Winnetonka High School

This yearbook is dedicated with love and respect to Mrs. Aylene Keown, a former yearbook sponsor herself, who retires this year after 47 years of teaching. This year's recipient of the Northland Chamber of Commerce Excellence in Teaching Award, Mrs. Keown has been an inspiration to students and faculty alike.

For 21 years she referred to Winnetonka as "my school." In the hearts of many, it will always remain that way.

Mr., Ms. Winnetonka gives students of all grades a chance to compete

This year, the Mr. Winnetonka pageant had a new attraction—a Ms. Winnetonka was added. Held after school in the Little Theater one afternoon in November, seven courageous women decided to show Tonka what they were really made of.

Along with the women, eight men participated. "Performing with the girls was fun," said David Ryan.

The competition consisted of talent and fashion. Jason Troutner probably had the most unusual talent of swallowing a tennis ball (or at least putting it entirely in his mouth), while Travis Hall wowed the crowd with his amazing feat of instant memorization. Other talents included singing, dancing, playing the piano, and dramatic interpretations. "It was great being in front of all those screaming women," said Steve Gray.

The senior class officers and the IMPACT program put the event together. Proceeds went to fund the after-prom party.

"Considering how the contestants are busy in other extra-curricular activities, (the pageant) went well," said senior class sponsor, Mrs. Nancy Hudson. "Yes, there will be one next year."

Voting irregularities don't dampen excitement that homecoming can generate

There was a new feature to this year's Homecoming—two additional queen candidates. The traditional voting for and eight-candidate field lacked enough lunchtime voters. Homecoming sponsors then decided to have a second election that would hopefully show a drastic increase in voter turnout, but it too showed apathy on the part of the student body. The only difference was that two girls who had won on the "first ballot" didn't win on the second. So those two were added to the eight who won the second time, bringing the total to ten.

Confused? A lot of people were, but the confusion left quickly as all attentions were turned to the excitement that homecoming always generates. Colored hair and painted faces seemed the trend for this year's parade through Northtown. Winning entries included A cappella choir for being the most spirited, varsity soccer and wrestling cheerleaders for the most humorous, and freshman cheerleaders for the best use of the theme, "Hold On To The Night."

Despite the football team's losing at halftime, all eyes were still on the field as the candidates were escorted there by their fathers. Soon, the mystery was over as Pam Warren was crowned queen and Colette Quigley, princess. Friends and relatives soon surrounded both girls in congratulatory hugs and kisses.

The next evening, Pam and Colette reigned over the dance in the gym where dreamy clouds, glittering stars of silver and gold, and a shimmering crescent moon turned the room into a land of enchantment.

All of the festivities were especially memorable for the foreign exchange students. Says Neriman Antepli (Germany), "I really enjoyed the parade, the game, and the dance because there isn't anything like that at my school back home."

Prissy Buzick is wooed by a young gentlemen during halftime festivities.

"This just isn't my idea of a great time," Jan Lee's date seems to be thinking. Perhaps he just didn't like the song they were dancing to.

Three girls for every boy! At least those were the odds for David Cooper as he escorted three exchange students: Myra Van der Spek, Neri Antepli, and Katarina Jugovic.

Grand Marshal DK waves to the crowd during the parade.

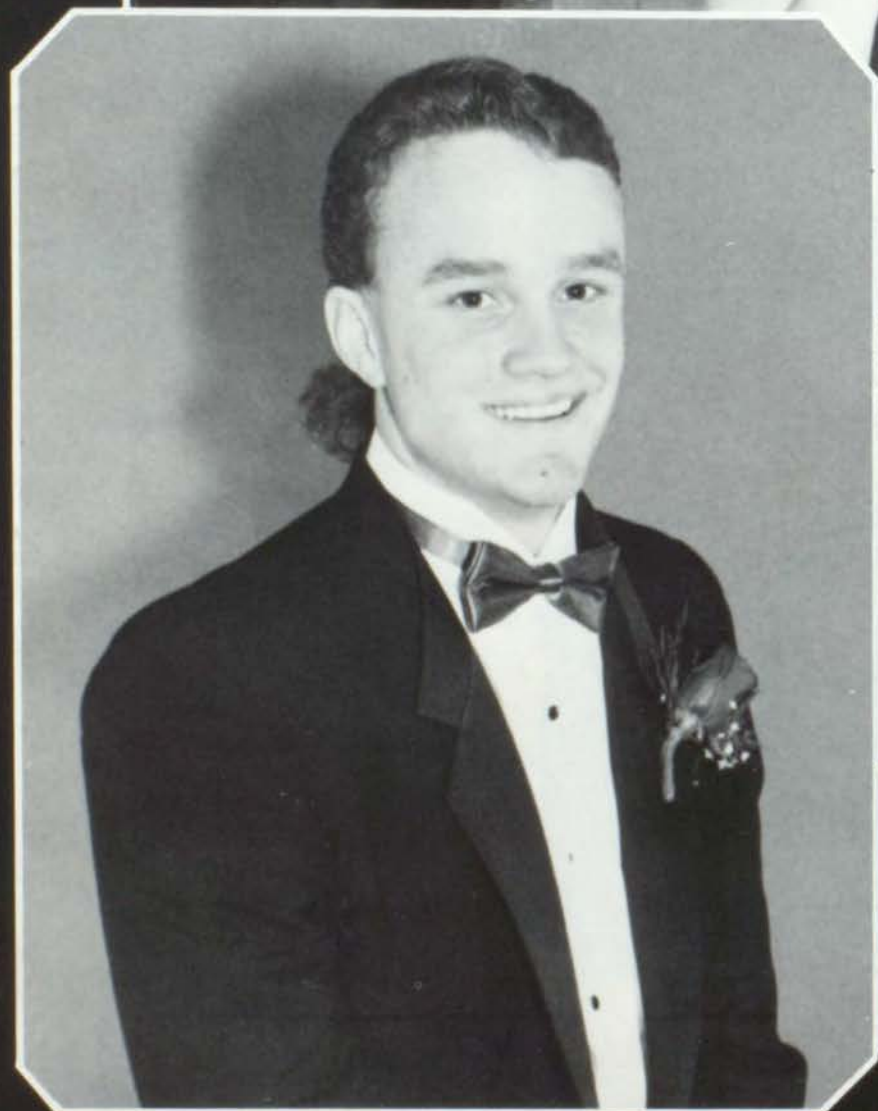

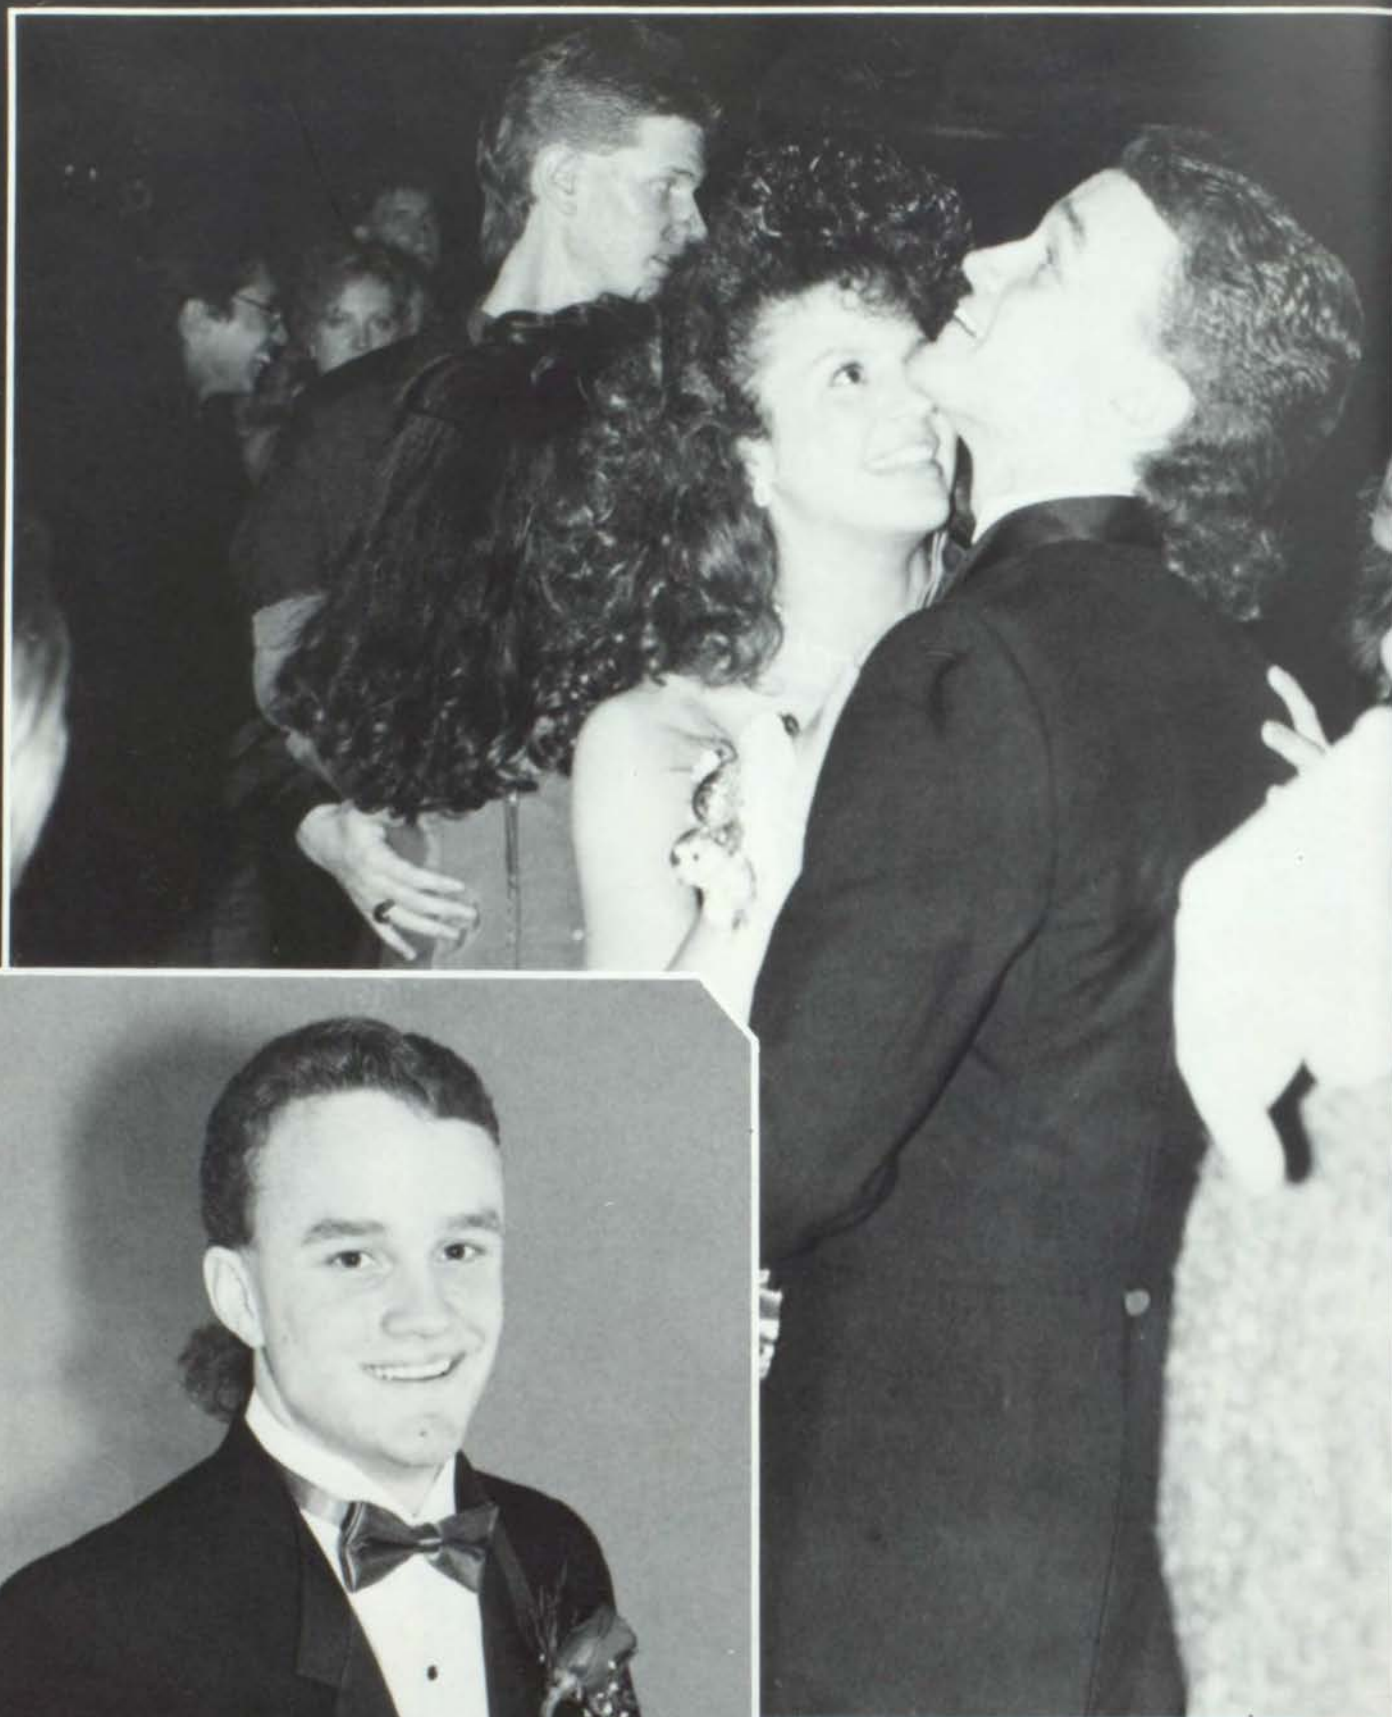

It's easy to see why this A cappella group was judged the most spirited entry in the parade.

Sweetheart King is second title earned by Hall

On Friday, February 9, Travis Hall proved that he was still Mr. Winnetonka when he was crowned Sweetheart King. And Steve Gray made it a family affair when he was crowned prince by last year's prince, his brother, Jeff.

The crownings capped off a ceremony that started that morning with an assembly at which time the candidates were introduced to the voting public. They and their escorts were: Neil Mulac and Prissy Buzick, Terrill Runyan and Alyssa Osborne, Darren Smith and Natalie Infante, David Spears and Debby Rottinghaus, Jason Troutner and Crystal Byars, and Jason Winger and Colette Quigley. Travis was escorted by Neri Anteppli, while Steve was escorted by Ashlie Keener.

Spectrum of Sound performed at the assembly, singing "Embraceable You," while Mary Garrison earned a standing ovation for her solo rendition of this year's sweetheart theme, "Love Takes Time," a tune made popular by Myriah Carey.

The sweetheart dance, held in the gym, for the first time featured music videos displayed on large screens installed for the night.

Upon being crowned king a modest Travis Hall said, "I'm just happy that I have friends at school." Asked if two major titles, Sweetheart King and Mr. Winnetonka, had gone to his head, he replied, "Nobody's perfect and I'm far from it. But I try to be friendly, to be nice to everyone. I try not to feel like I'm better than anyone."

Heather Trickey hangs on to her balloon, and her date hangs on to her.

Cassandra Wiggins and her date stop dancing for a moment to watch the large-screen music video.

Jason Brungardt isn't about to let Stephanie Tinoco get away from him.

Along with their dates, Starr Gehrke, Angi Sailsbury, Michelle Hoy and Stephanie Lourwood listen intently to Jeff Post (center) for the latest gossip. That's always better than dancing!

Bridgett Wells and Brett Rodman have a good time on the dance floor.

Andrea Davies plays the "air guitar" and sings along to the music.

Prom-goers didn't want night to end

On the evening of April 6, prom-goers cherished the last dance of the year, hoping to "Never Say Good-bye" (theme) to all the fun.

The dance was held at the ever popular Royals Stadium Club. Promptly at 8 p.m., limousines, rental cars, and parents' cars began arriving with their inhabitants--prommies.

Many people were not up for fast dancing, but when the deejay played a slow song, everyone dashed for a spot on the dance floor.

"At first people complained about the ticket prices," said junior class president Shelly Waterman, "but despite the complaints I think the night turned out really well."

More people were perhaps enchanted by the after-prom party than the main event itself. A Missouri riverboat whisked students and their dates away for a late night cruise down the Mighty Mo, complete with movies, food, casino, and a great view of the skyline. All of these were hard to resist, making this year's after-prom celebration the largest one ever.

Students get behind WAR IN THE GULF

Former student is first casualty

It didn't seem possible to those who had lived through prior wars, but the United States fought and won the war in the Persian Gulf in the short span of six weeks. And American high school students now know what it's like to fight a war on the homefront.

Winnetonka was one high school that became involved in many ways. Probably the most significant—and certainly the saddest—was that the first casualty of the war was a former Winnetonka student, Lt. Cmdr. Scott Speicher. Speicher was a sophomore at Winnetonka in 1973 when he moved to Florida with his parents. Griffin Rites reporter, Theresa Handrahan, interviewed some of his classmates who remembered Scott as "funny, devoted, hard-working." One friend, Evan Callow, had just visited him in Florida a year and a half ago. "He loved flying," Callow said of Speicher, a jet fighter pilot. "If he wasn't up and flying for more than a week, he would get antsy." Speicher taught a Sunday school class to fourth and fifth graders. Just before he left for the Middle East, says Callow, "he took the kids to the base and let them climb into his jet. They had a good time, and he loved it."

There were many, many other former Winnetonkans who were stationed in the gulf area during the winter of 1991. The twin sons of Mrs. Edna Riehl, cafeteria worker, were both fighter pilots. Freshman John White received a phone call from the gulf one day—it was his brother, Ron, calling to wish him a happy birthday. Nearly everyone, it seemed, had a friend or family member stationed there. At one time, it was believed there were at least 60 Winnetonka graduates in Saudi Arabia.

The war brought back some special memories for junior Sonya Vaughn, whose family lived in Saudi Arabia four years ago. In an article in The Griffin Rites, she recalled the customs of the people she lived among—customs based firmly on the Islamic religion.

And naturally, there were the Saddam Hussein jokes, a lot of them pertaining to the new vocabulary word, Scud, that came from the war.

Most of us will never forget where we were and how we heard when our nation was at war. And some did not forget the troops after the war had ended. Mr. Dan Stanley and Mr. Harold Harbaugh led a drive to get an ice-water fountain installed near the gym. The fountain would be dedicated to those Winnetonka grads who fought in what came to be known as Operation: Desert Storm. Money was collected from students in the cafeteria, and Coach Stanley collected the names of those who fought. The names will be inscribed on a plaque near the fountain.

The war seemed to bring with it a newfound sense of patriotism among the student body and faculty. The pictures on these pages reflect this patriotism and how Winnetonka shared in the war effort.

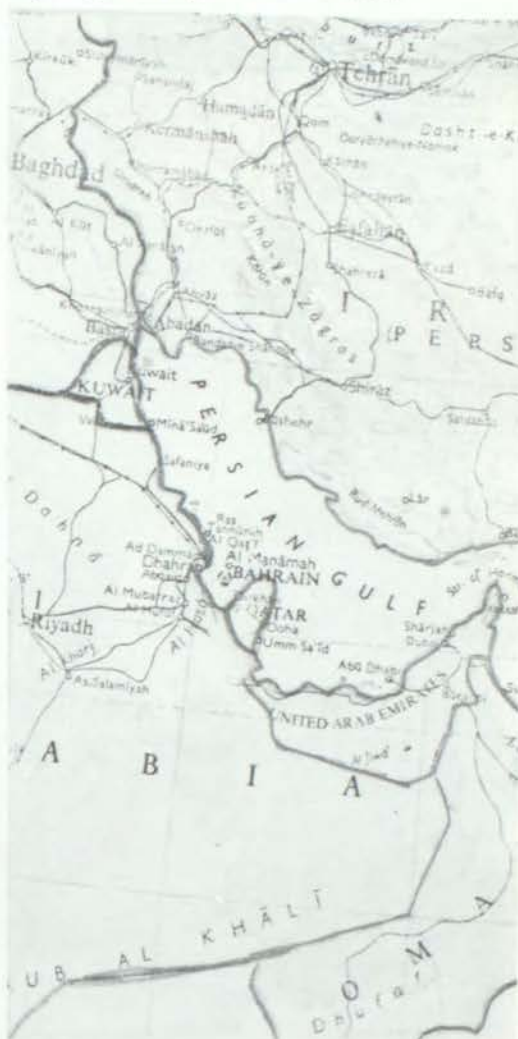

Ashlie Keener sports a patriotic jacket as she looks at pictures of grads in the gulf.

Winnetonka-- Where Excellence Reigns!

A new twist to the old announcements

There was a new spirit to the old announcements this year at Winnetonka. When interim principal Dr. Dan Kahler called out on the first day of school, "You are in tune with WWER: Winnetonka Where Excellence Reigns," everybody knew that something had certainly changed.

The change got even better, a few days later, when DK introduced the first regular news anchors in Winnetonka history. Troy "Trojan Horse" Vaughan, "Lady Shelley" Waterman, and Robert "Sax Man" Enochs began reading the news of the day over the intercom system.

Then came Channel One--and with it, a television in nearly every classroom. The innovational WWER-News went live throughout the building. The anchors and producer DK not only read the news/announcements, but also interviewed guests whenever the opportunity presented itself. The most prominent guest was Mrs. Eunice Kennedy Shriver, who visited the school through the Community of Caring program. Other guests included Winnetonka graduates who fought in Operation Desert Storm.

From time to time, guest anchors appeared on the telecast. They were: Jerri Roe, Becky Meredith, Wendy Flegel, and Scott Evans. Their director was Mr. Jack Simpson, drama teacher.

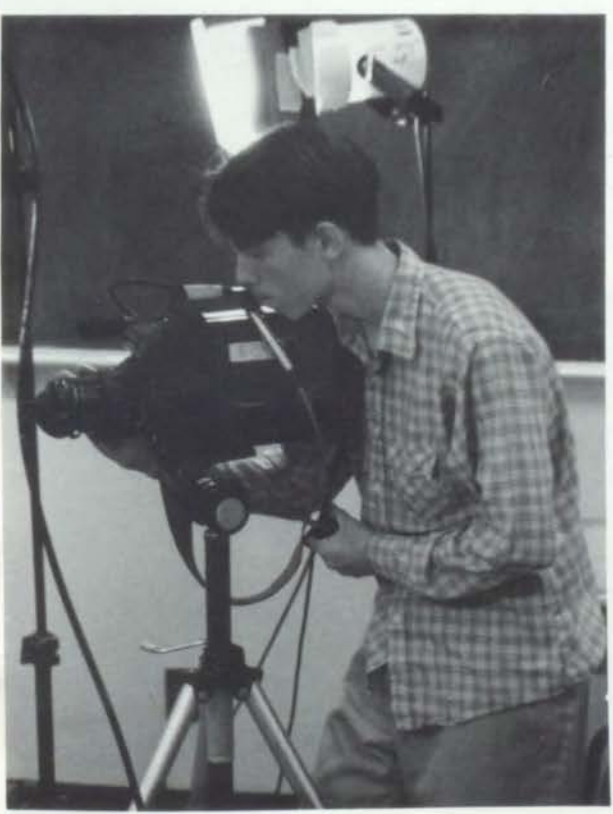

On the technical end, a large crew was assembled to fill the positions of cameraman, engineer, audio, and lighting. The first to inquire about being on the crew was Robert Sims. He, Tina Chapin and Dennis Shields were the original crew. They were later joined by Jason George, Ty Graham, Heather Adair, Melissa Winship, Leslie Huntley, Ray McCoy, Brandy Eskew, Gabe Murphy, Theresa Brown, Bob Rogers, Barry Hord, and Eric Hensley.

Bob, Barry and Eric get especially technical when they designed some great computer graphics for the credits at the end of each day's broadcast.

It was a terrific way to lead into Channel One, and a way for every Griffin to keep up-to-date on his or her school.

A very funny musical happened this year on Winnetonka stage

Thought in the past to be too controversial, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, finally made its way to the Winnetonka auditorium. After two weekend performances in November, the somewhat risqué subject matter proved to be no problem at all.

The musical takes place during the height of the Roman Empire, where the main character, Pseudolus (Robert Enochs) is a slave in the house of Senex (Bob Turney) and his wife, Domina (Ann Cameron, Autumn Palmer). Their son, Hero (Jeramie Kramer), after a good deal of coaxing on Pseudolus's part, agrees to let the slave go free provided he can get Hero a girl, Philia (Mary Garrison, Wendy Waggener). Philia is a courtesan in the house of Marcus Lycus (Scot Grant), a procurer.

Through many twists and turns and a lot of lying by Pseudolus, Philia and Hero are brought together only to find out Philia has been purchased by a great captain, Miles Gloriosus (Dave Haston). In the end, Philia and her long lost brother, the captain who just bought her, are reunited with their longer lost father, Erronius (Doug Vaughn). Philia and Hero then end up together, Pseudolus is free at last.

"Even though it had sexual content, it's very humorous and tastefully done," said Sonya Vaughn, junior.

"I think we (the students) handled it very well," said sophomore Amand Ketron, of the matinee held during school hours.

"It was cool," said Shanna Durbin, sophomore. "It was not offensive to me in any way."

Dave Haston's preacher even came to a performance, and Dave said, "he loved it. It's only offensive to those easily offended."

Drama teacher Jack Simpson called A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum "one of the best musicals I've ever directed."

Hero worship? Jeramie Kramer tells Mary Garrison how lovely she is.

Wendy Waggener returns the compliment.

Miles Gloriosus (Dave Haston) tells the adoring public just how gloriosus he is.

Pseudolus (Robert Enochs) looks like he has to do some more fast talking, which probably got him into the fix he's already in.

Domina (Ann Cameron), the bossy wife of Senex, seems momentarily in shock at the proceedings.

Domina (Autumn Palmer) keeps a close watch on her son, Hero.

Hysterium (Steve Gray), the nervous slave in the house of Senex, tries to keep Hero's togas clean (by steering him clear of the courtesan Philia) while his parents are away.

Two lovely ladies—Amy Price and Joy Rodgers—are for sale by Marcus Lycus (Scot Grant) to the highest bidder.

Spring comedy teaches lesson about living

You Can't Take It With You, a comedy written in the 1930s by Moss Har and George S. Kaufman, was the spring play for Winnetonka this year.

The play is about an eccentric family, headed by Martin Vanderhof (Scot Grant), who got sick of the "real world" one day and decided to do what he wanted in life. His entire family followed suit, and the result is mayhem. Vanderhof's daughter, Penelope Sycamore (Shannon Snow) divides her time between writing a play and painting a masterpiece. Her husband, Paul (Matt Meeks) and assistant, Mr. DePinna (Jake Watson) keep busy in the basement working with explosives. Daughter Essie (Alicia Smith) practices her ballet all over the house, while her husband (Doug Vaughn) runs a printing press with socialist overtones. Essie's ballet teacher, Boris Kolenkov (Bill Webb) makes regular visits, as does the drunken stage actress Gay Wellington (Sarah Youmans) who generally passes out before she can leave. Running errands and cooking an occasional meal are the equally eccentric couple of Rheba and Donald (Thad Smith).

Keeping an honest dollar coming into the house is the Sycamore's daughter Alice (Wendy Waggener), who, it just so happens, falls in love with the boss's son, Tony Kirby (Steve Gray). The Kirbys (Bob Turney and Ann Cameron) are prominent people, therefore elitist. One can imagine what happens when the two families meet.

"The point of the story," said director Jack Simpson, "is which viewpoint will win?" The Vanderhof/Sycamores' philosophy is "you can't take it with you, so why be preoccupied with it?"

Other cast members include:

Princess Olga.....	Autumn Palmer

Vanderhof (Scot Grant) makes an already nervous Mrs. Kirby (Ann Cameron) more ill at ease.

Essie (Alicia Smith) practices her ballet at home whenever the spirit moves her.

Vanderhof says grace on behalf of whoever shows up for dinner that day.

Washed-up actress Gay Wellington (Sarah Youmans) will star in Mrs. Sycamore's play if the price is right--let's say, a fifth of scotch.

Mrs. Sycamore (Shannon Snow) tells Mr. Kirby (Bob Turney) about the play she's been working on.

Alice (Wendy Waggener) knows what impression her family has made on the Kirbys and fears her relationship with Tony (Steve Gray) is now over.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT!

Dieting: a business, an obsession

Americans are obsessed with weight. A recent USA Today survey recorded that the average middle-class American family attempts to lose weight three times a year.

Why three times? Because the methods they are using to lose their extra poundage aren't working. Many dieters wanting to lose an extra ten pound will quickly "crash" diet, or simply cease to eat for a short time.

Then there are the fad diets, which usually consists of a single type of food, such as citrus or all green vegetables. A little boring. So I spoke with people around school and heard of some diets that are a little more "creative."

Mrs. Linda Freeman, a library assistant, said that while she uses Weight Watchers herself, she "once read about a diet where you drink only milk and water for two weeks." Liquid diets seem to be very popular. The Slim-Fast diet, of two low calorie milkshakes and a sensible dinner, is supposed to help one lose up to ten pounds in two weeks.

"I've heard about a diet where you eat only grapefruit," said junior Angela Lembke. Single food diets seem popular for those wanting to drop a few quick pounds before prom or summer. This type of diet leads quickly to boredom for the dieter. So many start their own diets.

"I try to drink water before I eat to fill me up," said Matt Jordan, senior.

"I try not to snack between meals," replied Starr Gehrke, senior.

Since so many people try to lose weight each year, dieting has become a big business. "Eat and Lose Weight," one book promises. "Dieting Makes You Fat!" exclaims another. "Diet or Die!" says yet another book. Literally hundreds of books have been written on the subject. But great care needs to be taken whichever diet you pursue. And still more care needs to be taken not to let weight loss become an obsession. Eating disorders, such as anorexia or bulimia can sometimes develop from an obsession to be thin.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO DIET

1. You've just had to make a new notch in your belt.
2. Your prom dress is the size you want it to be--just not yours.
3. The desks at Winnetonka are over twenty years old.
4. You don't want to be on the "major contributor" list of clubs selling candy.
5. They've just named the five cheering sections at the next pep assembly: freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, and you!

Is that a trick mirror or simply one too many trips to the candy machines? Theresa Handrahan will never tell.

JUNK FOOD: The machines in front of office taunt you when they're turned off, tempt you when they're on. "Buy me. Buy me."

AND IF YOU DO: The scales in the nurse's office tell the said tale of one who ate too often and too well.

DRIVE TIME

Cars reflect drivers' personalities

by Theresa Handrahan

If it came right down to it, honestly, would you rather date a Porsche 911 or a big green station wagon?

"Please," you say. "I am not so shallow that I would pick a date based on his car."

I am not talking about cars. I am talking about personalities. When you pull up next to a Fiero at an intersection, you just know the driver is a beautiful brunette who likes the fine things. If you see a fat redneck with a tattooed wife and a two-year-old with a finger up his nose, the family is probably going back to their shack in a beat-up, rusty Ford pickup (with a gun rack).

Winnetonka has its share of autoegos; that is, people whose personalities are defined by their cars.

Angela Lembke, junior, for instance, is her car. She drives that cute, white Volkswagen bug with the really cute graphic design on the side. Angela, a cute girl herself, said, "Everyone says I fit my car. It reminds me of a little bubble, and I am happy all the time. I'm bubbly." Angela woke up on her sixteenth birthday and found the car tied up in a big pink bow. "Basically," she says, "it's a fun car and I love to have fun."

On the other end of the car spectrum, Jay Shanks drives a huge 1965 Oldsmobile Cutlass with "various little dints, pings, and dents all over the body." Jay, an ardent conservative, calls his car "a symbol of America's past. They built cars back then, instead of just snapping them together." Anyone who knows Jay will agree that he and his Olds are alike—"big, loud, and original."

Paul Alexander, junior, drives not a car but a 1977 black and chrome Kawasaki motorcycle. "You can feel the speed on a motorcycle," he says. "I like the risk. One wreck and you could die. I'm kind of a morbid person." Paul thinks he resembles his cycle because he says he is loud and wears a lot of black. And to see him in his leather jacket, you know he could not drive anything else.

Then there's Bob Turney and his 1981 Ford Fairmont of a color that defies description. "It's kind of a metallic burgundy, but not really," he says. Bob and his car have a lot in common, as he pointed out. "My car has a stereo and I have a stereo," he said. "And, like me, my car promotes environmental goodness by not using air conditioning and not letting trash fly out its windows. It even has a bumper sticker that reads, 'I love my Mother Earth.'"

Next time I need a date, I will search the parking lot for a fast car with dints, clanks, bubbles, and a nice stereo. Behold, the quest for Mr. Right.

A cappella earns high ratings at contests and in concert

Under the new direction of Mr. Alan Bunch, the vocal music department had an extremely successful year. In September, Mary Garrison, Jeramie Kramer, Robert Enochs and Shannon Snow were selected to the All-District Choir. Mary moved on to the Missouri All-State Choir as an alternate.

In October, A cappella performed the national anthem at a Kansas City Comets game.

On April 5, A cappella and treble choir participated in the William Jewell District Music Festival. A cappella received the highest rating of I, while treble received a II. Solos and ensembles receiving I ratings were:

On April 26, those soloists and ensembles traveled to Columbia for the state music festival. Again, both mixed quartets, the girls trio, and soloist Mary Garrison received I ratings. The others received IIs.

On May 4, A cappella, Spectrum of Sound, and the band and orchestra invaded St. Louis for a competition with schools from eight different states. All four groups received I ratings, with Spectrum placing second overall. A cappella was named the outstanding mixed chorus in the state.

The DATING GAME

Dating is difficult. Nearly everyone can recall some fateful evening that has forever altered his/her opinion of the opposite sex.

Now a few brave Griffins can speak of the horrors they endured --yes, enough time has passed since . . . that worst date!! (Names withheld out of respect to those being talked about.)

"I only went on this date to make my mom stop griping at me for being unsociable. So I guess what happened served me right. After dinner, we went to the dance where I proceeded to stick my heels through the back of my lace dress, which was floor-length, and tore a huge hole through the fabric. After the dance, we went to the Plaza, originally for a carriage ride, but we ended up getting lost and just drove around for two hours. And they wonder why I don't like to go out." --Senior

"There was this guy who used to sit behind me in Trig and would play with my hair. It used to really bother me, but after a while it grew on me, so when he asked me out I accepted. The evening was okay, until after the movie and we were out walking and he began to sing his renditions of old Phil Collins songs very loudly. His nasal voice whined on for at least a half hour. He finally took me home where I pledged never to let another guy touch my hair."--'Rapunzel,' Senior

"She sat behind me in typing for a whole semester before I got up the courage to ask her to prom. Worst mistake of my life. First of all, she wasn't ready when I got to her house, so I wait almost a half-hour. Dinner was okay, except she wouldn't let me drive without telling me what I was doing wrong. And she kept switching the radio stations! It wasn't just that she was annoying, she also made me feel bad. I mean, you're supposed to have a good time at prom." --Senior

"Worst is not specific enough to describe this experience. Horrendous, will definitely live in my mind for infinity. He was drunk when he picked me up so my nerves, about whether or not I was going to be alive tomorrow, were shot. We went to the movies where he yelled at the fat lady in front of us to sit down. He was so obnoxious, I went home after the movie."--Sophomore

Top (opposite page): Not appropriate locker behavior, we assure you! The photographer couldn't even break them apart to get their names.

TIPS FOR THE OPPOSITE SEX

THINGS YOU SHOULD NEVER SAY TO YOUR DATE:

1. "What happened to your hair?" Teenage years bring with them mirrors, hairspray, and combs. A lot of primping is done in pursuit of the perfect hairstyle. Go ahead, let her think she's qualified for Vogue.
2. "You're such a good friend." When you have your eyes on a certain someone--and the best he can do is call you friend, it's a big letdown.
3. "Check it out!" You're strolling hand-in-hand down the mall and you see the ultimate babe. Stay quiet. Also, keep stares to a minimum.
4. "Well, it looks okay." So maybe suede jeans are a bit much, but what's wrong with making someone feel all right about his/her appearance. Be nice, and let perfect strangers mock them instead.
5. "Is your whole family...?" Then pick a flaw in that person's body or character. Go ahead, I dare you.

Marching band

PRIDE sweeps fall contest

The Winnetonka PRIDE marching band, drum line and flag corps had a busy and successful fall.

Performing at several football games, the band also marched in two local parades. They took home the "crowd pleaser" trophy from the Claycomo Funfest.

But Saturday, October 16, was the big day when the band competed at Missouri Western College and won every single trophy in their division. Awards were for: Best Musical Performance, Best Marching Ability, and Best General Effect (show design). Their show included the songs, "Johnny's Mambo," with a trumpet quartet of Tamara Cessna, Veronica Watkins, Jim Cunningham, and Brian Cummins; "Gimme Some Lovin"; and "Come In From The Rain," with French horn soloists Troy Vaughan and Jennifer Purvis.

The band marched every morning before school, had some afternoon practices, and attended a two-week band camp prior to the start of school. The practice really paid off.

"I'm very pleased," said director Pat Setser.

The 18-member drumline competed three times this year--Blue Springs (fourth place), Carrollton (fifth place) and Missouri Western. "I think we did a very good show," said sophomore Scot Grant. "I couldn't stop doing drumline if I tried."

The flag corps placed first in their division at Carrollton. They, too, put in long hours of practice and did "a routine that was a lot of fun," said junior Andrea Yonke.

Jennifer Purvis plays a solo in a halftime show.

Golden Variety Band

Without the Golden Variety Band (GVB), made up of the cream of the PRIDE, assemblies and home basketball games would certainly be less exciting. If you attended just one basketball game, you entered the gym to their music, you left to their music, and went to the concession stand at halftime to their music. Were there not this talented corps of musicians, the silence would be "deafening."

Band, Orchestra get high marks at contests

The concert band this year graduates an outstanding class of seniors. In their four years of contests, their scores have been perfect. "Always first, and this year they walked away with everything at a 12-state band contest in St. Louis," said band director Pat Setser. "That includes this school's first-ever national level rating of I in concert band."

Ms. Setser notes that the band members are exceptional people in addition to their abilities to play their horns. "We have lots of different kinds of musicians," she said, "but it is that difference that keeps life interesting."

The orchestra, too, were winners this year when they "achieved a long sought after goal--a I at William Jewell," said Ms. Setser. They also took Best in Class at the St. Louis competition.

Representing the orchestra at the state music festival were cellist Sarah Warfield and violinist Mary Fields. Mary received a I for her solo.

Senior Class Song:

"Show Me The Way"

Every night I say a prayer in the hopes that there's a heaven, but everyday I'm more confused as the saints turn into sinners.
All the heroes and legends I knew as a child have fallen in idols of clay; and I feel this empty place inside so afraid that I've lost my faith.
Show me the way, show me the way.
Take me tonight to the river and wash my illusions away.
Please show me the way.

As I slowly drift asleep for a moment my dreams are sacred.
I close my eyes and know there's peace in a world so filled with hatred
That I wake up each morning and turn on the news and find we've so far to go,

And I keep on hoping for a sign so far away I just won't know.
Show me the way, show me the way.
Bring me tonight to the mountain and take my confusion away.
And if I see a light, should I believe? Tell me how I will know.
Show me the way, show me the way.
Take me tonight to the river and wash my illusions away.
Please show me the way, show me the way.
Give me the strength and the courage to believe that I'll get there someday.
And please show me the way.

And every night I say a prayer in the hopes that there's a heaven.

Leslie Huntley

From managing girls' sports teams to playing on them, from being a member of Art Club to being president of Student Council, no one can doubt that Leslie has left her mark on Winnetonka.

As a four-year member of Teens Helping Teens, Leslie worked on freshman orientation, teen forums, canned food drives, and senior citizens dance, to name just a few.

Her list of accomplishments on Student Council for three years is even longer. If there was a dance, you can bet she was involved from the planning stage to ticket sales to decorating the gym. As president, she oversaw the Adopt-a-Highway program, the homecoming parade, the pep assemblies, donkeyball, spirit weeks, leadership training and retreats.

In addition, Leslie was active in the IMPACT's Hi-Step program, PTSA, German Club, FCA, and the districtwide seven-period day committee.

Steven Chu

The impression Steve Chu has left on Winnetonka is one of kindness and involvement.

Those character traits, along with his personal beliefs, led Steve to become involved in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes for all four years here. He served as the club's president his junior and senior years, and oversaw its annual Arbor Day festivities and a wheelchair basketball fundraiser. In addition, he represented his chapter at the National FCA Conference in Georgia his junior year.

Steve's compassion also found an outlet in the Community of Caring's teen forums and the Northland Teen Institute, which he attended his sophomore and junior years.

In his senior year, Steve joined the Future Homemakers of America where he served as parliamentarian.

Along with his involvement in these clubs, Steve was a member of the football and track teams his freshman and sophomore years.

JUNIORITIS (June-Your-Eye-Dis) n. 1. the feeling that hits around March of one's third year in high school. 2. the desire to be a senior. 3. just being sick of high school in general, but with the melancholic realization you have one more year left. (See ALMOST, NOT QUITE)

For juniors, spring can be an especially rough time of year. As freshman, students are too busy getting used to the idea that high school isn't that big a deal. As sophomores, they're recovering from their first year grade points and looking forward to being upperclassmen.

But as juniors, we are getting our first look at the future and what it might hold. Soon, we'll be number one, top on the totem pole. For some that change that comes with the seniors' graduation can't come soon enough.

"It's boring and it's a waste of time," says David Donohue. "I've got better things to do with my time."

"BURN OUT!" exclaims Rick Meeker. "Toward the end of the year, you really get burned out with your activities, classes, and friends. You need something different."

Tisha Williams offers this explanation. "You begin to realize you only have one more year left. You just want to get it done with so you can graduate," she said.

Whoa, not so fast! At least not for Kasey Kirk. "In a way, I don't want to graduate," he said. "When I do, I'll have to leave behind all my underclassmen friends and activities." (Already thinking like a senior!)

"Junioritis is mild," warns Mrs. Ann Brown, junior class sponsor. "Senioritis is TERMINAL!"

So just put your noses to the grindstone, juniors. There are only about 230 days to go.

SOPHOMORITIS (sof o mor i tis) n. 1. state of being caught in the midst of high school nothingness. 2. the time period in which the sufferer begins quest for identity. (See AGONY)

Sophomoritis, of course, has no definition because Mr. Webster doesn't recognize the term. Sophomoritis, however, is a very real affliction. Ask any tenth grader.

Brian Dollinger provided what he claims is the official definition of the mallady. "Sophomore means wiseful," he said. "Wise enough to know he doesn't know everything."

But a few oh-so-more experienced students disagree. "When they come in as freshmen, they think they know everything," said Carolyn Hudson, senior. This attitude, according to another senior, Maria Villanueva, continues until the senior year "when you suddenly realize there is a whole other world out there."

Brenda Lifto describes the disease of being a sophomore as "being caught in the middle of it all--just sort of there, not really anything."

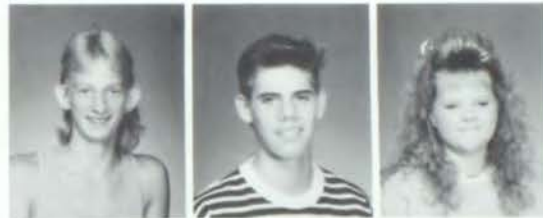

To Robert O'Banion it means merely "having to go to school, having to do work, having to put up with teachers." But he seems to have fared well this year, because for the first time, "I made the honor roll," said Robert.

"Me, I wanna drive," says Chris Shores. Yes, getting a license is the dominant theme of the tenth grade year. Turning 16 means a lot of potential freedom, but "it's not as much fun if you don't have a car, like me," says Rachel Harris.

Basically, sophomoritis boils down to Thad Smith's realistic definition. "One year down, two more to go," he said.

FRESHMANITIS (Fresh-Man-Eye-Dis) n. 1. a disease similar to that of senioritis except that it affects freshman. 2. desire to be above the level of freshman, to belong to a higher order. (See TORTURE)

Freshmanitis is hard to explain. It's not exactly spring fever, but it's similar. Seniors want to graduate; juniors want to be seniors; sophomores want to be upperclassmen; and freshmen . . . ?

"We want to be anything BUT freshmen!" says Angela Lambert.

Come now! What is so difficult about being a ninth grader?

"Everyone makes fun of us because we're freshmen," explains Stacey Whitesell. "They pick on us because we're the youngest ones here."

"We've been called 'freshmeat' so many times we're sick of it," adds Heather Brown.

If they seem frustrated over their yearlong predicament, there is little else that ninth graders can do for freshmanitis. "There's nothing we can do. All we can do is whine and complain about being freshmen," says Lisa Sapasap.

"Nope, there's no cure. All we can do is wait to be sophomores. It's only a matter of time," says John Alexander.

Some look forward to the next level with great anticipation. "Next year, it's OUR turn!" says Michelle Trammell, wringing her hands.

Teachers do offer one cure for freshmanitis: pass all your classes.

Low numbers, inexperience to blame for winless season

The varsity football team was determined not to give up, despite the 0-10 record it ended up with. The team worked hard and developed a strong sense of unity throughout the season.

The game against Oak Park was probably the highlight for many Griffins as they managed to score two touchdowns on the Northmen who, up to that point, had shut out all of their opponents.

"I was proud of our team's effort and attitude," said Coach Dan Stanley. He said several factors lead to the winless season. Not enough older boys went out for the team, and therefore, there was a lot of inexperience. Both were a hindrance, because "when injuries occurred, there weren't enough guys to cover positions," said Coach Stanley. "So a lot of underclassmen ended up playing."

Despite no wins, the end of the season brought some honors to individual players. In alphabetical order they were:

- Terry Best--2nd team All Northland defensive tackle
- Mike Hopper--2nd team All Northland cornerback 2nd team All Conference cornerback
- Doug Howard--1st team All Conference wide receiver
1st team All Northland safety
- Joe Milanowski--2nd team All Northland tight end
Honorable Mention All Conference
- Neil Mulac--2nd team All Northland offensive tackle
- Matt Quarles--2nd team All Northland runningback
- Brian Rodgers--2nd team All Northland runningback
- Duane Shaffer--Honorable Mention All Conference lineman
- Darren Smith--1st team All Northland offensive guard
1st team All Conference linebacker
- Jason Troutner--2nd team All Conference center
2nd team All Northland center
- Jimmy Vandendaele--2nd team All Northland linebacker

Teamwork prevails for freshman team

The first three games of the freshman football team might have led people to think that this was going to be a dismal season for the younger Griffins. However, the team pulled themselves together and came back to win their last five games.

"The season was rough in the beginning, because we couldn't play as a team," said Scott Diven, freshman quarterback, "but in the end it was great because we were a unit."

To become a winning team took a lot of hard work. Everyday the freshmen broke into groups--backs, linemen, and receivers--to go through the fundamentals, namely tackling and blocking. In the end, the work paid off.

"Generally, there was pretty good talent," said Coach Bill Lindsay. "It just took a while to get it together."

Preparing both mentally and physically for a game is essential. The freshmen, according to Coach Lindsay, are expected to play to the best of their abilities--trying to do a few things very well. There is no adjusting to any particular opponent, just a basic defense.

"We just want the kids to play the best they can, whether they win or lose," said Coach Lindsay.

When asked who some of the key players were for the freshman team, Coach Lindsay refused to single anyone out, preferring to say, "In order to have a team, everyone is important, and everyone is a leader in his own way."

Probably the two most exciting games this season were against Liberty and Oak Park. The Bluejays had been undefeated until the Griffins edged them, 14-13. A last-minute touchdown and two-point conversion put the Griffins ahead of the Northmen, 13-7, having trailed them by a point for most of the game."

"The kids finished this year's season strong. They are great kids, super to teach and coach," said Coach Lindsay.

Volleyball team called 'winners' despite record

"Although our season was not as successful in the win column as we would have liked, it was successful in so many other ways," said four-year volleyball coach Sherri Miller of this year's varsity squad. "These girls are winners and have a lot to be proud of."

Despite the team's record of only one win and five losses in conference play, the ladies hung in there and improved greatly from the beginning of the season to the end with many matches that went down to the wire.

"We were a young team," said senior Debby Rottinghaus, "but before games we worked on believing we could win."

"We were very inexperienced," said Rose Villanueva, "but we pulled together as the season went on."

The team had only five seniors--Carolyn Hudson, Debby Rottinghaus, Cyndi Thompson, Maria Villanueva, and Rose Villanueva--so returning letterwomen hope for a better showing next year.

Among the post-season honors for the team were: Carolyn Hudson (1st team All-Northland and 2nd team All-Conference), and Maria Villanueva (2nd team All-Northland, honorable mention all-conference).

Varsity soccer team has best season yet with 8 wins, 3 ties

Tonka's soccer teams were really kickin' this year. Our varsity team broke its 1987 record of 7 wins and one tie with 8 wins and three ties, bringing its final record to 8-13-3.

Coach Glen Rosario felt one of the reasons the team did better than they ever have was that they actually worked as a team on and off the field. Many players were returning lettermen. They, in addition to Oak Park transfers Carl Jiabia and Dave Steffens, provided unparalleled leadership. Players leading the team this year were: Richie Kane, Jason Fleener, Dave Steffens, Carl Jiabia, Shane Caylor, Jason Winger and Jason Wolfe.

And everyone was impressed with freshman Marc Cameron's abilities at goalie who said of his first year on the team, "It was great. I can't wait until next year."

After the team tied Grandview, 3-3, early in the season, Coach Rosario knew he had a better-than-usual team on his hands, because Grandview had been conference champs last season.

Another important game for the Griffins came against Raytown when they beat the team who eventually were second place in the conference.

Shane Caylor remembers the Ruskin game fondly, because "I finally scored a goal" in that game. And Richie Kane recalls a close shave against Chrisman when the Griffins pulled out a 2-1 win.

At season's end, Carl Jiabia had turned in the most goals for the Griffins with 11. Richie Kane and Dave Steffens were close behind with ten and nine. Jason Fleener was in fourth place with five goals.

Post-season honors included: Carl Jiabia (Captain, All-Northland), Jason Fleener, Dave Steffens, Shane Caylor (1st team All-Nortland), Richie Kane and Jason Winger (2nd team All-Northland).

Fleener selected as the first Griffin on All-State team

Jason Fleener, junior, became the first Griffin in the school's history to make the All-State soccer team this year. After trying out for the Missouri state team two years in a row, he said, "It was great to be chosen because there are only 18 members allowed from our state."

Jason first got interested in soccer, at age six, when his friend's dad wanted to start a neighborhood team. "I was asked to join," said Jason, "and I've been playing ever since."

Although Fleener loves to play soccer, he doesn't follow the sport very much. The one exception is an Oak Park senior whose all-state patch on his letter jacket Jason has always dreamed of matching. Now his dream has come true.

Jason plans on pursuing his soccer interests beyond high school by playing it in college and perhaps one-day professionally. But for now, he'd settle for bigger crowds at next year's games. "The team feels better when they see their fans rooting for them," he explains.

Girls tennis team serves up nearly perfect record

The 1990 season proved to be a successful one for the girls tennis team. With a record of 8-1 (6-1 in conference matches), it was obvious that having only two seniors on the team had no effect on the girls' winning ability. In fact, this could have been a factor in how well they did.

"A lot of underclassmen had to step up and fill varsity spots," explained Coach Joe Wendt. "They did a great job, but everyone had to work harder."

That hard work made all the difference for the young squad who had many honors due them at the end of the season. Among them were: Nicole LaRocca (1st team All-Northland singles, 1st team All-Conference singles and doubles), Shelly Waterman (2nd team All-Northland singles, 1st team All-Conference doubles), Amy Bucher (honorable mention All-Conference singles), Jennifer Chronister (2nd team All-Conference doubles), and Shea LaRocca (2nd team All-Conference doubles).

Shea LaRocca and Mandy Sicks were overall the best new players this year, according to Coach Wendt. As freshmen, both girls earned letters this year.

Since nearly every player will return to battle next fall, it is easy to be optimistic.

"Next year, we should have a stronger team and should dominate our conference," said Shelly Waterman, junior.

Five Griffin wrestlers grapple at state meet

With seven returning lettermen, and five more with varsity experience, the Winnetonka wrestling team boasted what Coach Hank Reese called, "a nice blend of youth and experience."

That experience especially paid off when February rolled around and it was time to carry on the proud Griffin tradition of sending some wrestlers to the state meet in Columbia. This year there were five: Shane Gorbet, Chris Heckadon, Matt Quarles, Darren Smith, and Chad Watson. Three of the five placed in the top six of their weight classes.

Heckadon led the way by placing third in the 103-pound weight class. "The competition was a lot harder than I had imagined, and the people from Jeff City and St. Louis made me nervous," said Chris, who returned to the state meet after making there last year as a freshman.

Shane Gorbet took sixth place in the the 119-pound category. This was his first year of state competition. "Overall, I think I did pretty good," he said. "I'll hopefully do better next year and place higher since I'll have had the experience and know what to expect."

Darren Smith made his third trip to state in as many years. He described the competition as "tough," saying it was basically a test of who could endure the most pain and who was quicker in thinking and in moves. "I was a little disappointed by my results because I thought I could do better," said Darren, who placed fourth. "I thought I was good enough to win." He added that, from first to sixth place in his weight class of 135 lbs., "all matches were only lost by one point."

Three of the five will hopefully do battle again next year, along with a few younger wrestlers who saw some varsity action this year. Among them are: Chris Howell, sophomore, and Jason Geier and Matt Winship, freshmen.

What exactly is a matmaid?

One question that is usually asked about the wrestling matmaids is, "What exactly do they do?"

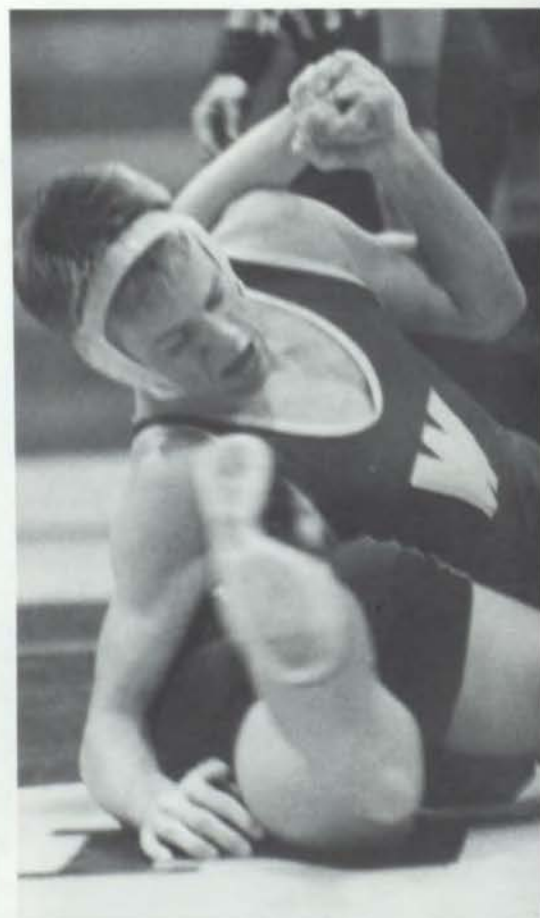

A lot more than most would believe. It is not just an easy way to letter, as some might have you believe. On the contrary, matmaids continually prove their worth to players and coaches alike.

"Matmaids do as much if not more than trainers and managers at other schools," said Holly Thomas, sophomore.

Other jobs a matmaid performs include keeping score at tournaments, making signs and posters, and boosting the wrestlers' spirits.

"We get a lot of teasing from people, but I think the wrestlers appreciate us, and that's who we do it for," said Cindy Spring, sophomore.

Lady hoopsters collect just 2 wins for season

The varsity girls basketball team had a tough season on the gym floor, earning only two wins in their 23 games. They were 1-13 in conference play.

Despite the lack of wins, morale was always high. "We have high team spirit," said Pam Warren, senior guard. "We learned from our mistakes and we made some progress."

Pam and Brandy Eskew, junior center, turned out to be two of the more outstanding players on the team, according to Coach Rhonda Claytor. Eskew led the team in rebounds, averaging five per game.

"What the girls need to improve on next year is their shooting," said Coach Claytor. "They need to work on individual skills."

In their best game, the lady Griffins beat East High School at home. They managed to get out into the lead early and never looked back.

Hopes are high for next year when all but three of this year's varsity team will return.

The junior varsity team split their season with a 9-9 record. Sophomores Carla Miller (who also saw some varsity action this year) and Wendy Maupin were the most outstanding players. Miller led in rebounds for the team, while Maupin was the leading scorer.

The freshman team went 3-11 for their first season of competitive basketball. Amy Bastob led the team in rebounds, while Nicole Vieth was the lead scorer. "All the kids shined at one point or another," said Coach Sherri Miller.

Hard losses, bad breaks sum up season for boys varsity basketball team

Despite pre-season predictions for at least a .500 performance, and boasts that four players could slam dunk a ball, the varsity boys basketball team ended up with a 7-18 record.

Several close losses and injuries to key players made things difficult for the team to rack up some wins.

"I felt we should have done a lot better record-wise, but hard losses and bad breaks pretty much sum it up," said Terrill Runyan, senior.

The season was not without its upbeat moments, however. A big victory against Truman in overtime, and a win over NKC in the team's last home game are two triumphs savored by the boys.

On a more personal note, Terrill Runyan was able to set a school record, grabbing 687 rebounds in his four-year career. Add to that a record 224 blocked shots, and another record for 79 of them in one season. He is second in scoring in the school's history with 1176 points.

The junior varsity team finished its season with a 4-16 record. "We were a very young team, and we had a lot of sophomores who really improved," said Coach Tom Wirtz. Chris Pearson, sophomore, led the team in scoring and rebounds, and junior Kevin Mitchell was a big help to the team when he wasn't playing on the varsity level.

Cheerleaders best in state, mascot is best in nation

Once again, the Griffin cheerleaders did themselves and their school proud at a variety of competitions starting with cheerleading camps in the summer and ending with the national contest in December.

For the second year in a row, the cheerleaders were tops in the state, winning the Missouri Cheerleading Association's championship in Columbia, November 10.

"To repeat as state champions two years in a row is very difficult to do," said Ms. Barbara Leist, sponsor. "The girls set a goal and obtained it."

The competitions judge cheerleaders, not just on their shouting abilities, but on a wide range of skills--jumps, stunts, gymnastics, timing, choreography, spirit, and overall dynamics of their performance. To do well means hours of hard work.

From the state competition, the girls traveled to Dallas over Christmas break. There they went against squads from all over the nation, placing sixteenth among over 150 entries. Even though the first day of competing ran from 8 a.m. to past 5 p.m., the girls still found time to have some fun. "We met a lot of girls from all over the U.S.," said Stacy List, junior. "The whole trip was a blast."

New to the national competition this year was our Griffin mascot who perhaps upstaged the girls a bit by taking first place in his category. Jason Winger, the man behind the mask, performed a well-choreographed routine that saw him enter on a tricycle (see photo) to the tune, "Leader of the Pack." And a leader he was, when he walked away with the trophy for first place, beating out 48 other contestants.

Even though it is hot under that suit, Jason knew from the start he wanted to be mascot. "I just kept talking to Ms. Leist about it," he said, "and it finally paid off."

Jason performed his winning routine at pep assemblies and home basketball games for an enthusiastic audience. "It gives me a special feeling deep inside to know people will remember me as the 'original mascot,'" he said.

Squad takes first place honors in two statewide competitions

Within one month's time, the Winnetonka dance-drill squad traveled twice to St. Louis to capture first-place honors in two different competitions.

On February 23, the ladies competed in the National Cheerleading Association's regional event, an all-day affair that provided some tough competition. "The squads were really good," said Kim Meinecke, freshman. "It was intimidating just to sit and watch."

Intimidation or not, Winnetonka had traveled the farthest to be there; they weren't going home empty-handed. The squad danced away with three first-place trophies in three different divisions--jazz, kick, and pom-pons. Ahslie Keener, Kelly Lopez, and Marie Hulen also received a first-place superior rating for a routine they performed apart from the rest of the squad.

On March 16, it was off to St. Louis again. And again they were awarded first prize, this time in the state competition. "I was really shocked by our title as 'state champs,'" said Brandie Nordin, freshman. "I thought we would do really well, but I had no idea we would end up taking first."

A lot of practice went into the team's preparations for the two competitions. The girls practiced two hours everyday after school and even on Sundays. They critiqued themselves by watching their performances on videotape, and quickly shored up the weak spots.

"The girls performed their best and peaked at the right time," said Jill Slater, sponsor, of their winning programs. "They reached a goal they had set for themselves."

Mrs. Slater noted that the squad's primary purpose is to support the sports for which they perform, but "competition is an added specialty for them."

Don't call 'em chanters anymore

Soccer, wrestling cheerleaders undergo name, image change

Lots of people have wondered why the chanters this year decided to change their name.

"Because we got tired of having to explain the name 'chanters' to everyone we met, when we do the same things as any other cheerleader," said Michelle Zimmerman, co-captain. "We even go to the same camps as 'cheerleaders,' so why not?"

Mrs. Kim Marlow, sponsor, thought the name change was definitely in order. "The name (chanters) was inferior," she said, "and the change needed to happen."

Mrs. Marlow was another change that happened to the girls this year. As first-year sponsor, she said she really enjoyed it. "I learned a lot through my mistakes," she said.

There must not have been many mistakes, because the girls were unanimous in their having enjoyed working with her. "She keeps the squad organized," said Michelle, "and her personality fit in well with ours." Lisa Rickett said she was "really fun."

Squad captains Michelle Zimmerman and Barbara Medley helped Mrs. Marlow keep the everyone together and put themselves and the other girls through rigorous practice sessions. They, too, participated at a national competition during Christmas break at the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium. They competed against 33 other squads.

"The other teams were good, and intimidation was our worst enemy," said Michelle. "We didn't place in the top ten, but this was a learning experience for us."

Baseball team does better than expected

At the beginning of their season, the varsity baseball team had hoped to finish .500, but did themselves two better with a final record of 10-8.

"As the season progressed, we kept improving," said Coach Don Giannola. "Our younger players matured more quickly than we expected. We should have a real tough team next year."

Many of the team's hopes are pinned on a group of talented freshmen who quickly rose to the varsity ranks. They are Anthony Alvarez, Tony French, and John White. Add to them the pitching prowess of sophomore Chris Heckadon and the Griffins have the makings of a strong team for the next few years.

Despite the high hopes that came with doing better than expected, the Griffins were quickly defeated in post-season action. William Chrisman dashed their play-off hopes with a 8-7 win in the first game of districts. The game was a seesaw affair that found the Griffins down early, but coming back with hot bats to lead late in the game. Then Chrisman pulled it out in the last inning to win by a run.

At the team's awards banquet, senior Mike Hopper received the Most Outstanding Pitcher and Most Valuable Player awards. Senior Chad Gilpin was deemed Outstanding Senior, while juniors Brian Rodgers and Tim Cunningham were called Offensive Player of the Year and Most Improved Ballplayer. Along with the three freshmen, junior Carl Jiabia was singled out for his contributions to the team.

The junior varsity team finished their season with an impressive 8-2 record, including eight straight wins at the beginning of the season. Along with Alvarez, French, and White, junior Aaron Hylton and sophomore Billy Bowles were singled out by Coach Jeff Ward for their performances this season.

The freshman team went 3-6 on the season. At the start, catcher Matt Winship and third baseman Matt Rueckert were noted as outstanding players. Added to that list by the end of the season were outfielder/pitcher Andy Martens, rightfielder Eric Sayles, and first baseman Chad Zimmerman. The loss of three top players to varsity certainly hurt the team, but Coach Terry Stevens blames a higher power. "The number of rain-outs didn't allow us to play to our potential," he said.

Girls keep good attitude despite a tough season

The varsity softball team faced a tough season that ended with a record of 3-15. Returning letterwomen included seniors Pam Warren, Cyndi Thompson, and Nerissa Knappenberger; juniors Stacy Craig and Shelly Waterman; and sophomore Venecia West. Along with them were a lot of girls who had played on the varsity level for the first time.

Pam Warren led the team both at the plate and in the infield. Cyndi Thompson was noted for her strong determination in leftfield, and Venecia West both pitched and served as second leading batter for the team. Maggie McGuire tied with Venecia as second leading batter and finished with a good season behind the plate as the lady Griffins' catcher.

"This has been a learning experience for the girls," said Coach Dennis McClain, who quickly moved several younger players to the varsity level. "They seemed to stumble at times, but they continued to show a good attitude."

"We all worked together and tried our best throughout the season," said Pam Warren. "We had our ups and downs, but we also improved on our weaknesses."

Looking to next year, senior Cyndi Thompson is confident in her younger teammates. "I think the girls will know what to expect next year," she said, "and I know they'll come out on top."

The junior varsity team ended its season with a record of 7-7. Most of the losses they suffered in their .500 season were withing five runs or fewer. Leading the team were: sophomores Carla Miller (catcher), Wendy Maupin (third base), Dawn Ripper (shortstop), Amy Sparks (second base), Mandi Jamis (first base); and juniors Amy Bucher and Michelle Hibberd in the outfield.

The girls proved to have ability and endurance throughout the season, even though a lot of them weren't all that experienced. "We were really good in our togetherness," said Carla Miller. "We played more as a team and there was not one player who dominated the others."

Coach Bill Lindsay congratulated the girls for their excellent attitudes. "Coaching these girls was like having a dream team," he said. "They got along well and didn't put each other's weak spots down. I'd give anything to have a team like them every season."

The freshman team almost ended up .500 with a 5-6 record. There were a lot of girls out this year, a nice switch from prior seasons. Cuts even had to be made. The pre-season competition perhaps sparked in the girls an enthusiasm to learn. "They were eager to learn," said Coach Rhonda Claytor. "They provided me with a season of enjoyment and I hope they all return next year."

Team leaders included Trisha Fangmann, pitcher, as well as Tina Chapin, Mindy Starner and Nicole Vieth.

"Even if we didn't win every game, we had a lot of fun and learned from our mistakes," said Shea LaRocca. "That's what counts."

Varsity tennis players split their season, 8-8, JV goes undefeated

The varsity tennis team finished its 1991 season with a record of 8-8.

Senior Todd Sicks received the Most Valuable Tennis Player award while John DiSalvo was considered to be the most improved varsity player.

During the season, DiSalvo defeated the second-seeded players from Truman and Grandview, while junior Joe Milanowski defeated their number three players. These two players turned in what Coach Joe Wendt called the best performances by the squad.

"In the district tournament, we were the only team that didn't score. The caliber of play was that overwhelming," said Coach Wendt. "It really gives us a level of play to shoot for. We had a pretty decent team, but we were overpowered all season long."

Other players Coach Wendt singled out were junior Bobby Criscione, and sophomores Kenny Vogelbaugh and Tim Taylor, who spent time playing both varsity and junior varsity matches.

And the junior varsity team was a powerful one, ending up with a perfect 16-0 record. Among the outstanding players were juniors Toby Sicks and Brad Mackey, sophomore John Dehaemers, and freshman Kyle Burnfin. Junior Dave Steffens turned out what was perhaps the best JV performance all season when he one the JV singles championship played at the conference tournament.

With seniors injured, young track team picks up the baton

With their two seniors laid up with injuries during the season, the girls track team was young to say the least. Carolyn Hudson was sidelined with a bad ankle, while a knee injury kept Debby Rottinghaus from running this season.

Filling the void were Brandy Maltbia, quarter-mile; Christina Painter, triple jump; Delfina Jimenez, long jump. Throwing the shot and discus were Laurie Haug, Shanna Durbin, Prudence Courtemanche, Dana Maddox and Sheyna Denisar.

At the end-of-season awards banquet, Amy Mitchell was cited as Best Teammate and Most Improved Runner, Brandy Maltbia was Best Runner, Christina Painter, Best Field Event, and Shanna Durbin, Most Improved Field Event.

Since this was such a young group, Coach Diana Brozovich called the season a "rebuilding" one, saying that she was really impressed with the freshmen. "Only two seniors are leaving," she said. "I'm really looking forward to the young girls coming back next year."

Four go to sectionals

Hall suffers broken leg in pole vault attempt

At the sectional track meet in Raytown, May 19, Travis Hall was almost assured of a spot at the state meet in the pole vault--an event he finished seventh in last year at state. But on his first attempt in competition, he pushed off his left foot and his fibula snapped in two. Earlier in the season, he had received a stress fracture that lended itself to this fateful occurrence.

"All I would have needed (to go to state) was to clear 13.0(ft)," said Travis. On his practice runs, he had been clearing 13.6. Certainly a blow, but Travis does have one consolation. He holds the school record in the pole vault.

Other track team members who made it as far as sectionals were: Chris Duer, 110m high hurdles (sixth place); Doug Howard, 300m intermediate hurdles (fifth place); and Terrill Runyan, triple jump and long jump. Runyan made it all the way to sectionals despite being on the sidelines most of the season.

Honors awarded to the track team at this year's banquet were:

- Freshman High Point Man--Alex Zimmerman
- Sophomore High Point Man--Chris Duer
- Junior High Point Man--Bobby Huggins
- Senior High Point Man--Doug Howard
- Overall High Points--Doug Howard
- Most Outstanding Athlete--Travis Hall
- Most Outstanding Thrower--Terry Best

Cross Country

Miller finishes 10th at conference

A small, but dedicated group of runners went out for cross country this year. At the conference meet in Swope Park, the Griffins came in fourth as a team, with Daxon Miller leading the runners with a tenth-place finish. In the freshman race, Tim Drottz placed even better, coming in third.

Daxon's finish was good enough to win him all-conference honors. Other honors the runners received included three all-Northland positions for Daxon, Bobby Huggins and Matt Sparks.

Golfers win only match in sudden death playoff

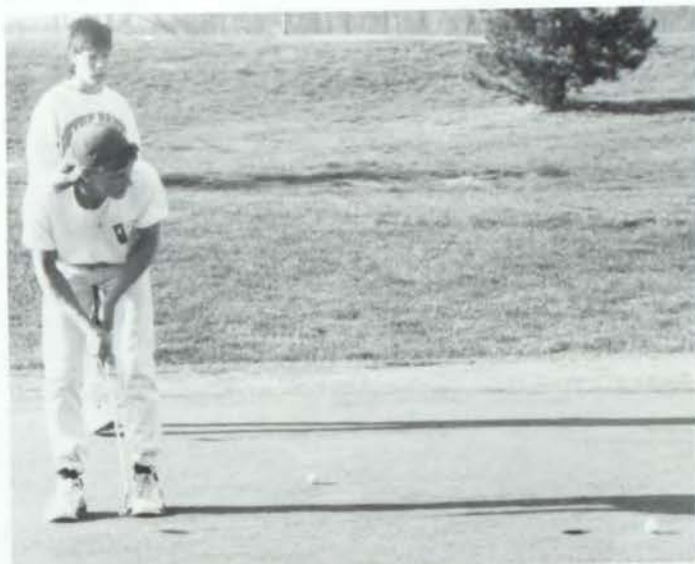

The Winnetonka golf team fared about as well as its football team this year, turning in a scorecard of one win and 11 losses.

The team's only victory came in an exciting sudden death match against Raytown South when freshman Wade McPheeters won on the first playoff hole. McPheeters was medalist with a score of 37.

The team placed third in its division at the conference tournament this year, again with McPheeters taking home a first-place medal with a low score of 85 for 18 holes.

Varsity players, along with McPheeters, included seniors Chris Leas, Bill McKelvey and Jason Wolfe, and junior Mike Schumacher.

Despite the losing record, hopes are high for next year due to having two returning varsity members. "The season didn't go as well as we expected," said Coach James Myers. "I think next year we will be greatly improved. We had good, dedicated golfers this year."

It takes a special kind of person to leave one's family, one's friends, one's language behind for a year only to travel to some distant land and make new ones of each. Such is the plight of four foreign exchange students who found themselves at Winnetonka for the 1990-91 school year.

Katarina Jugovic came to us from Yugoslavia through the American Field Service. She got interested in becoming after she hosted a girl from New Jersey who was an exchange student to Yugoslavia. Prior to her coming here, she had never heard of Kansas City, and her dream was to go to California. Nevertheless, as a result of her stay here, Katarina says she has changed considerably. She has learned to be more positive and to listen closely to others. And she is much more independent. One of the biggest differences she noted was in comparing her school in Yugoslavia to Winnetonka. There, she says, students have to study more, take numerous tests, and it is not as much fun. Here, Katarina says, "school is not only a place to study, but a place where you learn to socialize through many activities and sports."

Germaine Fonseca also came to Winnetonka through the AFS program. As Kansas City was unknown to her in Ecuador, she had hoped to go to Florida. However, she grew to enjoy Kansas City very much. And after a year away from her homeland, she, too, claims to be much more independent. "In Ecuador," said Germaine, "the society is traditional. The schools are strict and so are the rules." She noted that every student there must take a test at the end of the year; if they pass they move on to the next grade. Germaine says she'll miss the dances and sports most of all, because her school does not offer them.

Neri Antepi wanted to come to America through the Education Foundation to Improve her English and to learn of the many things offered in the United States. Just like Katarina and Germaine, she had never heard of Kansas City and thought it was in Texas at first. Some of the biggest differences she found between the United States and her homeland of Germany were the law and the school systems. In Germany, the legal drinking age is 16 and one must be 18 to get a driver's license. As a result, teenagers there ride their bicycles and walk most places. Neri's schoolday in Germany ends at 1:30 everyday with 45 minute classes that only meet every other day. That sounds pretty good to American students until they find out that Neri must also attend school on every second and fourth Saturday. After a year away from home, Neri says she is more grown up and respects her parents more. When she goes home, she will miss our school spirit, dances, and the friends and family she has made here.

Myra Van der Spek, from the Netherlands, made it unanimous, because she too had never heard of Kansas City. (Looks as if our Chamber of Commerce better get a press agent!) Through the Education Foundation, she was able to experience a new culture and become more independent as a result of her stay in Kansas City. She also says she is not as shy as she used to be and is "more open for new things and ideas." High schools in the Netherlands are very different from Winnetonka, according to Myra. There, they have three different levels—a four-year, five-year, and six-year high school. The grades a student receives after his first year determines his length of stay. Also, no elective classes are offered—just the basics. Another interesting comparison Myra makes is, "Americans have everything they want."

The Winnetonka chapter was extremely active this year in many capacities. Early in the year, the club concentrated its efforts on a financial aids assistance program for the college-bound, explaining eligibility requirements, application procedures, and identifying available sources of financial aid.

The highlight of the year came in April when members travelled to a national competition in Denver. The Creative Marketing Project of Sherri Brehm and Stacy Bartholome, one that determined the need for in-school daycare centers, placed in the top ten. A fashion project by Tonya King took fourteenth. Stephanie Brier, Debbie Brown, Jennifer Stewart and Chris Winders also competed at nationals.

Small Y in G group leaves big mark in Jeff City

Amy Groves, Andrea Yonke and Josh Fisher represented the Youth in Government Club at its forty-second annual convention and mock legislature in Jefferson City, March 21-23.

Josh was chairperson for the education committee in House B (made of first-year members). His greatest feat of legislative work came when he petition members for a recall vote on a bill that had legalized prostitution. This was the first time in its 42-year history that a bill had been repealed.

Amy represented Tonka in the model Senate, where she debated bills dealing from when to turn on car lights to stiffening laws on drunk driving.

Andrea, meanwhile, was at home in the press corps where she monitored the judicial branch. At the end of the convention, she was awarded "Outstanding Editor," the highest honor a press corps member can receive. "I was really surprised," said Andrea. "The people who voted for me were the same people I'd been yelling at to get their work finished."

"We were the smallest delegation there," said sponsor Pam Walsh, "yet we had one person take the top honor in her field, and another who set a precedent by repealing a law he felt was unfair. That certainly says a lot about the quality of students at Winnetonka."

Debate

Ad hoc procto hoc, topicality, inherency, solvency, workability. Medical terms, right?

Wrong - for the members of Winnetonka's debate and forensics squad, these are terms used in a normal (and not so normal) debate round.

The team debate topic was RESOLVED: That the United States government should significantly increase space exploration beyond the Earth's mesosphere.

With this resolution, the squad had a fairly successful year. At the Blue Springs Invitational, Mary Snow and Melissa Nation placed third in open competition for team debaters. Also placing in team competition at the Park Hill Winter Invitational was the team of Richie Kane and Andrea Yonke who advanced to semi-finals and placed third overall.

In forensics, Wendy Waggener and Joy Rogers placed with their duet interpretation. Alicia Smith placed high with a dramatic interpretation. At the MSHSAA State Districts, Autumn Palmer advanced to state competition with her humorous interpretation.

National Forensic League officers for the 1990-91 year were president Mary Snow, vice-president Andrea Yonke, treasurer Richie Kane, and public relations officer Lisa Sciolaro.

After 21 years

Winnetonka gets an honor society

For the first time in its 21-year history, Winnetonka this year offered its top students the opportunity to join an honor society. About 95 students responded by turning in applications to Mrs. Peggy Mosbacher and Mrs. Therese Searle. To be eligible for the society, a student must have a GPA of 3.0 or more with all grades of A and B, or a 3.5 with no more than one C per semester. However, if a member gets a C after joining the honor society, he is placed on academic probation for a semester. If he then fails to show improvement, he is rendered ineligible for the society.

The honor society is not simply an honorary club, though. A number of service projects have been worked on, from tutoring students and visiting hospitals to serving refreshments at a conference scholar bowl competition held at school. Society members receive points for each activity in which they participate and for each meeting they attend. After receiving a predetermined number of points, a member then may receive a varsity letter.

"I feel it will enable students to have an active part not only in the school, but also in the community as well," said Mrs. Mosbacher.

The first officers of the honor society, who will serve through next year, are: Becky Hassig, president; Cathy Giovagnoli, vice president; Heather Brown, secretary; Melissa Winship, treasurer; and Kelly Gramse, historian.

The 1990-91 Ecology Club ended its year with one final expedition. On May 19, Mrs. Walsh and her group left for Rocheport, Missouri, at 7 a.m. to walk/ride the beautiful Katy Trail. Those who rode their bikes covered approximately twenty miles. And although the day was dreary, the spirit was sunny.

Students Against Driving Drunk

This year's SADD chapter kept busy at the peak times during the year--namely dances and holidays

To bring awareness to the potential problem, members tied red ribbons to car antennae, placed posters around the school halls, and placed cards of reminder in tuxedo pockets at prom.

IMPACT

The IMPACT program at Winnetonka assists students by promoting wellness and making the school a safe, secure, fun place to learn.

IMPACT offers a number of ways a student can cope with everyday pressures--support groups, one-on-one counseling, and a number of activities throughout the year designed to involve all students in the wellness of the school. Among the groups recruited to help with this program are Peer Helpers, Northland Teen Institute and Hi-Step.

Teens Helping Teens

Formed through the school's affiliation with the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation's Community of Caring program, the Teens Helping Teens club involves itself in a number of worthwhile activities. Among them are a number of Teen Forums, held every year, that give teenagers an outlet for discussing--and therefore, understanding--such topics as teenage sexuality and pregnancy.

A highlight for the group this year was a trip to Washington, D.C. for group leaders Caroline McDaniel, Donnie Bisbee, and sponsor Mrs. Penny Keith. While there, they met at the home of Mrs. Eunice Kennedy Shriver, visited with Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Massachusetts), and saw Community of Caring director Keith Sovereign, former Winnetonka principal.

Griffin Rites staff

In case you were wondering what those wailing noises were all about that emanated from that little room by the west main entrance every third Thursday night, that was the newspaper staff. . . . well, some of them, anyway . . . actually, never more than two of them. Mainly because Mr. Voitenko doesn't like to hear a whole chorus of teeth gnashing.

Despite what sounded and looked like great amounts of pain and torment from those locked inside the newspaper office, a spirit of comraderie and sometimes even professionalism grew as the night wore on. By 10 p.m.-9:30 on good weeks--the paper was finished. The next day at lunch, the exhausted staff members whose faces weren't lying in their lunch trays found the fruits of their labors had been rewarded. There sat most of you, reading The Griffin Rites, laughing or saying, "Hmm," at just the right times.

The staff appreciated your interest and tried to give you stories and editorials that would provoke you and entertain you--editorials on friendship, school caste systems, racism, war; feature stories on dating, driving, dieting; and that ever popular and confusing April Fools Issue.

Odyssey staff

With fewer pages and staff members, the yearbook group got down to business at the beginning of the year, determined to meet their deadlines.

By November, all hope of/talk of meeting deadlines was gone. Still, the staff worked at presenting the student body a collection of memorable sights and stories that was 1990-1991. And it was an exciting year: a new principal, a war in the Persian Gulf, commencement in a new off-campus location. All of these memories, and many more, are wedged inside the cover of this book. Sports, fine arts, dances, clubs--all are represented.

And years from now, when you pick up this book --and you will--please be thankful. Especially to the following people: Student Life Editor--Starr Gehrke, Portraits Editor--Debby Rottinghaus, Clubs Editor--Michelle Zimmerman, Sports Editor--Jennifer Carlile, Photo Editor--Kyle Baker. And a special thanks to Heather Rice, Debbie Rottinghaus and Belinda Maddox, who remained with the book through the summer.

The Odyssey sponsor is Mr. Mark Voitenko.

After one brief year, Tonka's Silver Fox bids fond farewell

Dear Griffins,

You have no idea what this year has meant to the Silver Fox. When I returned a call to Dave Crockett on Saturday morn, August 18, and his first words were, "Dan, how'd you like to run Winnetonka for a while?" I thought he was jesting.

The short of it is that I came to Winnetonka the following Monday morning, and the rest is history. The adjustments I've made from a semi-retired teacher to a Medicare-aged full-time sojourner in the Winnetonka vineyard (figurative, of course), has been one of the most pleasant chapters in my thee score and five years on our spinning planet. I'm glad I was asked, and I'm even happier I came.

Why?

From the first student I met, Della Vantuyl, in Food Barn one August afternoon, to the hundreds of students, teachers, staffers, parents and patrons during the days and weeks that followed, DK has found Winnetonkans fantastic. I've yet to meet a Tonka I haven't liked, and I don't mean that to sound like Will Rogers; I really mean it.

Remember the first day of school when you heard ol' DK's utterings, "You are in tune with WWER (Winnetonka--Where Excellence Reigns!)" as he signed on with what eventually became WWER-TV News? I thought about appropriate "call letters" for more than a week before deciding on those. Guess I was just lucky because that's exactly what I think we are --EXCELLENT!

Remember the first assembly when the ol' man trotted out on the gym floor in red shorts and a WHS shirt and led his first cheer? "I AM SOMEBODY. MY MIND IS A PEARL. WINNER, WINNER, WINNER!" prefaced by his saying, "You may not be a jock or a cheerleader, but you are a winner because we have no losers at Winnetonka. You are somebody!?" I remember.

Remember January 16, the first day we were in school after Desert Storm began the eve before? Remember the first brave flyer who gave his life in that war, Lt. Cmdr. Scott Speicher of Winnetonka High School? I do with sadness.

Remember when the war ended six weeks later, and how happy we all were? You bet!

And remember all the other times during the 1990-91 school year, some glad and some sad? Hopefully, we'll use the bad memories to grow and the glad ones to reminisce in years to come.

You really are SOMEBODY, Ms. and Mr. Griffin!

With robust love,
DK

Retirements

Mr. Richard Eitel

Mr. Eitel retires after 21 years at Winnetonka. One of the founding faculty members, he was here when they opened the doors in March 1971.

To many students, Mr. Eitel is not as familiar as the other assistant principals. As he put it, "I'm the principal who spends most of his time in his office and often only sees the faces who peek in his door." One of his major duties was to put together the master schedule each year, and deal with the conflicts that arose. It's a lot like "putting together a jigsaw puzzle," he said.

As a tribute to Mr. Eitel, a new award will be presented each year in his name to a faculty member who has distinguished extracurricular service to the school. The first recipient was Coach Dan Stanley. "In my mind and memory, I will always be a part of Winnetonka," Mr. Eitel said, "and the Eitel Award will symbolize that."

Mr. Bill Lindsay and Mr. Steve Koon present the Eitel Award at a retirement reception in Mr. Eitel's, Mrs. Keown's, and Mr. Nuernberger's honor.

Mrs. Aylene Keown

After a teaching career that spanned 47 years and six decades, another of Winnetonka's original faculty retires this year. And one could say that Mrs. Keown is retiring at the top of her profession, having this year been awarded the Northland Chamber of Commerce Excellence in Teaching Award.

Mrs. Keown was Winnetonka's first journalism teacher and yearbook sponsor, having sponsored publications at Hutchinson (KS) High School for seventeen years. When she and her husband moved to Kansas City in 1968, she began teaching English at Oak Park High School. Then, when Winnetonka opened, she came here. Now she refers to it as "my school."

"What I always remember about Mrs. Keown is she is a tremendous teacher because she has a big vision of life," says Mrs. Mimi Rainen, who team taught with Mrs. Keown for ten years. "She just has a commanding personality."

Why did she stay in teaching so long? The answer is a simple one. "The kids," said Mrs. Keown. "They're all good kids and they needed a teacher." And the students and teachers she has affected over the years will remember her for an eternity. Including those in Albany, Missouri, who will celebrate their 50-year reunion this summer--the first students Mrs. Keown taught.

Mrs. Keown chats with her husband, Stuart, at a May retirement reception held in honor of the three retirees.

Mr. Marvin Nuernberger

Mr. Nuernberger began his 41-year career in a one-room schoolhouse in Nebraska where he not only taught all eight grades, but also cleaned up and kept the furnace going in the winter. Then he'd go home to work on his parents' farm.

During his years with the NKC district, Mr. Nuernberger has also worn many hats. He has taught both industrial arts and business classes (such as he has done at Winnetonka), as well as having been an assistant principal at three different schools and principal at Eastgate Middle School.

From a one-room school to a modern, urban high school, Mr. Nuernberger must have lots of memories--both good and bad. But he only dwells on the good. "Some of the high points is seeing students able to move on with independence in their work after completing the basic know-how," said Mr. Nuernberger. "I also enjoy returning students--the ones who come back to say hello. It gives me a chance to see how they have grown up."

Mr. Nuernberger (right) gets a handshake of appreciation from Mr. Bill Lindsay at the retirement reception.
