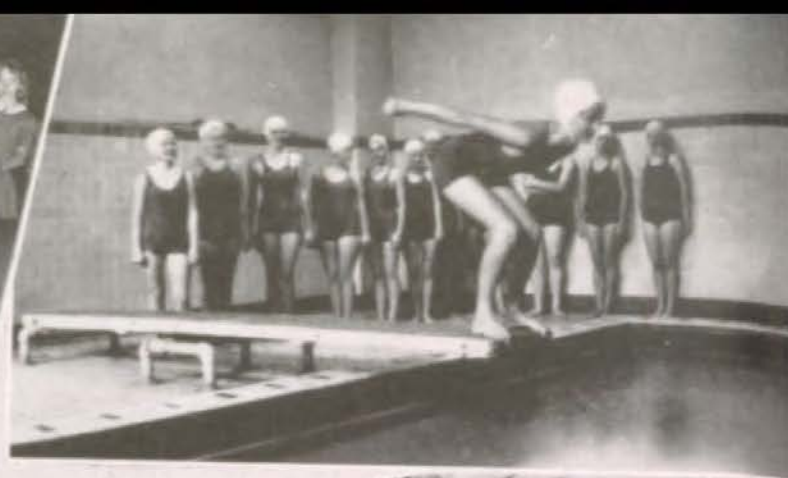

The Indians were successful in the city meet, although they did not win the championship. Every Southwest entry advanced into the second round of play by virtue of an opponent default. Fithian fell before Barnes of Westport, who had just won the state singles title, and the Boxer-Bolte duo were victims of a rally by the Paseo team, 6-3, 4-6, and 2-6. Holden, however, had no trouble in disposing of his first two opponents, Westport and Southeast, as he lost only three games. Hankins and Ralston were also victorious by trouncing the Paseo unit, 6-2 and 6-1, but in the next round bowed out of the match when the Southeast team beat them.

In the finals Holden also lost to Barnes, who captured his second consecutive league championship. This year the squad was coached by Mr. Frank L. Stark, new tennis coach.

Girls' Sports

Girls' athletic activities at Southwest stress physical fitness and a strong interest in sports. The gym classes offer aerial darts, pingpong, archery, and badminton. Mastery in these sports will prove invaluable to any active girl. Through participation in volleyball, basketball, baseball, and hockey, girls gain an understanding of the rules and techniques of play.

Hockey, the fall activity of Southwest maidens, builds coordination, quick thinking, and poise. One of the most thrilling games for girls, hockey is always classified as a favorite. A second sport is basketball, which demands alertness and agility of movement. After Thanksgiving, the girls find that huge nets have been raised and that the gym is set for many vigorous games of volleyball. Teams chosen from each class vie for honors in this sport, which emphasizes precise timing.

Swimming classes, in which Southwest mermaids strive to improve their speed and form, are held during the year. The Southwest girls' swimming team was honored by being chosen to demonstrate their talents in rhythmic swimming, water baseball, and comic races during the intermissions of the interscholastic swimming meets.

Of course, the purpose of every sport is to stimulate fair play and to attain the feeling of individual improvement. Close team cooperation makes gym one of the most enjoyable and worthwhile activities for girls.

A Well-Trained Youth

Through the able instruction of Master Sergeant William A. Story, the Southwest ROTC Battalion has completed another successful year in the training of good citizens. In order to teach the cadets to work together as a team, to act on initiative, and to become efficient and prepared, the ROTC has provided valuable studies that a boy may take during his high school years. Large groups of men trained in this manner are essential in producing the leaders of tomorrow.

The cadets are offered courses in drill, physical development, tactics, first aid and hygiene, map reading, weapons, and military leadership. On one of the finest equipped ranges in the city every student is given instruction in rifle marksmanship. By using such educational equipment as colored charts, film strips, and motion pictures, the ROTC presents the most modern teaching techniques to its cadets.

During the year, the Battalion has had its various interesting activities. A trip to the National Guard Military Country Club for the advanced cadets, where the high powered weapons were fired, was sponsored by the American Legion. Another event was the Armistice Day Parade, in which the entire Kansas City ROTC participated. Then came the rifle team matches with the other schools of the Interscholastic league, which were held in a manner similar to that used by all other sports.

Cadet Major Dougherty competed in the examination for the selection of the regimental staff and won third place to become the plans and training officer.

On the night of March 13 the annual military ball was held. Suzanne Kleine, ROTC queen, had as her attendants Cynthia Wildman and Chloe Warner. It was a gala spectacle as the brightly colored formals intermingled with shining brass, polished leather, and khaki uniforms.

The popular ROTC circus was presented by the Kansas City Regiment on April 9. Southwest's number was rifle exercises, and the cadets with their white T-shirts and puttees were one of the high points of the evening. Other spring activities included the annual government inspection and the ROTC Field Day.

The 1948 Battalion has written a record of which it may be proud, but this record was made possible only by the direction of Sergeant Story. His experience and knowledge have made the Southwest ROTC organization one of the finest and its cadets the best of citizens.

Cadet Captain
JAMES R. GARR
Battalion Adjutant

To the Southwest ROTC Battalion:

This year of ROTC has been one that will long be remembered as a striking addition to the high tradition of our Southwest Battalion.

This is the first year that Freshmen have been eligible for the course. Their interest and enthusiasm in the subject assures me that in future years our achievements will be surpassed.

The upperclassmen have also done and are doing a fine job of molding our organization into one of exceptional accomplishments. To the non-coms who are to be the new leaders, I extend congratulations on behalf of the officers for your fine showing. On your shoulders now lies the future of ROTC at Southwest.

To the officers, who are the mainstays of the battalion, I wish to say that it has been a wonderful and profitable experience to be associated with such a fine group of fellows. You have come through with flying colors and deserve much of the credit for this successful year. I wish you the best of good fortune and hope that you will always have the same determination and will-to-win.

However, no word of praise could be said about the battalion without giving the real credit to our leader and instructor, Master Sergeant William A. Story, who has guided it practically from its inception. Due to his influence, hundreds of young men have left Southwest more fully prepared to take their place in the world of today.

Sincerely yours,

Cadet Major Charles F. Dougherty

Junior Rifle Corps

"The Junior Program of the National Rifle Association has been developed to bring out those qualities of sportsmanship, fair play, manliness, self-control, and cooperation so essential to success in life."

With this goal in mind the Junior Rifle Corps of Southwest began its second year of activities since its reorganization. Keen interest was shown at the beginning of the school year as the membership was quickly built up to its present forty-nine members.

As soon as the shooting season was opened, these cadets could be seen getting into form as they practiced on the ROTC range. Those returning worked up the ladder of advancement while the new boys were meeting the requirements to become Pro-Marksmen, Marksmen, and Marksmen First Class.

Later, after they had acquired the badge of Sharpshooter, the more difficult hurdles were passed as some of the cadets added extra bars to their medals. Three of these boys, Robert Boxer, James Jasperse, and LeRoy Weeks, reached the prized title of Expert Rifleman. They were presented their awards at the annual ROTC ball by Major Logan R. Rappe, executive officer of the Kansas City ROTC headquarters.

Master Sergeant William A. Story has directed and promoted the program by which many of the cadets are becoming crack shots. This plan also provides a source of talent for the Southwest rifle team that fires against other schools in the Kansas City area.

R.O.T.C. Marksmen

This year, the Southwest ROTC marksmen, sponsored by the Cummings-Lee-man American Legion Post number 130 and under the expert coaching of Master Sergeant William A. Story, finished high in the final standings for the city championship. The teams, although not matching the pace it set last year, forced its opponents to vie vigorously for their winnings.

Besides the regular interscholastic matches, the squad engaged in many other contests. Among these were the Fifth Army Match, the National Rifle Association matches, and several matches with out of town schools.

The highlight of the season, however, was the visit to Kemper Military Academy. Here, with the Little Camp Perry Matches, the NRA sponsored contests, and the Kemper events, the entire team was kept busy competing against crack shots from all over the country.

On the basis of their season scores, the following cadets received letter awards: Robert Boxer, Paul Larson, James Garr, John McNay, Leroy Weeks, and Charles Dougherty, who was the only member of the team to make the all-city squad. James Jasperse and Charles Buckler also fired in league competition.

Southwest, indeed, has every right to be proud of its rifle team, which consistently represents the school with fine scores and high team spirit.

The end has come! For three days you have dreaded this hour of agony. Far down the line a steady metallic clicking warns you that HE is coming. You shiver thinking what would happen to you if you should forget your instruction. Now the terrible tattoo echoes not more than ten feet away. Suddenly a fierce challenge shatters the tomb-silent atmosphere:

"What is this?"

* * *

Aeons pass. Then a meek and half apologizing voice rasps out:

"I believe that is the ejector, Sir."

"Then what is this?"

"That is the ejector, Sir; the first thing-ama-jig was the extractor, Sir."

"Humph, you should have told me that the first time. Sergeant, give that man. . . ."

The words are lost in a world of fears as you realize that you couldn't have answered the question yourself.

* * *

An explosive CLICK splits the air and brings you back to reality. Out of the corner of your eye you see the vicious lunge and murderous grasp as HE seizes someone's rifle.

A hesitation follows the inarticulate query: "What's your rifle number?"

Then a confused voice blurts out, "3869405217, Sir."

"And what is the purpose of this part?"

"I don't recall, Sir."

You wonder, terrified, what the object might have been, and pray that you will know if HE should ask you.

* * *

Then suddenly HE is in front of the man at your right.

Like a robot, the man presents his rifle for inspection. A lightning movement and he, too, is disarmed. Cold, calculating eyes scrutinize the object, seeking for some minute imperfection that will seal the doom of your companion. After the formality of demanding the number of the piece, HE casually remarks that everything seems to be in order. Unsuspectingly the poor victim beside you tumbles into the carefully laid trap by accepting the compliment.

"Thank you, Sir."

* * *

With a fiendish glare from his piercing eyes, HE leaps to the slaughter.

"You know better than to speak when at the position of attention. Tell me what attention means."

After stalling two minutes to collect his wits, the wretch begins: "To take the position of attention, place the heels together and . . . maintain silence." At this point HE abruptly halts the miserable soul and tells him to remember it.

* * *

In an instant HE stands before you. Mustering all your courage, you raise your rifle to the correct position. You blink your eyes and bite your lip to see if you are imagining things because HE is actually smiling at you!

"Very neat appearance, Private. Sergeant, give this cadet an 'E'."

Then he is gone. Delirious with exhilaration, you stagger on to your next class with the realization that you have undergone your first inspection by "Wild Bill" Story.

Southwest Band

One, two, three, four . . . whether the sounds echo from 217 or the marching field, the source is the Southwest Band. In either place, Mr. Alvin Stephens, its director, rehearses the numbers, ranging from strains of the fight song to arrangements developed along symphonic lines.

The fall program for this busy organization centers chiefly around its marching activities. The regular marching band of 1947 performed at the football games while the remaining underclassmen formed a training reserve. A familiar scene to Southwest Indians on a cold windy morning is the sight of sleepy-eyed band members practicing their routine on the athletic field. It is there that the band perfects its unique formations.

With the close of the football season, assembly appearances and basketball games thrive on marches and the more lively tunes. Adding their voices to these numbers, the Southwest braves and maidens give vent to their boisterous enthusiasm.

Spring brings the annual All-City band festival, and attention turns to concert practice. During the evening of the festival, the bands from the Kansas City high schools play several numbers, and each school presents an ensemble or solo selection.

Thus, throughout the entire year, the band represents an essential part of school life. Not only does it enliven all activities at Southwest, but it is also an esteemed representative at public functions. Indeed, every true Indian can be justifiably proud of our fine organization, the Southwest High School Band.

Southwest Orchestra

The Southwest Orchestra each year is a source of pride to the student body and faculty, as well as to its members and its director. Again this year, it has provided outstanding entertainment under the leadership of Mr. Marvin Johnston. The members of this organization gather daily during the seventh hour in room 217. Once here, they cease to be individuals and become one. However, each member is significant,—each a part of the cooperative organization that so ably performs throughout the year.

In the fall, when Southwest holds open house for visitors, an official welcome is extended during the program in the auditorium. To the audience gathered there, the Orchestra displays its talents. During the same season, the annual talent show, the Redskin Revels, is accompanied by the Orchestra.

No matter how cold the day, people come to hear Southwest's Christmas Vespers. In our auditorium, the Choir and the Glee Club, as well as the Orchestra, offer selections in keeping with the Holy Season. The music accompanies Biblical pantomimes. During the winter, the Orchestra also provides music for the meetings of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Spring brings the festival of the Kansas City massed high school Orchestra. Southwest is well represented in this activity, and during the present year a Southwest student, Nancy Neibarger, has been concertmaster. The music played by more than a hundred instruments ranges from "Perpetual Motion" by Carl Bohm, to selections from "Showboat". The Orchestra plays before and between the scenes of the senior play. The initiation of the National Honor Society offers another opportunity, and this musical organization takes advantage of it. During the graduation ceremonies, the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" drift from the stage. For the last time, the seniors walk from Southwest's stage and receive their diplomas, accompanied by that essential part of school life, the Southwest Orchestra.

During the past year, Southwest enjoyed some of the finest and most varied assemblies that we have had for some time. The first assembly might have given us a hint that we were in for something different when Mr. Milton led the school, with the assistance of some movie slides, in songs that ranged from "Stardust" to "There's a Long, Long Trail".

Continuing in the musical vein, the Southwest band took over the next program. Shifting from march time to jazz classics and back to marches again, the band kept on a beat that never allowed the assembly to drag.

The next time the whole school seated themselves in the auditorium, they were treated to a rather satirical take-off on the actions of those students who attended Tepee Town. Rather weird little characters paraded around the stage while embarrassed and self-conscious members of the Tepee Town committee read some verse that would have outraged any professional poet. Nevertheless, the program served its purpose and also furnished an hour of entertainment to all present.

Turning from the light, informal types to the more serious assemblies, we later had the privilege of hearing Miss Lillian Picken, a missionary who had served in India for 23 years. Her tales of the internal strife and suffering were vividly told and were followed by a beautiful display of Indian embroidery and other handiwork.

Back to the funny side we went in another assembly. Miss Breen's drama classes presented "The Great Allowance Battle", a one-act comedy which found the student body still laughing when those familiar words, "you will now pass to your third hour class" were announced.

Brotherhood Week and the importance of its serious theme were clearly specified by Mr. Martin Hall, whose vivid stories of the homeless children in Europe made us realize just what a war can do to the innocent victims of its holocaust. Speaking with a pleasing German accent, Mr. Hall thoroughly interested his audience and received an excellent response from the students.

For the third year, KCKN and the University of Kansas City again presented "It Pays to Be Smart" on the Southwest stage. The program was recorded and was heard on KCKN the following Saturday. The masculine half of the six contestants proved to be the more alert, with the first three places going to the boys.

Early in May, four years of faithful studying by Southwest students were rewarded when fifty members of the senior class were inducted into the National Honor Society. The impressive ceremony was a goal for which the underclassmen could aim, it being the highest scholastic award given the high school students.

Of course, the grand finale to the assembly programs was the award day assembly. It was here that the Joe Dorr and Sis Arnold award trophies were given, and the many scholarships won by Southwest seniors were recognized. It proved to be a fitting climax to a year of exceptionally fine programs that were given in our assemblies.

Redskin Revels of 1947

The sixth annual Redskin Revels royally entertained, on the nights of November twenty-first and twenty-second, the audience in the auditorium of Southwest High School. To open the show, the Southwest Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Myron Johnson played an overture, the cue for Mary Ann Heuermann and Lynn Kay to open the curtain. On stage the entire choir in colorful attire sang and enacted "Gypsy Life" by Schumann. They were assisted by two somewhat stubborn mules who were obviously overcome by stage fright. In accordance with the gypsy theme, Rozanne Metzger danced a spirited Tarantella.

For the benefit of those new to Southwest and its activities, John McNay stepped from behind the closed curtain to explain the purpose and to summarize the history of the Revels.

As the curtain was opened, revealing Bruce Kellner at the piano, the strains of Debussy's "Prelude" from Por le Piano Suite filled the auditorium. Continuing in the musical vein, Peter Rush and Richard Oglesby presented a skillful rendition of "Down South," a marimba duet. Then the Girls' Glee Club sang Jerome Kern's "Long Ago." Mary Ann Heuermann portrayed an Indian maiden in an unusual dance number, "Indian Fantasy."

Jan Coulter and Nelson Perkins sang "Waltzing in the Clouds" while soft lights accented graceful couples waltzing against a background of pillars entwined with blossoms. Following this Nancy Niebarger, a talented musician, played Deberiot's "Concerto No. 9," a violin solo.

Jane Shofstall, as a prim schoolmistress, attempted to extract the correct answers from her class of rebellious students, played by eleven of Southwest's eighth-graders. This comical scene recalled to students and parents alike the efforts of some familiar agonized teacher.

The popular songsters, Woody Davis and Win Koerper, cast as the "Cousins

The Girls' Ensemble sings "Long Ago."

from Colorado," harmonized, accompanied by accordian and guitar.

Graceful Virginia Orthwein tapped "Happy Go Lucky" to a modern dance tune.

Lana Hensley and Midge Bauer transported the audience to New Orleans with an unaccompanied duet of "Beale Street Blues." A chorus danced on the darkened stage with luminous hats, gloves, shoes, and canes.

In a "Bicycle Built for Two", coy Anne Turner, as Daisy, was beseeched by Henry, Martha Sue Cox, to be his bride. Beaming faces peeped through a field of daisies and accompanied the pantomime singing, "Give me your answer true."

Cynthia Wildman capered and frolicked about the stage interpreting "City Bound," the journey of a corn-fed country girl on her way to the big city. Mary Ann Heuermann and Lynn Kay, the silver sprites, performed a delightful ballet number. Rozanne Metzger, with her costume complete even to a silver crown, danced "The Princess."

With the Girls' Glee Club forming a lovely background, soprano Ruth Reid sang "Speak to Me of Love" by Denzi. While Virginia Orthwein danced, the lilting voice of Marlene Nickel soloed, "Will You Remember" by Romberg. Then, in closing, The Girls' Glee Club sang "Waltz of the Flowers" by Tschai-kovsky-Manney.

Many words of thanks are due those who made this entertainment possible. Miss Grace Breen and Mr. Robert Milton, faculty supervisors, the student directors Marilyn Thompson and Davis Roach, and the stage crew, gave a great deal of time and effort to this production which was greatly appreciated.

"The Moonstone, Mr. Blake, the Moonstone—it's gone," cried Betteredge the morning after the nineteenth birthday of Gloria Verinder. At once the whole cast of the 1948 Senior Play became involved in intrigue and suspicion.

Since he had brought the Moonstone to the house of Lady Verinder to present it to Gloria according to the will of her dead uncle, Colonel Herncastle, Franklin Blake felt personal responsibility for the safety of the gem. The changed attitude of Gloria toward Franklin, her fiancée, after the disappearance of the Moonstone also influenced him to expend every effort toward its recovery.

When the theft was reported to him, Franklin immediately called Sergeant Cuff, "the keenest detective in all London," to investigate the matter. On the basis of the discovery of smeared paint on Gloria's door, the sergeant and his assistant, Mr. Joyce, searched the wardrobes of the servants and guests; however, no progress was made in solving the mystery until the following year when Rosanna, the second housemaid, resurrected a paint-smeared pajama jacket from the beach where she had buried it.

To his horror, Franklin found that the jacket bore his initials and realized that Gloria must have thought that he had stolen the diamond. He was unable to understand this development until Doctor Jennings, the family physician, confessed that he had slipped a tablet of laudanum in Franklin's coffee that night because of anger engendered between the two as a result of an argument on the subject of medicine. Because of his general nervous condition, Franklin had been impelled under the influence of the drug to remove the gem from Gloria's room.

On the morning after this discovery, the real culprit, Godfrey Ablewhite, who was another suitor of Gloria, was apprehended, and the Moonstone was recovered. As the play closed, Gloria returned the stone, which Colonel Horncastle had taken from the temple of Siva, to two Hindoos who had followed the precious stone around the world to regain it.

Stage Crew

Before the curtain rises on every school performance, the stage crew is constantly at work to accomplish the many jobs of hammering, sawing, painting, and gluing that must be done. Very few people in the audience realize the laborious hours that the crew spends in preparation for every performance—hours of building the scenery, handling the props, and placing the sets that make the production more realistic and enjoyable.

The operation of the many sets of lights used on the stage presents a problem to the electricians of the crew. During a play or an assembly, they have the responsibility of turning the house lights on and off at the proper moment and also of correctly adjusting the footlights and the lights overhead. Even when group pictures are taken for the yearbook, there must be some members of the crew present to regulate the electrical apparatus used for lighting effect.

The microphone, which is essential equipment in all presentations, and the entire public address system are under the care of the stage crew. To handle this and set it up in good working condition requires knowledge and skill gained only through repeated practice, but the stage crew proves itself competent in this function many times during the year.

Thus, the stage crew and the electricians represent a vital part in the success of any Southwest presentation, and they prove themselves to be efficient and indispensable workers.

The Debate Team

Strikes! capital! labor! arbitration! The words flew back and forth furiously in the debates on the resolution "That the Federal Government Should Require Arbitration of Labor Disputes in All Basic American Industries." During the debate season, the labor problem and its ramifications throughout the American economy became of prime importance. In addition, debaters learned about major labor legislation such as the Taft-Hartley Bill.

The debate team is composed of fourteen students who distinguished themselves by quick and logical thinking and an easy command of expression in debates with representatives from Central,

Shawnee Mission, William Chrisman, and Wyandotte. In the various debates with these schools, Southwest competitors learned new methods of argument and refutation.

In the debates, each of four participants gave a ten minute constructive speech. Following this, he was allowed to strengthen his case by attacking the arguments of the opposition in a five-minute rebuttal. These final talks taxed the powers of the individuals in quick, accurate thinking.

Thus, the fourteen members of the debate team have attained poise in public address and logic in thought.

SONNET

By Mary Lou Ulery

From sullen skies the blizzard's Herald blew
A silver trumpet through the lowering night,
Shattering black clouds, into star-pointed white,
Laying their pristine blanket on the yew.
When red dawn broke at last across the snow,
A line of empty footprints met my gaze.
Marching from Nowhere through the winter's daze,
With stumbling gait beyond my ken they go.
Thus through the "winter's eve" of life on earth,
While no one marks, a silent column stalks.
The "little people," marching to Death's—light!
Nameless to history; their sorrow, their mirth
Are unrecorded. Through the storm each walks,
Leaving his line of footprints in the night.

Short Story—Very Superior

IT TAKES FOUR

By Ray Voskamp

Al Thompson, anchor man and star of the Smithfield Prep half-mile relay team, stood in his lane, shoulders slightly turned, keeping a careful eye on the number three runner, Pete Maxwell, as he cleared the turn and headed into the home stretch.

About six yards before Pete hit the restraining line, Al took off in his usual ground-covering stride. He took the silk-smooth pass about midway in the passing zone, finished his distance and jogged back.

"Gentlemen," said Al, modestly, "we're perfect."

He looked at his teammates. There was Pete Maxwell, number three runner, snub-nosed and blond, built like a bean pole but with the speed of a greyhound. At the number two spot was Ray Gentry, short and stocky but with unexpected speed in his muscular legs. George West, six feet of high nervous tension with a start like a skyrocket, held down the number one position.

George said, "You underestimate us. We're colossal."

The four speedsters seated themselves on the edge of the track and surveyed the activities of the sun-filled oval. Warm spring sunshine glistened on a jumping pole as a vaulter went up and over. Al nodded with approval and turned his attention to a lanky hurdler clearing the barriers.

"Take a look at Donald Duck," he laughed. "He's going to fall apart one of these days the way he throws himself around." They grinned in unison, watching the antics of Donald Hunt, a red-haired hurdler of the Smithfield squad.

"He's got the racing form of a hippopotamus," said Pete, "but he covers ground in his own peculiar way."

"Hi, Coach."

"Hello, boys." Coach Griffith gave them a quick, satisfied nod. "You've had enough for today. Take a lap and hit the showers. Say, Pete, the headmaster wants to see you in his office when you're dressed."

"Gad," said Pete, "what have I done this time?"

"I knew you shouldn't've swiped all the silver spoons from the dining hall," razzed Ray. "Why did you do it?"

"To keep things stirred up," Pete replied, and fled down the track with an outraged Ray at his heels.

When they finally arrived at the dressing room, Pete dressed in record time, and left, yelling back over his shoulder about meeting them at the "rec." room in Haver Hall. Three choruses of "Home on the Range" and one towel fight later, the three track men adjourned to Haver Hall, where they occupied their usual table as they waited for Pete.

A short time later, the door swung slowly open and Pete walked in. His lips were tightly drawn and his face held an expression of grief. "What's the matter, Pete?" asked Al. "You look as if you lost your best friend."

"Not one friend," said Pete. "I've lost three."

"What do you mean?" questioned Ray. "What happened in the headmaster's office?"

"Well," said Pete, "Dr. Blakely was in the headmaster's office and said those x-rays I had taken last week show I have a spot on my lung. I'll have to drop out of school next semester. Of course track will be out of the question."

Al wailed, "But you can't, Pete. What about the relay team? What about us?"

"I know it's tough." Pete hesitated. "I've told the coach, that's what took me so long." He straightened up, then added, "If Doc says I have to quit, then that's all there is to it."

After a moment's silence, George said, "What did the coach say?"

Pete shrugged. "Put another man on, that's all."

"Who?"

There was another silence, then Pete said reluctantly, "Donald Hunt."

George exploded, "That drip?"

"I know, but he works hard, George, and he's fast enough."

"B-b-but," George stammered, "we're a team. He isn't—well, he just isn't one of us."

"He is now," Pete looked up miserably. "Gee, fellows, I feel rotten about it."

"You feel rotten about it?" said George. "Holy mackerel, how do you think we feel?"

* * *

Donald hurried up to the three relay men, in a general state of confusion. His glasses were on crooked and his sweat-shirt was inside out. "Are you always this late to practice?" snapped Al. Donald's explanation was cut short when Coach Griffith walked up and said, "Your work is cut out for you today; with a new man in the outfit you'd better work on baton passing. Take your zone positions but don't try for speed at first, that will come when you're smooth enough. Okay?"

Weeks of practice passed but the three teammates couldn't forget Pete's leaving. They were resentful and cocky toward Donald until that day of the Bay Port meet.

The sun was setting well over toward the west, its light striking a balanced javelin and catching bright sparks in the dirt that showered under a broad-jumper's heels as he landed lightly in the pit.

Al, in sweatpants and track shirt, with the gold and white Smithfield emblem, took a quick look around the cinder-circled oval and turned to Ray and George, saying, "Remember when we would have been the high spot?"

"I sure do," nodded George. "What did Donald get in the hurdles—a second?"

Al said grudgingly, "First. Bay Port didn't give him too much competition. Hush, gentlemen, here he comes."

Donald, a blanket draped over his shoulders, crossed to them slowly, his face even more solemn than usual. Ray gave him a quick, amused look. "You don't have to worry champ, Bay Port has already won the meet."

There was a long silence, during which Donald simply stood and stared at them. Then he said very slowly, "So you're quitting already."

Al's chin jerked up, and his eyes narrowed. "What do you mean by that crack?"

"Just what I said. You guys are all a bunch of quitters. When the going gets tough you give in without a fight. You haven't got the guts to stay in there and punch, and I'm going to quit this team as soon as I can." With this Donald turned on his heel and walked away, while the loudspeaker blared, "Relay runners to your zones."

Donald went to his zone, with his feet dragging. He hadn't meant for things to go that way; he hadn't meant to lose his temper. His plan had been just to run this race the best he could, and afterward go to Coach Griffith and ask to be replaced. He knew when he was licked. Now, all he'd done, was make bad matters worse and wreck any hope of cooperation.

It wasn't even true, what he had said. He had cared about gaining their friendship. He'd cared a lot. Well, that was all washed up now. All he cared about was to get this race over.

George was waiting for the start, along with Bay Port's first runner, a gangling, tow-headed athlete with a clean stride. The starter's gun was out. He got the signal from the Finish Judge and cocked it.

"On your marks." George's long body dropped and he was down on his mark, his feet finding their holes, his fingers arched, his eyes riveted on the track ahead.

"Get set." Both runners came up, coiled springs waiting to be released. The gun barked and they sprang into the straightaway, evenly matched and running shoulder to shoulder. George settled into racing stride quickly. He had a pretty, easy style that covered ground. Both racers came up to the finish line fast, still neck and neck. Ray, waiting, took his start on perfect timing, and both he and George were at top speed when the exchange was made. The drop of the baton was almost dainty in its precision, the result of hours of coherent practice they had had together.

The second Bay Port man and Ray broke simultaneously. Bay Port's Number Two was a speeder with flashy leg action. Ray's starts were never sensational, and his choppy, dogged pace looked outmatched, but somewhere in the yardage he closed the daylight between them. Donald, standing in his lane and watching his teammate come into him, saw that he would get close to an even start.

His nails were biting into the palms of his tightly clenched hands. He didn't know what kind of a pass he'd get from Ray, or whether he could handle it. He flexed his fingers and swayed his shoulders slightly to ease the tension. Ray came in, reaching with the baton. What happened then was anybody's guess. It happens to every runner at some time, the smoothest, the steadiest. Before the moment of exchange, Ray dropped the baton.

It hit the cinders sharply, bounded sideways. There was an agonized gasp from the Smithfield supporters as Donald and Ray dived for it simultaneously, almost striking shoulders. They got it together — Ray shoved and Donald grabbed. Somehow the stick was in Donald's hand and he was running. His spikes bit deeply into the cinders and his eyes were fastened stubbornly on the track ahead.

Never mind now about whose fault it was. He was running, faster than he ever had in his life, driven only by the urgency of breaking down that widening gap. His heart pounded, his shoulder muscles tightened, and he could feel the strain all down through his chest and legs as he poured on drive, and more drive.

The gap shortened and closed.

They were coming into the finish. His breath was tearing at his lungs and his leg muscles felt numb. Al, waiting for him, just a haze in front of his eyes, had dropped back. He was in mid-zone: he'd come back so he could take the pass as close as he could to save that extra split-second of strain on legs that were trembling with exhaustion.

Donald made one final gigantic effort and lunged over the exchange line. He saw dimly that he was only a yard or two behind the Bay Port runner. Then he stabbed blindly toward Al's hand. Al lifted the stick almost gently from Donald's hand, cradling it. Donald had an instant to realize how sweet the pass had been and another instant to know that he had almost set Al off to an equal start. Then he felt hands holding him firmly and heard a voice telling him to "take it easy."

The crowd was yelling like maniacs. Bay Port's third runner had exchanged at top speed with the anchor man, who was off to a whirlwind lead. Al, without any momentum, had lost precious time between start and pick-up. It would take a miracle to make it up.

But Al's red head was flashing along and Al's feet were wearing wings. The rooters were hoarse, and jumping up and down. His pounding, driving stride was narrowing the advantage, as they came into the home stretch pressing mercilessly for the lead.

The tape glimmered. Feet raced. Muscles strained. There was widening daylight between them, as the Bay Port man slowly inched ahead. Al made one last gallant effort, drew a deep breath and jumped for the tape in a Paddock finish. It broke against his chest and he stumbled over the line, winner by a scant inch.

The shout that rose from the Smithfield crowd was a deep roar of triumph. Al grabbed for Donald, who was unaccountably nearest, and clung to him with his shoulders heaving.

"Holy smoke," said Donald. "You ran a race."

"Me," said Al, panting, "and three other guys. I couldn't let you down, Donald, you're a fighter."

There was a long, comfortable pause. Al panted. George grinned. Then Ray said uncomfortably. "Sorry I was a dope and dropped the stick, Don. It just jumped out of my hand."

Donald said, "I should have caught it. We'll practice throwing and catching things." He hesitated; then he made a most inappropriate remark, for a member of a relay team that was nearly out on its feet with fatigue, "How's about cokes at the drug store after we've dressed?"

Al looked at him for a long moment and grinned. "You're on pal, and after the name you called us, you can pay for the cokes."

Donald grinned back. "Mercenary, aren't you?" he said contentedly.

Oration—Very Superior
HE WOULD NEVER WALK AGAIN!

By Heywood Davis

"Be still, sad heart! and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining;
Thy fate is the common fate of all,
Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary."

These words from the pen of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow exemplify the life of a certain light-haired, broad-shouldered, modest boy. To him, they signify the desire to succeed; the determination to win in the face of defeat. This young man never wanted to become a famous scientist or a noted diplomat; he wanted to become a great runner. His name—Glenn Cunningham.

Glenn was born the son of a poor country farmer. There was an older brother in the family named Floyd and to Glenn—well, Floyd was his idol. Both boys wanted to become runners. They ran to school, not only because they loved to run, but also it was their task to build the fire in the great stove which stood in the corner of their one-room country schoolhouse.

One morning, in their haste, Floyd poured kerosene on the fuel. Then, he struck a match. An hour later they brought the boys home. Floyd was dead and little Glenn was horribly burned. It hadn't been kerosene at all, but gasoline and the wooden schoolhouse had burst into flames. Then everything went black.

When help finally came, the fire had taken the life of one boy, and little Glenn—would never walk again! As for running, there was no hope.

Glenn lay in bed crying, not only because of his great agony; his legs blackened and seared, but because Floyd—his "big brother" was gone. Weeks later, the bandages were removed. But now, instead of two, young, healthy limbs, the toes on Glenn's left foot were gone, and the transverse arch was almost destroyed. His right foot hung limply, two and a half inches from the floor.

After a long time, when Glenn was finally able to hobble around on crutches, his friends gathered around, eyeing him pitifully. Glenn bit his lips, fought back the tears, and bravely said, "I could run before, and I'll run again—you guys just wait and see."

And twelve years later, this same young man from Kansas, whose legs would not even support his own weight, became the most remarkable mile runner in the history of track athletics. Remarkable, not principally because he once held the world's mile record, of four minutes, four and four-tenths seconds, but because he overcame seemingly impossible obstacles to become the most amazing foot racer the world has ever known.

Today, track coaches and officials are talking of the "four minute mile." Will it be run? If it is, it will be accomplished by a man with the unsurpassable spirit of Glenn Cunningham. Glenn Cunningham, once hopelessly crippled, through faith and courage, downed his handicaps to become the "master of milers."

"Be still sad heart and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining—"

DUSK

By Lois White

When earth's dim shadows draw the shades of dusk—
The rise of eventide, the ebb of day;
The dew on leaf's reanimated musk
When bats are pendulums on western grey;
The space of rest before dark night's begun;
The hours of day all gathered to their sheaves;
The stones still warm from rich remembered sun;
The breeze's restless rustling in the leaves, —
That is the manifest and pregnant hour,
With all the softness of first morning light;
The moon's high torrent flows from southern tow'r,
Long, priestly shadows fold into the night.
Oh then, fear not, for that which stills the strife
Is dusk, the dawn of God's eternal life.

MORAL: START EARLY

My shorthand's done and so's my French
And from the show'r I come quite drenched,
Prepared to dive right into bed.
Oh me! Am I a sleepy head!

For just a little sleep I pine;
This time I'll get to bed 'fore nine.
Just once, it seems all homework's done;
Tomorrow will be lots of fun.

And when the sun comes up I'll start
To school with such a happy heart.
I'll greet my teachers with a smile.
(My homework's done! the whole darn pile!)

In French I'll say, "J'ai etudie;"
Then conjugate the verb "to be."
My shorthand forms will quickly pop
Into my mind; I'll need not stop.

In English I'll be sure to know
My lesson—oh, good heavens! No!
It cannot be this is the day
I must submit my week's essay.

I stand here now so cold and drenched,
My mind's a blank, my hands are clenched;
I fear that sleep is not for me.
Oh, dear! What will my subject be?

I've sat and scribbled half the night.
(This paper'd better turn our right.)
But now I hear the clock strike one;
Again I say, "My homework's done."

So finally I head for bed
Recalling what my teacher said;
Now I believe with all my heart:
For effective work, get an early start.

THE LAST MILE

The calm and peaceful atmosphere
Has just been mutilated;
From a thrilling reverie
My thoughts have been deflated.

That ugly, evil, little box
That hangs upon the wall
Did just emit a ghastly sound
Which raised the heads of all.

Some hope that it might be for them,
While others pale with fear,
Before I have had time to think
My name comes to my ear.

"For me?? The office?" query I,
And blush from head to toe.
My fingers shake, I drop my book,
The shock does scare me so.

"What have I done? Is mother sick?
What can the matter be?"
I vainly seek the reason why
The office has called me.

With wat'ry knees and clammy hands
I stumble down the stairs.
Each step I take resounds to say
There is no one who cares.

My heart beat is a noisy pound;
My throat and mouth are dry.
I reach the torture chamber with
A teardrop in my eye.

I make my entrance quietly
And peer around to see
What cruel force is fashioning
This misery for me.

Again I hear my name called out
And quake from head to toe.
"Will you fill out a program card?"
Oh, what a fatal blow!

WHAT IF

Tepee Town were without a manager, failures were unknown,
there were no eighth hours,
the Sachem came out on time,
senior girls graduated in formals,
there weren't any summer school,
the Cafeteria were out of pears and prunes.
students roller skated to class,
lockers were clean,
there were an assembly every week,
classes were held outdoors in the spring,
Morrison and Commager were not "on reserve" in the library, school dismissed at two o'clock,
there were no homeroom announcements, chemistry classes didn't make H<sub>2</sub>S, there were a long spring vacation,
the Engineers didn't take field trips,
the lunch period was an hour long,
seniors were excused a semester early,
Southwest had no cheerleaders,
the R.O.T.C. didn't have a ball,
the eighth-graders were tall,
no one double lockered.
